Schlesinger raps Ford

Hints he was sacked for budget objection

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — James R. Schlesinger said he considered President Ford's planned defense budget inadequate and indicated Ford fired him as secretary of defense after he objected.

In his first interview since being fired three weeks ago, Schlesinger said the defense budget being prepared for next fiscal year "was an important issue" in events leading to his ouster.

At the same time, Schlesinger jabbed at Ford's pledge to maintain a defense second to none.

"The military establishment cannot live on rhetoric and sentiment," Schlesinger said in the interview Friday.

"And the real question that we will face is not whether we will have tributes to the concept of America's strength but whether we are going to avoid cutting military strength and defense purchasing power further by additional budget cuts."

Schlesinger said Ford asked him to prepare a fiscal 1977 budget about $10 billion less than Ford originally projected for next year.

Although Ford's new proposal of $107 billion would represent a small dollar increase over the administration request for this year, Schlesinger contended it would turn out to be a net shrinkage of 5 or 6 per cent in actual defense buying power because of inflation.

Schlesinger denied reports that he had reached the point of deciding to quit in protest. But, he added, "there was a question in my mind whether I would be prepared to carry a defense budget to the Hill which I regarded as inadequate."

Apart from strong indications that he and Ford differed on next year's budget, Schlesinger declined to discuss what motivated Ford to fire him.

"As far as I'm concerned, that's all water over the dam," he said. But he sidestepped taking a position on whether he would support Ford for election next year, saying "it's premature for me to get into any political issues."

Schlesinger also said "I would not care to speculate" on reports that he was a victim of intrigue by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger or a power play by Donald Rumsfeld, whom Ford named to replace Schlesinger.

However, Schlesinger acknowledged major differences between

Reagan plans tax alterations

Also eyes change in aid programs

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan plans extensive changes in the nation's taxing system if he is elected president.

Reagan in an interview in Los Angeles also fleshed out his plans to shift responsibility for most of the nation's social programs from the federal government to the states.

However, Reagan was careful to list his ideas as "tentative" and if he puts them into effect it will be done gradually so as to ease the shock.

IN ADDITION Reagan plans to meet with experts in the field of economics and social problems to get their advice on how to implement his ideas.

But the former governor is determined to change the taxing system both to make it more equitable and to spur the development of industry and jobs.

First, Reagan believes that everyone should be able to make a flat minimum without paying any income tax. As an example, a tax-free salary of $10,000 was mentioned.

Then, Reagan thinks that there should be no deductions for the taxes on money made above the ceiling.

In other words a flat percentage tax would be charged and the taxpayer could easily compute that charge. The percentage would be lower than current percentages with deductions.

"It would be like the Lord's way — tithing," he said.

"Finally, Reagan favors a limit on the percentage of tax that could be charged, no matter how high the income.

"This may prove impractical," he said indicating an open mind on the subject.

But he did make it clear that he wants major changes in the tax structure.

HE ALSO attacked business taxes coupled with taxes on those living off stock dividends and being taxed "twice."

Reagan also disliked capital gains taxes, noting that in the early 1940s the AFL called for their abolishment in order to "provide capital for new industries and new jobs."

Reagan feels that if such major social programs as welfare, health, education, and urban affairs are shifted to state and local governments, then the federal tax needs will be reduced. As a result state and local governments can then raise taxes, including income taxes, in order to fund their new responsibilities.

During the next month Reagan will be refining his ideas and proposals with the help of experts in the field.

The experts, however, will be telling Reagan how he can carry out his goals, not setting those goals, the former governor said.

Freedom vowed by Carlos I

Knight News Service

MADRID—Prince Juan Carlos was sworn in as king of Spain Saturday and immediately pledged to be a "moderator" leading the way toward long-awaited freedoms in his divided and troubles country.

The 37-year-old monarch, trained since boyhood to assume the crown and promised it by Generalissimo Francisco Franco six years ago, was sworn in shortly after noon before a joint session of the Cortes (parliament). Speaking in a firm baritone voice, Juan Carlos—who had been acting chief of state since Oct. 30—then delivered an initial address that contained repeated calls for national unity and for change.

Saturday's was the first enthronement of a king in Spain since 1902, when Juan Carlos' gradfather, Alfonso XIII, became king. He abdicated in 1931 in favor of the Second Republic, which in turn was destroyed by Franco in the civil

Carrier JFK, missile cruiser in Mediterranean collision

1 dead, others feared lost

GAETA, Italy (AP) — The U.S. aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy and the cruiser Belknap collided and caught fire Saturday night in the Mediterranean 70 miles east of Sicily.

Navy officials said one man aboard the carrier was known dead and indicated there were other casualties. There are 4,500 crewmen aboard the Kennedy and 350 aboard the Belknap, a missile-carrying ship designed for antisubmarine and antiaircraft warfare.

The two U.S. 6th Fleet warships collided during night flight operations and both caught fire, according to the Pentagon in Washington and a London-based spokesman for the U.S. naval forces in Europe.

THE FIRE on the flight deck of the Kennedy was put out in about 10 minutes but it took about 2½ hours to bring the flames on the Belknap under control.

All fires were completely extinguished, a Pentagon spokesman said just before 7:35 p.m. PST.

"The full extent of casualties is unknown," the Pentagon said. "One man from the John F. Kennedy is known dead. Fires which occurred aboard the Belknap make additional casualties likely."

"Some men were rescued from the water, and the John F. Kennedy and five accompanying U.S. destroyers assisted in search and rescue assistance," said Lt. Cmdr. John Hoshko, a Navy spokesman in London.

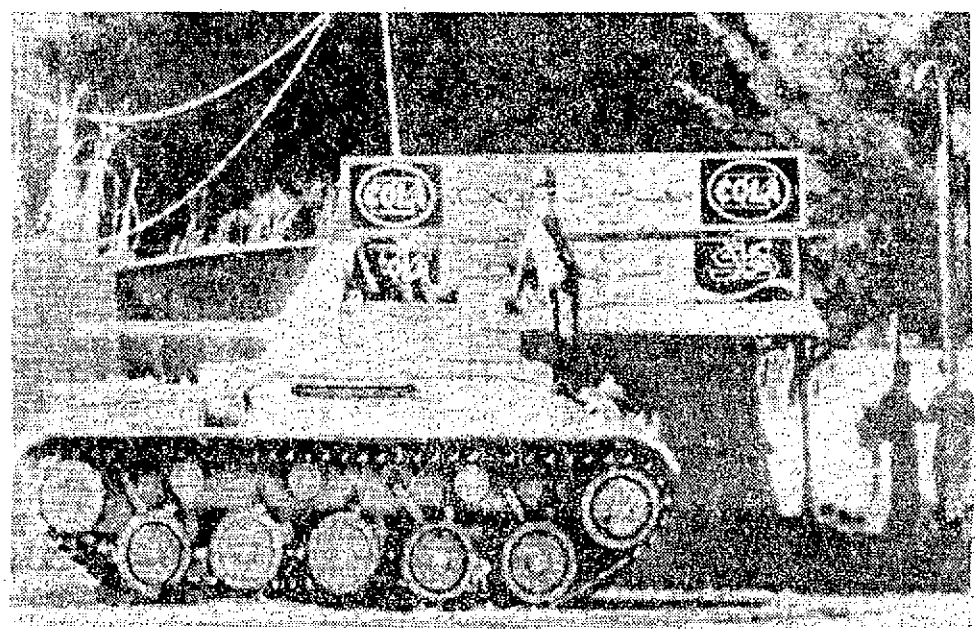

Navy officials said casualties were first taken to the Kennedy and then to the U.S. naval hospital at Sigonella, Sicily. Gaeta is the headquarters for the 6th Fleet.

The U.S. naval hospital at Naples can also help, if needed, the Pentagon said.

The Pentagon said the giant, conventionally powered aircraft carrier "is capable of conducting flight operations."

California riddled Stanford, 48-15, but now must await the outcome of Friday's UCLA-USC battle to see of it gets the remaining Rose Bowl berth.

Oklahoma took care of Nebraska, 35-10, in the Big Eight showdown and will meet Michigan in the Orange Bowl.

JFK probe reopening requested

the Central Intelligence Agency hearings, said he was confident that a new inquiry would not disturb the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald had killed Kennedy and J.D. Tippit, a Dallas police officer.

"The primary reason for this request is that I believe it would greatly contribute toward a rebirth of confidence and trust in government," he said in a prepared statement. Belin issued his announcement on the 12th

Fighting rages in Beirut; 36 dead

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fierce street fighting between Moslem and Christian gunmen raked Beirut on Saturday, leaving at least 36 persons dead, 76 wounded and 150 kidnaped.

The government, after a series of desperate negotiations with rival militia leaders, announced a new cease-fire — the 13th since civil warfare erupted last April. Gunfire and rocket explosions continued to rattle through the deserted streets after the cease-fire was announced.

Premier Rashid Karami warned that his bitterly divided country "is on the brink of total collapse." Karami, a Moslem, told the cease-fire committee that Lebanon faced famine, bankruptcy and massive unemployment.

"If Islam allows murder, then I don't want to be a Moslem," he said. "If Christianity allows killing, then I am against Christianity. We have reached zero level and even slipped below it in every aspect of life."

The renewed fighting that erupted three days ago blistered two-thirds of Beirut.

Gunmen placed an explosive charge in the American University's experimental farm at Mount Lebnon, causing heavy damage and fires, police reported.

"Fighting is getting more vicious and citizens have been advised to move to shelters to avoid rocket fire," a police spokesman said. He added that fire brigades were unable to enter many districts "because gunmen are deliberately harassing them with machine guns and rocket- propelled grenades."

Bands of armed civilians were reported moving through the hotel district near the U.S. Embassy compound, checking identification cards of motorists and pedestrians. Two men led away as prisoners.

In one suburb, police shot and wounded two youths who were in a gang looting deserted shops and homes.

$2,000 reward in robbery-slaying

John Miner, 57, of 1121 E. Third St., was accosted by a masked bandit as he returned to his apartment at 2:20 a.m. on Oct. 19. The man pushed Miner inside and struck him on the head with a heavy instrument.

Leaving Miner unconscious on the floor, the robber fled with an undetermined amount of money.

Miner was hospitalized with extensive head injuries, and died Nov. 13 as a result of the attack. Before his death, however, he described his attacker as a white man 20 to 25 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, of thin build, and wearing dark clothes and gloves.

Soviet newsman blasts Sakharov

Combined News Services

The Kremlin stepped up its campaign against Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov Saturday, with its top TV commentator telling viewers he had received dozens of letters condemning the Nobel laureate's Western supporters.

Addressing himself to those supporters, Yuri Zhukov asked rhetorically: "Do you realize that your hullabaloo on awarding the Nobel Prize to such a person as Sakharov, who openly comes out against detente...discredits your campaign?"

Zhukov's attack, made on his monthly television program, was the latest salvo in the Kremlin's campaign against the dissident physicist, who won the Nobel prize for his championship of human rights.

Holding up a stack of letters, Zhukov read one that said: "Sakharov constantly appeals to the imperialists to interfere in our internal affairs. Such a person is given a peace prize, and the bourgeois propaganda exalts him to the heavens as a democrat and fighter for human rights. Monstrous!"

Zhukov added: "In the West, they are trying to find so-called dissidents in the Soviet Union and extol them in their propaganda, depicting these renegades as the only carriers of our public opinion and even as victims of our system.

"They are trying to preach to us endlessly and depict us in the worst light and blacken our realities. They do not stop at the utmost slander of our country."

Boning up

President Ford got ready Saturday for next week's planned trip to China by reading two thick background volumes sent to the White House by the State Department.

Ford leaves next Saturday, stopping first in Alaska to survey the oil pipeline. He'll be in China Dec. 1 to 5 and will stop in Indonesia, the Philippines and Hawaii on the way home.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ford attended a performance Saturday night of the Moscow State Symphony at the Kennedy Center. Soviet pianist Vladimir Viardo, winner of the 1973 Van Cliburn international piano competition, was the featured performer.

Mrs. Ford joined the Soviet Ambassador and Mrs. Anatoly Dobrynin, Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry A. Kissinger, Van Cliburn and his mother, Mrs. Rildia Cliburn.

Dutch industrialist Tiede Herrema, who endured a five-week kidnaping by Irish guerrillas, is to be feted and made an honorary Irish citizen when he returns to work in Ireland next month.

Herrema is due back Dec. 5 as head of the Dutch-owned Ferenka steel plant at Limerick after a recovery vacation in the Bahamas. He and his wife are to be the second and third foreigners so honored.

Dublin also plans a civic reception for the Herremas.

Amin offer

Ugandan President Idi Amin has offered to mediate in the Rhodesian constitutional crisis in his capacity as current chairman of the 46-nation Organization of African Unity, Uganda radio said Saturday.

The state-run radio in a broadcast monitored in Nairobi, Kenya, said Amin made the offer at a meeting in Kampala with Britain's acting high commissioner in Uganda.

Amin said he was ready to prepare the groundwork for a meeting between Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and leaders of the country's African nationalist movements, the radio said. Amin proposed that such a meeting be held in London.

Garbage

A priest who last month asked his parishioners for offerings of handguns is now asking for their garbage. Rev. Richard Engle, pastor of St. Philip the Apostle Catholic church in Columbus, Ohio, said he made the request to dramatize the concept of "Christ the garbage collector."

The garbage offerings, to be made this evening, are meant to symbolize the "garbage" people carry with them in the form of grudges or bitterness toward others.

Last month, Father Engle asked for offerings of handguns, which were melted into crosses for distributed to legislators and political leaders to show support for gun control.

Dream realized

Comedian Danny Thomas saw another installment of his 35-year-old pledge to St. Jude fulfilled last week when a $10.5-million addition to the children's hospital he helped found was formally opened in Memphis, Tenn.

The seven-story addition to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital doubles the space available for treatment of victims of diseases that once amounted to an early death sentence.

Although thousands of individuals have contributed to the establishment and growth of St. Jude, the hospital and Thomas have become almost a single identity because of the entertainer's support of the institution.

Thomas spearheaded establishment of the hospital 14 years ago to fulfill a 1940 pledge, made at a low point in his career, that if St. Jude helped him, he would establish a children's hospital.

The first corporate executive trainee at Playboy Enterprises, Inc., a staunch feminist, has a familiar name. At 23, Christie Hefner is starting out near the top of the Playboy empire. Her official title is special assistant to the president— her father, Hugh, who suggested the job to her several months ago.

One task will be to cut costs, with an eye on preventing another nosedive in company profits. Before taxes in fiscal year 1975, Playboy profits plummeted from $10.8 million to $2 million, and the company has been having problems for the past three years.

Even though Ms. Hefner has never taken a business course, she said she has "a remarkable faculty for analyzing problems." She said she has no problem reconciling her feminist orientation with the Playboy philosophy, which some women label as chauvinistic.

Playboy "has been a positive force in opening people's minds," she said. "And Playboy came out against repressive sex laws a long time ago and supports freedom of choice in abortion."

Heroin probe

Fugitive financier Robert Vesco and his personal aide Donald Nixon Jr., nephew of the former president, are among the subjects of a federal grand jury investigation in Detroit into a heroin-smuggling operation, according to a subpoena.

The grand jury is involved in a "very delicate, quite explosive and very encompassing" probe of alleged narcotics smuggling," said Alwyn L. "Ike" Eisenhauer, 48, former personal pilot for Vesco who received the subpoena.

Vesco lives in Costa Rica where he sought refuge after being charged by the Security and Exchange Commission with milking Investors Overseas Services of $224 million. At last report, Nixon was also living in Costa Rica.

Resign

President Ford has accepted the resignation of Federal Power Commissioner William L. Springer, who said he is leaving because of health reasons.

Springer said his doctor told him several months ago to ease up on his daily workload, but he had decided to stay on until three commission three vacancies were filled. The third was filled earlier this month, and Springer asked that his resignation be effective Dec. 1.

Kissinger 'reassures' S. Korean

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Korean Foreign Minister Kim Dong-Jo met with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger Saturday and reported afterward that he had been given a reaffirmation of strong U.S. support for his country in the United Nations.

Earlier this week the U.N. General Assembly adopted two conflicting resolutions on South Korea's future. Both would dissolve the U.N. Command set up in 1950 to repel North Korea.

The U.S.-backed resolution called for negotiations among the United States, China, South Korea and North Korea to find alternate arrangements for preserving the Korean armistice. The second, backed by China, the Soviet bloc and the so-called Third World, called for negotiations between the United States and North Korea.

Moynihan 'talk of the world'

New York Times Service

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The office of U.S. delegate Daniel P. Moynihan received many telephone calls and messages from individuals and groups Saturday urging him to stay in office and praising his outspoken stand on international issues.

But delegates from other nations said privately that Moynihan's credibility and usefulness as the U.S. representative had been sapped by controversy over his unconventional style of diplomacy.

Reports that Moynihan had been on the verge of resigning Friday and had been summoned to Washington by President Ford were eagerly discussed by diplomats at U.N. headquarters and around the world.

In Washington, the spokesman for the State Department, Robert Anderson, said that, after consultation with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, he was in a position to dismiss as "utterly preposterous" an allegation that U.S. and British officials colluded in public criticism of Moynihan.

A veritable whispering campaign about Moynihan's methods came into the open last Monday when Britain's delegate, Ivor Richard, in an address to the directors of the United Nations Association, condemned diplomatic posturing in the way of a Wyatt Earp (the lawman-gunfighter of Wild West lore). The target of the jibe was clearly Moynihan.

Richard, in a statement Saturday, described as "nonsense" the suggestion that he had given his speech on Monday "with prior American approval." Richard said his address was a restatement of well-known British attitudes toward the U.N. "and in no way should be construed as a personal attack" on Moynihan.

The statement added that the British ambassador wished "to maintain the closest working relationship" with his U.S. counterpart, and that, if there had been differences in approaches toward the United Nations, "these are differences of tactics, not of aims."

A West European ambassador who did not want to be identified said Saturday that Moynihan's role had been discussed in a meeting of Western delegates last week. There was nearly general criticism of the American's "cowboy fashion," the delegate reported.

"Those most critical of Mr. Moynihan are the Nine," the delegate said, by which he meant the nine-country European Economic Community.

"The Nine say his strategies aren't getting results, and at the United Nations we need results. We are convinced that things can be done, even occasionally through confrontational strategy if it is well coordinated."

The West European delegate said there had been complaints in his group, which was more than willing to collaborate with the United States, that it was not being consulted by Moynihan.

Arab and African delegates expressed their relief Saturday at the prospect that Moynihan might quit his post.

The Arab group at the United Nations generally charges him with having "automatically and uncritically" sided with Israel and with having introduced highly charged and emotional language in his fight against the resolution branding Zionism as "a form of racism and racial discrimination." The resolution was introduced by the delegates of radical Arab governments and Cuba.

African diplomats say Moynihan made an unjustified attack on the Organization of African Unity in a speech in San Francisco on Oct. 3, reproaching it for having elected President Idi Amin of Uganda as chairman of the regional group. In the San Francisco speech, Moynihan also endorsed a description of Uganda's president as a "racist murderer."

Teen-ager reads up storm in wink of eye

Knight News Service

SKOKIE, Ill. — Fourteen-year-old Beth Jaffee of Skokie has reading problems you wouldn't believe.

In school, for instance, her English teacher told the class to read a play. He turned away for a few minutes and, when he looked back, Beth was just sitting there with her hands folded while the other students were straining over the dialogue.

"Beth! Do your work!" he ordered. Poor Beth. She had already done the entire reading assignment in slightly under five minutes and was awaiting further instructions.

A superior speed reader, Beth has a cruising speed of about 5,000 words a minute, with gusts of up to 13,000 words a minute. To put that in perspective, a typical college graduate reads at the rate of 300 words a minute.

A slightly built, dark-haired girl going through the typical adolescent trauma of wearing braces on her teeth, Beth can whiz through and fully comprehend a novel like "Jaws" in about 45 minutes.

SHE IS BOTH a pride and a problem to her family. "We don't buy books for Beth anymore," said her mother, Mrs. Phyllis Jaffe. "At the rate she goes through them, we couldn't afford to. Instead, Beth and I visit the Skokie Public Library both loaded with shopping bags. We pick out a couple of shopping bags worth of books, and then lug them home. That keeps her in reading material for about a week."

A reporter decided that no snip of a girl was going to show him up. On his bookshelf, he had "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom" by T.E. Lawrence. It had been accumulating dust there for several years, and the last time the reporter tried to stumble through it, he couldn't even get one foot up on the first pillar.

SMUGLY, HE handed the book to Beth and said, "Read as much as you can in one minute." She did. Afterward, she agreed that the book was ponderous to say the least. That may have slowed her up. She checked out at 3,750 words a minute and was able to discuss what she had read.

Beth is a product of the Evelyn Wood junior rapid reading program, an eight-week course she began last February.

Her teacher, Mrs. Joyce Wagman, admitted that Beth is her prize pupil. "We can usually get the children up to a reading comprehension of about 1,500 words a minute. Beth's progress has been phenomenal."

"At first, I was skeptical about letting Beth take the course," said her father, Martin, a physical education instructor for the Chicago public schools. "I enjoy reading myself, and I didn't want to deprive my daughter of the joy of reading at a leisurely pace, mulling over certain phrases or thoughts which she might find beautiful. But since she took the course, she reads more than ever, so I guess my fears were groundless."

Beth agrees. "It's a lot more fun to read now that I don't have to devote the time to it that I once did," she said. "And in school it helped a lot, too." Always a bright student, Beth has maintained straight A marks in school. "But now I don't have to put in as much time to doing well as I did before," she added.

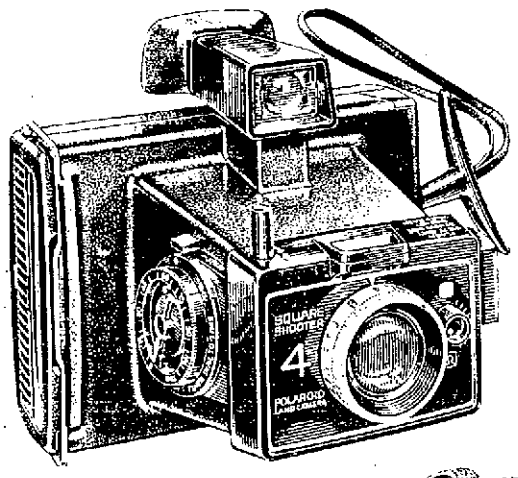

What is she reading now? "A book on psycho-cybernetics," Beth replied. "It's really good."

Do you want a copy of "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom?"

"Gosh, no!" Ah, well. Back to the bookcase for T.E. Lawrence.

Now it's happening to cities

Municipal insurance rates skyrocket

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

It happened to doctors and now it appears to be happening to cities.

Insurance costs are skyrocketing. Premiums have risen as much as 400 per cent in the last year, according to worried city officials.

And, according to Cerritos City Manager Gaylord F. Knapp, "The taxpayer is eating that premium jump."

Knapp is a member of a special League of California Cities' panel looking for a solution to the insurance cost dilemna.

Long Beach pays a $106,500 annual premium for liability insurance on general city operations. But that's for a policy with an unusually high $250,000 deductible clause—in other words, the city pays for all damage suits and other claims totaling less than $250,000.

The city has budgeted another $175,000 for claims it will have to pay because of the deductible, John Williams, a city manager's assistant, said.

The insurance crisis, officials say, began in late 1973 when cities were surprised by the decision of the largest national municipal policy carrier, Pacific Indemnity, to leave the business.

"Apparently the company decided that cities were not the place to make money," said Knapp.

The insurance companies remaining in the field claim they were hit by severe losses in 1974 totaling $2.7 billion. That figure includes a drubbing in their stock market portfolios, said R. Scott Jones, vice president of George A. Richards & Sons. Jones negotiates Long Beach's insurance contracts.

Courts, he added have drastically increased the amounts of damage awards.

"It was unheard of a few years to get awards of $2 million against a city, and now its relatively commonplace," Jones said.

These three jolts were compounded last week when Pacific Coast Insurance, another large carrier, served notice that it too would no longer insure municipalities.

And there appears to be no end in sight. Jones said that in the first half of 1975, insurance companies lost $2.4 billion—nearly equal to the losses for the entire year of 1974.

Cities hit the hardest by the crunch on premiums are full-service cities such as Long Beach, Knapp said.

But communities like Cerritos, which contracts with the county for some services such as police and fire, also have suffered premium jumps from $24,500 in 1974 to $55,500 in 1975.

Lakewood, Bellflower and other contract cities had similiar problems.

Jones pointed out that Long Beach provides other services, such as police helicopters, paramedics, cemeteries, stadiums, gas department, physicians in the health department, marinas, water department, harbor, and the airport which present special insurance problems.

The city does save a considerable amount by using the large deductible and having city attorneys do much of the legal work instead of insurance company lawyers, Jones said.

Knapp expressed skepticism that the rate boosts were justified.

"The premiums have gone up disproportionately compared with the company losses," he said, and added that "we want assurances that the increases are related to insurance losses and not losses on the stock market.

"The remaining companies are being very selective, they're writing very few policies," Jones remarked.

Insurance companies try to collect $2 in profits for every $1 they pay out in claims, Scott said.

Many cities are depending on insurance to solve the problem of predictable losses, when they should be paying for forseeable losses with cash instead of turning in a claim and subsequently having their rates raised, Jones contended.

Long Beach predicts that it will lose about $175,000 annually in small claims and pays those in cash, using the deductible to cut costs, he explained.

Knapp said the California League of Cities is studying several possible solutions, including municipal pooling, where several cities would join together to get lower premium rates.

There also is a possibility that state law could be used to lower the rates or that other cities could follow the Long Beach example and take a high deductible, Knapp said.

New companies looking at cities are using more in-depth analysis," he said.

Error in crash report

A driver's license examiner, injured in a traffic accident that occurred while he was testing a prospective driver, remained in critical condition at Pacific Hospital in Long Beach Saturday.

Hospital officials said there had been little change in the condition of Vincent W. Jones, 62, who was admitted to the facility's intensive care unit following the accident Friday.

It was reported in the Independent, Press-Telegram Saturday that Jones was injured when the driver he was testing, 23-year-old Diane Lynn Davidson, collided with a Long Beach Public Transportation bus that was turning left on Burnett Street at Magnolia Ave.

That account was incorrect. Officers reported the bus was traveling north on Magnolia Avenue when Ms. Davidson, who had been driving south on Magnolia, attempted to turn left onto Burnett Street in front of the oncoming bus.

Investigators said the car was dragged some distance before it and the bus came to rest. Ms. Davidson suffered only minor injuries, and no one on the bus was seriously injured.

Officers said no citations were issued, and the cause of the accident was under investigation.

$200,000 payments

Doctor named in affidavit

A search warrant affidavit filed in Orange County Superior Court alleges that Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr. of Santa Ana has been linked to more than $200,000—including some Medi-Cal funds—paid by two hospitals for supplies they never ordered or received.

The affidavit, filed Friday and based on information supplied by three persons, alleges that the payments were made for invoices which Cella had printed at a shop operated by the hospitals.

The document also alleges that the checks "were cashed or deposited into bank accounts which are either directly or indirectly under the control of Dr. Louis J. Cella."

CELLA IS said to own a large portion of the financial interests for each of the hospitals, Mercy General of Santa Ana and Mission Community in Mission Viejo.

The informants on whose information the affidavit was based were identified as Robert Zunick, controller of Mission Community and former executive controller of Mercy General: Robert Oulette, assistant controller at both hospitals until last August, and Donald A. Ray, who was in charge of the print shop from May 1972 until last Sept. 25.

The affidavit was sworn to by investigator Loren Duchesne of the Orange County district attorney's office.

The search warrant, issued Nov. 13 by Superior Court Judge Jerrold Oliver, authorized examination of certain records and materials at a print shop operated by the hospitals at 3198-C Airport Loop Drive, Costa Mesa.

Investigators reportedly confiscated a boxful of printing material which was used to produce blank invoices in the name of 10 companies, some of them nonexistent.

Accompanying the affidavit were 24 attachments containing copies of invoices, vouchers and canceled checks.

THE CANCELED checks allegedly showed that some of the money was deposited into Cella's bank accounts, while some was deposited into the accounts of various firms.

According to the affidavit, Zunick told Duchesne "that the records of the hospitals show that the items on the above invoices were never ordered by or delivered to the hospitals."

Zunick also alleged, according to the affidavit, that Cella was directly or indirectly paid more than $200,000 on those invoices during the last three years.

Christmas mobile reprinted

Because of popular demand, the do-it-yourself Christmas mobile which appeared in last Sunday's Independent, Press-Telegram has been reprinted today on page R-7. Extra copies of last week's mobile were unavailable to fill the many requests of parents and teachers, so we hope this second printing will satisfy the demand.

Radicals spurned SLA, escapee says

VACAVILLE (AP) — The tiny Symbionese Liberation Army stayed tiny because its revolutionary dream world was largely spurned by the radical community, says a convict once falsely identified as an abductor of Patricia Hearst.

Thero Wheeler, recaptured in Houston, Tex., last July nearly two years after he escaped from prison, described in an interview the SLA's futile search for a wide following and its unsuccessful attempts to recruit him — including once at gunpoint. Despite the most celebrated kidnaping in recent history, the SLA never really amounted to much, he said.

"When I got out, there was no SLA," the 30-year-old convict recalled at the California Medical Facility here. "Donald DeFreeze was in the Bay Area trying to find members, trying to get them to join. But nobody was going for it."

WHEELER had met SLA leader DeFreeze through an inmate organization called the Black Cultural Association. DeFreeze was later transferred to Soledad Prison, from which he escaped.

Six months later, on Aug. 2, 1973, Wheeler, who was serving a term for battery on a police officer, escaped with the aid of what he calls "well-connected" radical acquaintances, but not the SLA. He says he left the prison because he believed he was failing to get proper medical attention for a lingering intestinal inflammation.

Once a member of the now-defunct Maoist Venceremos group, Wheeler said he traveled to New York and Chicago seeking medical attention, then returned to the Bay Area in the fall of 1973.

Radical acquaintances steered him to DeFreeze and several companions — including Nancy Ling Perry, Patricia Soltysik and Willie Wolfe, an outsider who had attended BCA meetings at Vacaville. The four died with SLA comrades Camilla Hall and Angela Atwood in a fiery Los Angeles shootout less than a year later.

"THEY CAME to me trying to find out whether I would help them start an organization," he said. "There were all of five people in it. It was particularly this one dude with an idea, DeFreeze.

"They were living out of books, man," Wheeler said. "They weren't living everyday existence.

"You can't readily equate what you read in books and reality," he went on. "To the people out there, trying to survive takes priority over dreams. He (DeFreeze) wasn't in a real frame of mind; he didn't understand the people he said he wanted to help."

Wheeler said he refused to join the SLA or help recruit because he opposed killing and was preoccupied with getting an operation. He said he saw DeFreeze and other SLA members about five times after his escape and turned them down each time they solicited support.

Wheeler said he fled alone to Houston, Tex., then set up a false identity under the name Bradley Bruce. He underwent two operations and had an electronics job until his capture last July.

"The whole picture surrounding the SLA is wrong — all the articles, assumptions, speculations and probabilities," he said. "They distorted it out of context. I don't think the SLA has ever been important, other than to be a sensation, a story."

Asked whether he believes that Miss Hearst was brainwashed into joining her captors, Wheeler said: "I think it could have been a little of both —coercion and trying to understand the cause—and I think maybe she got confused about what really was happening. I think that a lot of what she did was out of fear" of the SLA at first and later of the FBI.

An FBI spokesman in San Francisco said Wheeler is not wanted in connection with any SLA activities, including the April 1974 bank robbery in which Miss Hearst is charged.

SLA WAS MORE a product of sensational publicity than substance, says recaptured escapee Thero Wheeler. —AP Wirephoto

Besieged suspect gives up

A strongarm robbery suspect who barricaded himself inside his Carmelitos apartment with a high-powered .22 caliber rifle surrendered peacefully Saturday night after a Long Beach police Special Tactics and Rescue team surrounded the building.

Arrested on suspicion of robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and resisting arrest was Henry Gray, 27, of 958½ Via Wanda. A 17-year-old girl who was in the apartment with him was charged with resisting arrest.

THE five-man STAR team, along with other Long Beach units, was called in after Signal Hill police went to Gray's apartment with a warrant for his arrest in connection with a robbery in Signal Hill Saturday morning.

According to Long Beach police Lt. Tony Prutch, the robbery victim, Thomas Henry Jackson, of 2014 Junipero Ave., led Signal Hill police to Gray's apartment about 8:30 p.m..

With the police outside, Jackson, who knew Gray, went into Gray's second-floor apartment and asked for the return of a stereo set and various household items allegedly taken.

THE SUSPECT then put a rifle under Jackson's chin and told him to get out, Prutch said.

After Long Beach reenforcements arrived, police spent about an hour trying to talk the suspect into surrendering, Prutch said.

When police said it was his last chance, Gray came to the front door, pushed the girl out and followed her, according to Prutch.

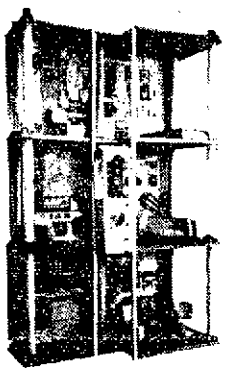

A restless crowd estimated at 200 jeered police as they tried to talk the suspect into surrendering, dispersing only after police declared an unlawful assembly.

New congressional procedures on budget praised

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — New procedures to give the Congress a tighter grip on the federal budget have been a success in their trial year, according to House and Senate Budget Committee chairmen.

Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., head of the House panel, and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, his Senate counterpart, both estimate that the new process has saved $10 billion to $15 billion this year.

The procedures were prescribed in the 1974 Budget Control Act, hailed as one of the most important congressional changes in many years.

Under the law, the new system must be used in 1976 and future years.

But the two budget committees decided to start with it in 1975 on a trial basis, even though there were many unusual headaches, including a record deficit in the current fiscal year budget.

But both Adams and Muskie now think the decision was wise.

"It has been a good learning process, Muskie told a reporter. "The members now have a feel for it and are beginning to realize how important it is.

"I don't see how we could put it into effect next year, with the very tight schedule that will be required, if we didn't have the trial run experience this year."

Conservative senators have not been as happy with the first year results.

Sen. James L. Buckley, Con.-R-N.Y., a member of the Budget Committee, said he was deeply disappointed that the Senate, in adopting the second budget resolution of the year Thursday, simply accepted spending increases that have taken place in the last six months.

Under the 1974 act, Congress will adopt in May each year a resolution fixing ceilings for federal spending and the deficit in the year ahead.

Then, in the fall, a second resolution will be passed revising the congressional budget program in the light of what the legislators have done on appropriations bills, changes in the economic picture, and unexpected boosts, the so-called uncontrollable outlays.

Buckley pointed out that the spending ceiling in the second resolution just passed was $8.6 billion higher than the figure in the measure passed last May, and the deficit was $6 billion higher.

Unless members of Congress can exercise better control than this, "they will serve as little more than bookkeepers adding up the effects of individual spending measures," Buckley said.

However, Muskie said that all of the spending hikes accounted for in the second resolution came in entitlement programs and other items which Congress is powerless to control in the short run.

For example, he said, unemployment compensation payments were up $1.6 billion, Medicare and Medicaid $1.7 billion, losses in housing subsidy programs $900 million, welfare outlays $300 million, farm subsidies $600 million, and veterans' benefits $1.4 billion.

Congress did follow the priorities set out in the first budget resolution in May and did not enact any new spending programs, Muskie emphasized.

If the Budget Committee had tried to make other spending cuts to offset the increases in uncontrollable outlays, it would have run the risk of aborting economic recovery, the senator said.

The figures in the second budget resolution will be binding on Congress for the rest of fiscal 1976, which runs to next June 30, once the House and Senate compromise their differences on the measure.

The conferees on the resolution are expected to meet to work out a compromise as soon as Congress returns Dec. 1 from its Thanksgiving week recess.

Military's pay beats civilians'

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Military personnel whose basic pay has more than doubled in the last decade now are drawing significantly more compensation than their civilian counterparts in the federal government, according to a study by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

A major general, for example, draws $54,713 a year in pay and benefits. That is $13,465 more than received in pay and benefits by a federal employe holding the top civil service grade of GS-18.

The combined pay and benefits for a 1st Lieutenant total $21,729, which is $5,326 more than received by a civilian employe holding a comparable grade (GS-8 or GS-9) in the civil service.

A study comparing military and civilian compensation was contained in the committee's report on this year's defense appropriations bill.

LIKE other congressional committees which have hesitated to provoke the political wrath of the sizeable military community, the Senate committee deliberately refrained from drawing the conclusion that military personnel were better paid than their civilian counterparts in the government. Yet that conclusion was self-evident in tables in the committee report.

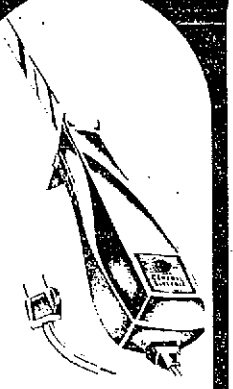

The comparisons showed that from the rank of sergeant up through major general, military personnel were receiving anywhere from $3,610 to $13,465 more in overall compensation and benefits than civilian employes in comparable grades in the civil service. The only military ranks receiving less were privates and corporals, and even there the monetary disadvantage was only about $500 annually.

The committee report suggested that the comparisons undoubtedly would come as a "surprise" to "the majority of military personnel," who, it said, tend to understate their compensation.

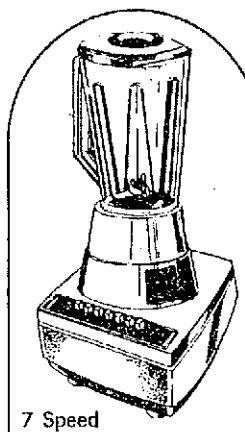

AS the report noted, the tendency among military personnel, when asked about their compensation, is to cite only their basic pay and housing and subsistence allowances and to leave out such other benefits as a free retirement system, free health care, commissary store privileges and government payments to their Social Security accounts.

The additional benefits were included by the Senate committee in making its compensation comparisons, as well as similar but not as extensive benefits given to civilian employes.

Economy, jobs top issues, Demos agree

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Democrats planning their 1976 campaign approach seemed agreed Saturday that economics is the issue which will beat Republicans, but a howling crowd outside said they ought to be thinking more about busing.

Several thousand demonstrators, more than the number of delegates inside at the National Democratic Issues Convention, milled outside in defiance of a demonstration permit which would have kept them at least a block away.

Riot-equipped police cordoned off Louisville Gardens, where Secret Service agents were guarding several Democratic presidential candidates.

But the crowd, after taunting police with a host of American and Confederate flags, and chanting "We Won't Bus," dispersed when three of its leaders were invited inside to sit down and talk it over.

After a huddle with conference leaders and presidential candidate Morris K. Udall, a spokesman for the demonstrators emerged and said, "We're satisfied that someone within the Democratic Party is listening to us."

Although busing has been a lively and volatile issue here since the countywide transfer of students began in September, it had received relatively little mention at the issues conference.

"The party will have to address itself to the busing issue," Udall told a news conference held at the height of the ruckus outside.

Presidential aspirant Lloyd Bentsen, meanwhile, was calling busing "a bankrupt social policy," and declaring it counterproductive to the educational process."

But most of the discussion in official sessions of the three-day meeting of 1,500 to 2,000 delegates centered around economics and seemed to be approaching a consensus that the best way to attack Republicans next year is to promote jobs in a recession economy.

The only disagreement appeared to be over how to proceed, rather than the goal. Udall and Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., spoke for a group wanting focus on a national policy of full employment.

A CROWD of nearly 7,000 persons opposing busing gathers in front of the convention center in Louisville, Ky., where the Democratic National Issues Forum was meeting Saturday.

Giant Louisville protest

Police block antibus throng

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Riot-equipped police turned back thousands of antibusing demonstrators Saturday after the marchers departed from their parade route and converged on a convention center where national Democratic Party leaders were meeting.

Some 200 policemen, several rows deep, cordoned off the street in front of the center and kept back the marchers. The officers held nightsticks across their chests and wore gas masks. Some held fire hoses pointed at the crowd.

Police Chief John Nevin said officers had been told to spray water on the crowd, already shivering in chilly winds and temperatures below 40 degrees, if protesters tried to cross the street to the center. "If the water don't work, we'll use gas," Nevin said.

The crowd dispersed a short time after several antibusing leaders were allowed inside the convention center to speak with Democratic leaders. Mayor Harvey I. Sloane said no injuries were reported and no arrests were made.

An estimated 5,000 to 7,000 demonstrators began the march, which wound through the downtown area, but only a few policemen were visible along the parade route. March leaders said some of the demonstrators were from Boston, the scene of earlier violence because of court-ordered busing to achieve desegregation.

Jack Shore, leader of Union Labor Against Busing, which sponsored the march, estimated the crowd at 7,000.

After a brief rally at the federal building, the demonstrators marched toward Louisville Gardens, the convention center several blocks away where the Democratic National Issues Forum was meeting.

Then, several busloads of riot-equipped police appeared, and some 200 officers disembarked and trotted into formations in front of the convention center.

The crowd shouted at police and waved Confederate flags and antibusing placards for more than an hour, but there were no clashes. After several of the crowd's leaders were invited inside the building to talk with forum issues, most of the demonstrators dispersed.

Louisville area schools were desegragrated in September under a federal court plan which required more than 22,000 pupils to be bused.

Earlier, several hundred black probusing demonstrators marched through downtown Louisville within blocks of the anitbusing demonstration but there were no clashes.

Conyers, protester find way to resolve differences

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Saturday morning, Bill Kellerman was leading angry antibusing marchers as they shouted outside the convention center where the National Democratic Issues Convention was under way.

Saturday afternoon, the automobile plant foreman was engaging in a pleasant dialogue with black Congressman John Conyers, D-Mich., while Democratic presidential candidate Morris Udall looked on.

A phalanx of police had blocked the marchers earlier Saturday, but as Kellerman put it, "someone grabbed my arm and led me inside."

A GROUP of Democrats had invited Kellerman and three other antibusing leaders in for discussions in one of the convention rooms, and it was there that he met Conyers.

"Maybe we have something in common," Conyers said to Kellerman, as they met.

Kellerman explained to Conyers that his people were angry at having school busing for desegregation imposed on them without a chance to explore aternatives.

Conyers suggested an informal exchange of ideas among the busing sides. Kellerman said his door always had been open.

"If you could get your folks to stop saying 'let us at the niggers,' that would help a lot," Conyers said.

HE SAID a Michigan delegate, a white woman, was "scared to death" by shouts from the demonstrators as she emerged from her car.

Kellerman said that "two years ago nobody in that crowd" would have shouted racist slogans, but that constant frustrations had polarized their emotions.

"Do I understand you're against racism?" Conyers asked.

"I most certainly am," Kellerman replied.

"I'm certainly glad to hear that," the congressman said.

Udall, a Democratic House member from Arizona, said he was glad to hear both men discuss the busing problem cordially. "That's what this country needs more of," he said.

Then Conyers and Kellerman parted, with Kellerman saying he'd be happy to have a beer with the congressman later.

In Boston, Richard Laws, spokesman for the antibusing group ROAR — Restore Our Alienated Rights — said about 40 members of ROAR went to Louisville. He said they wanted to meet with busing protesters there to discuss mutual efforts concerning opposition to antibusing action by the Democratic Party and labor leaders.

Earlier this week, AFL-CIO President George Meany met with the president and secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Labor Council. Meany said the council's stand against forced busing was against national AFL-CIO policy and ordered them to change it. A meeting of the state executive board was scheduled Monday to discuss the matter.

Laws said ROAR members have talked to representatives of two presidential candidates and plan to talk to representatives of other candidates.

Belin asks JFK death probe be reopened

anniversary of Kennedy's death in Dallas.

But Belin declined to rule out that a new inquiry might discover a conspiracy involved in the death of Kennedy.

"The Central Intelligence Agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Robert Kennedy in his capacity as attorney general of the United States failed to disclose to the Warren Commission evidence concerning plots to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro," Belin said. He found this "inexcusable."

He also criticized the FBI, which withheld from the Warren Commission a letter Oswald wrote shortly before the Kennedy assassination threatening to blow up a Dallas police station.

THE DECISION to ask for a new inquiry is a reversal for Belin who has steadfastly taken the position that the Warren Commission's findings were final. However, it was while serving on Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller's investigation of the CIA that Belin first learned of the extensive government plots to kill Castro.

He suggested that a congressional investigation should examine "whether or not there is any credible evidence of a foreign conspiracy.

"The Warren Commission found none — but the Warren Commission did not have any information on the CIA assassination plots," he said.

The fact that the extensive plotting against Castro was withheld from the Warren Commission has been the central factor in the growing suspicion of the Warren Commission's conclusions.

Committee effort to hide probe of JFK's life told

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—One of the secrets the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence tried hardest to protect with no success was its own not-so-indiscreet ramblings into the personal life of President John F. Kennedy.

What's more, evidence turned up by committee investigators but not disclosed in public hearings showed that the late director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover, and his agents were delving into it, too, while Kennedy was in the White House.

Perhaps the most sensitive aspect of the committee's recent inquiry into possible CIA assassination plots, especially to some committee members with presidential ambitions, was the discovery of FBI documents detailing Kennedy's association with a woman who had close ties with Mafia figures.

Now fully discounted by the committee as insignificant, FBI documents showed that Kennedy frequently met and communicated with a woman friend of the late Chicago mobster Sam Giancana during the time Giancana and associates were working with the CIA on a plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

The woman, then known as Judith Campbell, now lives in California under another name. She was called before the committee to testify in secret session about her relationship with the president and underworld crime figures.

Ms. Campbell reportedly has given the committee a sworn statement that she never knew of the plot to kill Castro.

Ring buying

I'm interested in buying a diamond solitaire and would like to know what would be a reasonable price for a good quality one or two-carat stone. I'd also like some advice on selecting a reputable jewelry store. T.P.R., Long Beach.

Prices are based on four factors, or four "Cs" - carat weight, clarity, color and cutting, and according to spokesmen in the jewelry industry, you can expect to pay from $2,000 to $5,000 for a high quality one-carat stone, and from $1,500 to $15,000 for a good two-carat stone. They advise you to seek a jeweler from among the more conservative, long established stores. One jeweler suggests that you ask a local banker to recommend a reliable store. Sylvia Porter, syndicated financial columnist, suggests that you avoid a jeweler who tries to sell you a "perfect blue-white diamond," which doesn't exist. The best-colored diamonds have the clearness of tap water— not too blue or yellow. Inferior diamonds sell for much less than the above prices but reputable jewelers consider many of them to be barely of gemstone quality and some sold as jewels, one noted, "should be on the end of a drill." (Nongemstone quality diamonds are widely used on cutting tools.) For help in selecting a diamond, you can get a copy of the free booklet, "Diamond Buying and Care Guide," at some jewelry stores, including C. C. Lewis Jewelry Co., 333 Pine Ave., and Brand Jewelers, 5013 Hazelbrook Ave., Lakewood.

I want to sell my wedding rings but I don't know how to go about it. I have no idea how much they are worth and do not want to be cheated. Can you advise me on this? D.B., Long Beach.

You can get detailed written appraisals of your rings from jewelry appraisers or at many large retail jewelry stores. Normally, a written appraisal should cost about $10 for each item. Then you can wholesale your rings to jewelry stores, or jewelry buyers — after checking with several to get the best price — or you can try to sell them retail through a newspaper classified ad. You will probably get more for your rings if you sell them through an ad, because a store or broker will have to pay you less than the rings are worth in order to make a profit on the resale, according to a local jeweler Action Line contacted. He warned that you shouldn't have a piece of jewelry appraised by someone who also is a potential buyer. "There's a good chance you'll get a pretty low estimate from a jeweler who also wants to buy the piece." You can find appraisers and jewelry buyers listed in the Yellow Pages.

I filed my 1974 income tax return in January, but I still haven't received my refund or my rebate. I've contacted the Internal Revenue Service and filled out three tracers, but they haven't produced any results. The tax form was filed under my married name with my parents' address since that was where I was living at the time. Since then my divorce has become final, and I'm trying to make ends meet on my own. I desperately need this money. Can Action Line help? D.S., Long Beach.

After we contacted the Internal Revenue Service, a check covering your refund and rebate was sent to you. We weren't given any explanation for the delay in issuing your refund.

Tree lights

I am having trouble finding the miniature, nonblinking Christmas tree lights that screw in, not push in. I have about 10 strings of these lights and need white or clear replacement bulbs. Can you help me? Mrs. C.W., Long Beach.

We weren't able to find a retail store that stocks the older model bulbs you need, but you can special order them through Keith Brown, store manager at Sav-On-Drugs Inc., 400 Pine Ave. Action Line also receives frequent requests late in the year for bubble lights. Replacement bulbs are available through Sears Roebuck Co. catalog sales. Nearby Sears stores are at 450 Long Beach Blvd. and in the Los Cerritos Mall in Cerritos.

U.S.-Russ SALT summit seen near

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — United States and Soviet officials, looking for ways of salvaging the talks aimed at limiting strategic arms, are leaving open the possibility of a high level Soviet-American meeting in the next two months to seek a formula for breaking the deadlock in the negotiations.

Although no date or details have been set, interviews this past week with key American officials left an impression that they expected Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to make a trip to Moscow in the near future to confer directly with Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party leader.

Another possibility, considered more remote than a Kissinger-Brezhnev meeting, would be a decision by President Ford to meet with Brezhnev again, for talks similar to those by the two leaders at Vladivostok last November and in Helsinki last summer. Brezhnev may attend a Communist Party congress in Havana late next month, bringing him close enough for a meeting at sea or in Florida.

At a news conference on Nov. 10, Kissinger virtually ruled out a high-level meeting until the Russians produced what he called "a reasoned response" to the most recent American arms limitation proposals, which they had rejected summarily.

At that conference, Kissinger said the talks were in "stagnation." But since then, Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin has met with Kissinger, and other signals have been sent between Moscow and Washington.

As a result, officials now seem to believe the Russians will make a serious proposal that would make a high-level meeting worthwhile.

But the officials all stress that this is in part conjecture and intuition, based on the knowledge that Brezhnev, who is in poor health, would very much like to achieve an arms accord soon.

Soviet diplomats and officials here and in other capitals have been spreading the word in recent weeks that Brezhnev's health has improved and that he would not retire at the 25th Communist Party Congress, which begins Feb. 24 in Moscow.

The Strategic Arms Limitation Talks have been stalemated for some time over handling of two issues that had not arisen when Ford and Brezhnev agreed at Vladivostok on the framework for a new accord.

At Vladivostok, they agreed to set a limit for both sides of 2,400 offensive strategic delivery vehicles — missiles and long-range bombers. Of these 1,320 missiles could have multiple independently targetable warheads, known as MIRVs.

The two sides then began to negotiate what weapons would fall under the 2,400 limit and how to verify compliance. Problems arose when the United States asked the Russians to include a new bomber, known in the West as the Backfire, as a strategic bomber subject to the limit.

The Russians have so far produced about 50 Backfires, and have insisted that they are medium-range and not subject to limitations. The United States says they have the capability of reaching the United States on a one-way mission.

The Soviet Union, in turn, has pressed to include all American cruise missiles with a range of more than 600 kilometers, or 370 miles.

Attempts to save N.Y. hit new snag

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Hamstrung by political differences, the New York Legislature abandoned efforts Saturday to push through $200 million in tax increases for New York City before Monday.

The delay threatened to unravel Gov. Hugh Carey's plan to avoid default by the city next month.

The legislators said they would take up the tax hikes Monday, but Carey said he feared that could be "too late to avert bankruptcy" because the city needs a quick decision from President Ford on whether Ford will support federal aid for the city.

The President said last week he would decide early this week if New York State had taken enough "further steps" to justify federal loan guarantees or other aid for New York City.

The federal aid is crucial to Carey's plan, and the Democratic governor considered the tax increases a gesture of fiscal sacrifice which might impress Washington.

After day-long negotiations Saturday, legislative leaders gave up trying to meet objections of Republicans and black and Puerto Rican Democrats who were holding up action.

Carey had sought Republican votes to bypass the opposition of blacks and Puerto Ricans in the Assembly's Democratic majority.

But Perry Duryea, the minority leader in the lower house, refused to offer any GOP support unless the New York City Council, which already has requested that the state impose the taxes, votes again to enact them. Carey said that was "impossible" because the city charter required 12 days for action, "and by then President Ford will be in China."

The governor, obviously angry, told reporters that "I have no time to play these games. This is the most serious situation in the history of this state."

On Friday, legislative leaders said they had broken a partisan deadlock over a Democratic plan to raise income and commuter taxes and a Republican plan to raise the city's sales tax, which is already 8 cents on the dollar. They compromised on a package of new or increased levies on income, banks, estates, cigarettes, haircuts and massages in the city.

But they held up action until the New York City Council passed a resolution formally requesting the tax increases. By the time the council did so, at 7 a.m. Saturday, two new problems had developed that stood in the way of legislative action.

First, a coalition of black and Puerto Rican legislators refused to support the tax bills unless Carey agreed not to cut welfare programs and to add a black to the Emergency Financial Control Board, the agency through which the state has taken over the city's budget.

Second, Republican legislators began backing off their support for the tax package after White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen declared that Ford had never insisted on new taxes as the price for federal aid to help the city avert default.

tigation. Bagley is stationed in London.

Pentagon officials said fuller information on the number and extent of casualties is not expected to be available until sometime today.

Earlier, the Pentagon said damage to the Belknap was substantial. There was no further information on the specific nature of the damage, nor of damage to the carrier Kennedy.

The Belknap was taken under tow by the U.S. destroyer Bordelon bound for Augusta Bay, Sicily.

Other U.S. naval vessels in the area were the Ricketts, the Hart, the Dale and the Pharris.

A Pentagon spokesman said one Soviet destroyer was in the area at the time of the collision and subsequent rescue operations. He said he did not know how close the destroyer came to the collision scene and he did not know if the Russian vessel offered any help.

RUSSIAN naval vessels customarily observe U.S. naval exercises and other operations in the Mediterranean, as American ships and planes watch Soviet maneuvers.

In Norfolk, Va., families of the captains of the two vessels were advised that the skippers were "all right."

Information reaching the Pentagon indicated the Belknap was off the left side of the carrier when the cruiser's superstructure and the Kennedy's overhanging flight deck collided.

himself and Kissinger on "negotiating strategy in dealing with the Soviet Union" on such matters as strategic nuclear arms limitations, mutual force reductions in Europe and "what kind of leverage we should get out of grain sales and the like."

There was no immediate comment from the White House.

In announcing that he was replacing Schlesinger, Ford had said he was making the change in order to have his own team of officials in the Cabinet. Later, however, the President acknowledged that tensions and disagreements among members of the administration had played a part in his decision.

The former defense secretary was more pointed than in the past in indicating reservations about the framework of a new Strategic Arms Limitation agreement worked out at Vladivostok a year ago by Ford, with Kissinger's advice, and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

"It provided for less arms stability than I would have desired," Schlesinger said. But he conceded "that would have been very difficult to negotiate."

Schlesinger dismissed as "simply false" charges by some critics that he was responsible for the deadlock in follow-up SALT negotiations and that he has tried to undermine detente.

He skirted a direct reply as to whether he and Kissinger ultimately resolved differences on SALT but said that a new U.S. proposal made to Russia last September "was one, by and large, that I could accept."

"It reflected extensive discussions between myself and Secretary Kissinger at the behest of the President," Schlesinger said.

The Russians rejected that U.S. proposal, aimed at breaking an impasse over U.S. demands that Russia's new Backfire bomber and Soviet demands that planned longer range U.S. cruise missiles be included in the limitations on strategic nuclear weapons.

Asked how he assesses prospects for an equitable SALT agreement, Schlesinger said, "I am always hopeful, but the prospects clearly are less favorable than they have been."

"The Soviets have, across the board, become harder in their attitude," he said.

While he stopped short of accusing the Russians of cheating on the first SALT agreement, completed in 1972, Schlesinger said "it is...fairly clear that some of the Soviet actions have been inconsistent with the basic spirit of the agreement."

While refusing to discuss specific details, he did say "there is some question about whether the Soviets have been fully in the spirit of not interfering with the national technical means of verification."

This was an apparent reference to reported efforts by the Russians to jam U.S. electronic and other devices used to monitor Soviet tests of missiles and other hardware related to strategic weaponry. In the 1972 SALT agreement, both the United States and Russia had pledged not make such efforts.

war of the 1930s. Franco declared Spain a kingdom in 1948, but it had to wait 27 years to have a king.

"A free and modern society requires the participation of all in the forums of decision in the information media, in various educational levels, and in the national wealth," Juan Carlos said.

"Making this participation more certain and efficient each day is a community effort and the task of the government."

The new king paid a tribute of "respect and gratitude" to Franco, whose authoritarian rule of Spain ended Thursday with his death at the age of 82.

Divided between saluting the past and hailing the future, Madrid was a city of contrasts Saturday. Its people cheered the king in his uniform of ceremonial commander of the armies and solemnly filed in an unending procession past the body of Franco as it lay in state in the royal palace.

"Occult Medicine Can Save Your Life: A Modern Doctor Looks at Unconventional Healing."

Dr. Shealy, a nationally recognized neurosurgeon, will discuss a number of unconventional aspects of the healing arts, including biofeedback and autogenics (self-suggestion), at a free health information forum at Memorial Hospital Medical Center, Dec. 2

Biofeedback is a process by which a person can learn to control physiological processes formerly thought to be involuntary, using modern electric monitors.

Autogenics or self-suggestion, uses the simple basics of language and thought to achieve control of body processes.

Biofeedback may become one of the major treatments of the future for diseases that until now have been largely uncontrollable. Dr. Shealy reports biofeedback holds real medical promise in correcting disorders as different as asthma, epilepsy, stomach ulcers, migraine headaches, muscle tension, pain and high blood pressure.

Pennsylvanians admire Reagan

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pennsylvania Republican leaders, though committed now to President Ford, look upon California's Ronald Reagan as a legitimate challenger who could become a real threat for the 1976 GOP nomination.

Some of the state's GOP leaders admit admiration for Reagan, but most insist that Ford as the current occupant of the White House has a better chance to beat the Democrats next year, especially in Pennsylvania.

"We need a Republican candidate who can win," says Drew Lewis, the party's unsuccessful candidate for governor last year who is chairman of Ford's Pennsylvania campaign.

"Personally I like Reagan," Lewis told the Associated Press after Reagan's formal announcement that he was actively seeking the presidency. "I have no problems with Reagan (but) I think Ford will be a stronger candidate in Pennsylvania."

Republican State Chairman Richard C. Frame, who also is the minority leader in the state senate, says the party endorsed Ford for a full term last year and there are no plans to drop that support.

Pennsylvania will have 103 delegates to the national convention in Kansas City next summer, with 84 chosen by the voters at the April primary and 19 selected by the state organization.

Voters could show a personal preference for either Ford or Reagan in the primary, although that outcome isn't binding on delegates.

The state's two U.S. Senators, Minority Leader Hugh Scott and Richard S. Schweiker, are both "very strongly" for Ford's nomination.

"I have always believed that the Republican Party has room enough for everybody and that we, as Republicans, should do more to bring people in than to send people out of the party," Scott said in a statement, saying however:

"Candidates should scrupulously avoid divisiveness."

Schweiker says that in a race between Ford and Reagan his support is for the President.

"Although I believe a primary challenge offers a healthy impact on the political process I'm concerned by the interest of the Ford campaign staff in out-Reaganing Reagan," Schweiker says. "Not only do I think such a move is bad for the Republican Party but I think it could backfire for the President in the general election."

Shapp to enter dozen primaries

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp will enter about a dozen state primaries next year in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I don't think we can realistically get into many more. You get stretched too thin," said Shapp's campaign manager, Norval Reece.

Thirty states will have primaries.

Off Late Shows

Film ban OK with Reagan

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press

When Ronald Reagan heard that the Federal Communications Commission had ordered his old movies off the television late shows under the equal time rule, he smiled broadly.

"Somebody must have goofed," the newly announced candidate for the Republican nomination for president said, "because I've made some movies that—if they put them on television—I'd demand equal time."

The equal time ruling means that for the next six months, and possibly for a year, "Bedtime for Bonzo" is effectively banned from American television.

Similarly banned are "Knute Rockne—All American," "King Row," "Cowboy From Brooklyn" and all the rest of the 51 motion pictures Reagan made during his 20-year Hollywood career.

AN FCC official ruled a few hours after Reagan declared his candidacy Thursday for the Republican nomination for president that the FCC equal time rule would be applied to any television station that broadcasts old Reagan movies.

Milton O. Gross, chief of the FCC's fairness and political broadcast branch, said no formal ruling has been made on the Reagan movies but that past experience leaves no doubt they will be covered.

He cited a regulation which requires that any time a station allows one qualified candidate to use its broadcast facilities, it "shall afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station."

Reagan's films date back to 1937, when he broke into Hollywood starring as a sportscaster in "Love Is In The Air." His last movie was "Hellcats of the Navy" in 1957, the only film in which he appeared with his wife, Nancy.

THOSE films have been a regular part of the Late Show fare on stations across the country for two decades, a fact that Reagan often jokes about.

When he was sworn in on Jan. 4, 1967 for the first of his two four-year terms as governor, Reagan turned to then-U.S. Sen. George Murphy, another former actor, and quipped, "Well, here we are on the late show again, George."

Even today, Reagan says he still meets many people who are much more interested in his old movies than in his political career as a spokesman for conservation principles.

"People often ask me what it's like to turn on the late show in a strange city and see yourself in one of your old movies. I tell them it's like suddenly meeting an extra son you didn't know you had," Reagan said.

The old movies have also been a source of jokes by Reagan's political foes.

IN THE 1966 gubernatorial campaign, which Reagan eventually won by made possible by our fabric buy of the year.

Nobody has to tell you the cost of men's suits has continued its dizzying upward spiral. Manufacturers, plagued by rising cost on all fronts, have had to reduce fabric quality while attempting to maintain price lines. The retailer usually can't control these forces and they help dictate the price he must eventually set for the suits he sells. But the 120 stores of The New Bonds control our own manufacturing. We are deeply into the fabric market itself, and our size and nationwide scope gives us considerable buying leverage in that market.

Luxury Fabrics From World Famous Mills Woven For $150 to $200 Suits.

We selected the finest 2-ply all-wool worsteds and worsted blends. The price we obtained was rock bottom. And, it was obtained just before the prices of worsted and wool blend fabrics began their joyless joy ride, upwards. The mills had woven these fabrics for manufacturers whose suits would expect to sell at retail at from $150 to $200. But, the timing of our buy and the unprecedented size of our single purchase made favorable prices possible.

1,200 Football Fields of Fabric. Plaids! Stripes! Solids! Surface Interest!

What was the size of the buy? With 70% of it in worsteds and 30% in worsted blends, the combined yardage would stretch the length of 1,200 football fields and would be used in cutting and sewing tens of thousands of fine men's suits.

Even at Bonds Low Prices, These Suits Would Be $125 to $150.

Managers of Bonds Stores applaud the new suits made of the outstanding fabrics purchased earlier in the year.

The suits we have made from these fabrics have just arrived in our stores, some as recently as last week. The savings we negotiated will be passed on to customers of The New Bonds (while they last). The range of their fashion styling and fabric pattern and texture is wide, affording "something-for-everyone" in nearly every store of The New Bonds. You'll find youthful European models, distinguished Traditional models and strong Contemporary models in both vested and unvested selections.

Wallace would help N.Y. avoid default, if president

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace said Saturday night that he would not rule out federal assistance to prevent financial default in New York City if he were president.

Wallace, in Wilmington to address the North Carolina Jaycees, said that "the politic thing to say is 'let them go,' but the responsible thing is to take into account the consequences of a default in the financial capital of the world."

Speaking to reporters with a cigar clenched between his teeth, Wallace said he felt any aid to New York City should be subject to the city government doing all it can to get its house in order.

"They're just going to have to do the best they can before folks in other states help them. They've got to get back to the work ethic."

Wallace said he was not prepared to discuss details of how and when aid should be tendered to the city.

He said his trip to Western Europe had convinced him that a default would have worldwide financial implications as well as affecting bond sales in the United States. "I have mixed feelings about it (default), but it would not be good to see them default."

Late Show ban OK with Reagan

one million votes, incumbent Democrat Edmund G. "Pat" Brown somehow obtained a print of "Bedtime for Bonzo," in which Reagan costarred with a chimpanzee.

Brown delighted in showing the film—which Reagan concedes was not one of his best—to news reporters traveling with his campaign.

In recent years, Reagan has grown more tolerant of jokes about his acting days. But early in his California political career, Reagan bristled at suggestions that he had been a second-rate actor, and at jokes that he never got the girl in his movies.

Reagan did play the second lead in a number of films, including "Santa Fe Trail" and "Desperate Journey" with Errol Flynn, "Dark Victory" with Humphrey Bogart and "Submarine D-1" with Pat O'Brien.

And Reagan also starred in some films that he concedes were second rate and worse.

"THE studio didn't want them good. It wanted them Thursday," he now says of those old "B" lot, or second feature films.

But Reagan, now 64, also made several films in which he won acclaim from critics as a major star and serious actor.

In 1940, in one of his best known roles, Reagan played Notre Dame football star George Gipp in "Knute Rockne—All American." It was that film that helped immortalize the line Rockne delivers to the team in its final game to go out and "win one for the Gipper."

Two years later, in what was generally regarded as his best motion picture, "King's Row," Reagan played Drake McHugh, a small town playboy whose legs are amputated by a surgeon who is angered by Reagan's romance with his daughter.

In the most dramatic scene in that film, Reagan awoke after the surgery, looked down at his body and cried, "Where's the rest of me?"

REAGAN later used that line as the title of his 1965 autobiography.

But that drama was a far cry from the contrived sight gags of "Bedtime for Bonzo," an improbable plot in which Reagan plays a college professor who attempts to raise a chimpanzee in his home like a child, or "The Girl From Jones Beach," in which Reagan woos and wins 12 leading ladies.

The equal time rule, which makes it impractical for stations to air any more Reagan films so long as he is a candidate, also applies to reruns of his television show of 1962-1965, "Death Valley Days."

Of more immediate consequence, it also had the effect of canceling Reagan's daily political commentary radio show, "Viewpoint."

Reagan was replaced last week on that show—now broadcast by 320 stations nationwide—by a series of other conservative guest hosts led by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Julie Nixon Eisenhower.

FCC officials say the equal time rule applies to all broadcasts except news shows, and only so long as Reagan is a candidate.

Hannaford sees Ford 'turnaround' on N.Y.

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, said President Ford's "simplistic" denial of aid to New York City has mislead Americans from elsewhere in the nation into an almost unanimous letter-writing response of agreement. But he predicted a turnaround by both the President and the public.

In a talk for the Third Friday Forum at the Edgewater Hyatt House Hannaford said it is the denial which will be costly in an "upward pressure on interest rates imperiling our fragile economic recovery"; in a deleterious effect on bond markets already being felt and in direct costs of funding essential services for New York City, estimated to be $2.5 billion the first year.

Hannaford said legislation out of his Banking and Currency Committee would "exact the necessary kind of management" from New York and "would not cost anything.'"

He said the people will come to understand this position and even the President is "slowly turning around" on the issue. However, Ford was adamantly against the loan guarantee bill last week. Hannaford called the bill "tough, tight and economical" and expressed hope it could be revived before Dec. 12, which New York Gov. Hugh Carey has set as the deadline for refinancing the city's debts backed up by federal loan guarantees.

Gun controls rise worldwide — doubts told

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press

The day came this past July for the people of Italy to register their pistols and rifles and turn in any "arms of war" listed in the country's new gun control law. The police were not ready for what they saw.

Reported for the first time were 153,839 handguns, 171,097 rifles and shotguns, and 154,821 sabers, daggers, bayonets and scimitars.

Handed to authorities were 12,487 machine guns, submachine guns, and army shotguns and pistols, along with 232,129 cartridges, 18 cannons, mortars and grenade launchers, and about 500 pounds of explosives.

The new law, directed at growing political violence and armed robberies that had jumped 27.6 per cent in a year, also banned the carrying in public of clubs, sticks, bars, chains, slings, bolts and "any other object that in view of the circumstances of time and place can clearly be used to harm people."

Italy had joined the growing club of nations that control guns. From Brazil to France to the Soviet Union, the trend is toward more restrictions on who can own firearms and how and when they can be used. Some governements say that restrictions reduce crime.

Even in the United States, one of the last nations with largely unrestricted gun ownership, control legislation is being examined seriously in congressional committees despite a strong progun lobby.

BELGIUM ALSO HAS a strong gun lobby, which is credited with blocking government efforts since 1970 to strengthen a 1933 gun control law.

Several bills to restrict gun sales in Brazil are moving through the legislative process, including one by legislator Edgar Martins to require a "psychotechnical" exam for a permit to carry a gun.

"Every day there are more armed criminals, and the guns used by those enemies of society generally come from those who get them without emotional and technical qualifications," Martins said.

In France, where nearly half of all homicides last year involved guns, officials are less concerned about legal gun sales than they are about gun thefts and smugglings.

"The sales of arms are not the main problem for us to curb crime," an interior ministry official said. "Arms are used either by gangsters and other underworld people who smuggle them from neighboring countries, or by ordinary citizens who use their hunting guns in crimes of passion. To forbid the manufacture and sale of arms to prevent crime would be as absurd as forbidding the making and selling of cars to prevent road accidents."

Government press reports in Russia, where handguns are rare but hunting guns can be bought with approval, indicate Soviet concern.

"Something is wrong if a person can buy a hunting gun and not register it," the government newspaper Izvestia said in a February article. "In the last 18 months, 7,000 unregistered hunting guns have been discovered in the (White Russian) Republic."

GUN CONTROL PROPOSALS before the U.S. Congress would set stringent registration procedures but allow ownership for most law-abiding, mentally competent adults. The laws of many nations, however, seek to limit ownership to certain classes of people or ban it altogether.

In Sweden, for instance, permission to buy and carry weapons is granted only to those who can prove they are members of the Swedish Sportsmen's Association, shooting and rifle clubs, or the Swedish Central Federation for Voluntary Military Training.

Sweden's law was amended last year to lengthen prison terms for violators and add new qualifications for hunters. That may help explain a slight downturn in the number of crimes involving guns.

Singapore's law is more exacting. "Private citizens are totally discouraged from owning guns," an official said. "Penalties are severe and it is very difficult to buy or sell guns."

The situation is similar in South Korea, where even legitimate owners of guns must leave them in police custody when they are not being used for hunting. "South Korea has a very strict gun control law and it is unthinkable for ordinary Koreans or subversive domestic elements to acquire guns," a police spokesman said.

It is difficult to measure the effectiveness of gun control laws in reducing crime, because many governments either don't compile statistics on gun-related crimes or refuse to reveal them. But there are indications that the laws are working in some countries.

"I think our gun control system is very effective," a government official in Hong Kong said. "There have been only three homicides attributed to guns this year and only one in 1974."

IN WEST GERMANY, the federal crime agency says it is difficult to statistically trace the effects of a 1973 gun control law. But the number of crimes in which guns were fired dropped from 10,487 in that year to 8,081 in 1974.

Singapore police won't release homicide figures, but a police source said "armed robberies have declined sharply since the imposition of the death sentence on accomplices who do not even possess a gun."

The clamp of martial law on the Philippines in 1972, under which more than 600,000 guns were seized and others licensed, is credited with a marked reduction in crimes committed with weapons there.

"Before martial law, roughly 80 per cent of the crimes countrywide were committed with the use of firearms," Col. Reynaldo San Gabriel of the Philippine Constabulary said. "After the imposition of martial law, the figure went to 25 per cent."

Similarly, there has been an 80 per cent drop in armed robberies in Uruguay since April 1972, when the military began controlling the circulation and use of weapons, primarily for political reasons.

In other nations, however, where guns have not been a problem or where war and political unrest are frequent, there is little current effort at gun control.

Open Watergate files, says Abzug

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., has requested that files and records of the Watergate special prosecutor's office be made public under the Freedom of Information Act.

Rep. Abzug, chairwoman of a House Government Operations subcommittee on government information and individual rights, made the request in a letter to Special Prosecutor Charles F. Ruff.

She also urged that any portions of the files which remain confidential should be given to the National Archives.

In a statement, Rep. Abzug said the special prosecutor's recently issued report fails to disclose additional information about matters including the ITT dealings, the 18½-minute White House tape gap and investigations into C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

"Much of the information held by the special prosecutor can and should be made public without violating the spirit or letter of the laws dealing with freedom of information and privacy," she said. "The people need the facts."

Most states are keeping out of the red

BY ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press

Despite hard times, fiscal safeguards enacted years ago are working well enough to keep most of America's state governments well ahead of their debt obligations.

A few states in the Northeast have encountered severe financial problems as the recession has cut down on tax revenues while contributing to the number of people eligible for welfare, unemployment benefits and other costly state services.

But an Associated Press survey shows that in most of the country a conservative pay-as-you-go approach to government spending has prevented financial discomforts from becoming the sort of financial crises that have beset New York's city and state governments.

Pay-as-you-go is a tenet of the constitutions of 35 states; they require the governors and legislatures to cut spending rather than incur deficits to pay for operating expenses.

All states allow borrowing by means of bond sales for long-term capital projects such as highways and buildings. The majority, however, have erected barriers that effectively prevent their governments from getting too far into debt.

North Carolina is an example of a state that feels its traditional policy of fiscal conservatism is paying off. Despite having one of the lowest per capita incomes in the nation, it has a credit rating of AAA, the highest granted by the Wall Street rating firms.

North Carolina has indeed felt the recession's impact. Layoffs in the textile and furniture industries have pushed unemployment above 10 per cent for most of the year. And, like most other states, North Carolina depends heavily on sales and income taxes. When people are out of work, they buy and earn less. State revenues go down.

So the state legislature faced a novel problem this year. For 10 years, inflation had made budgeting a matter of how to spend surplus money, the result of revenues that had increased faster than operating costs. This year, however, costs outpaced income, and the legislature was forced by the constitution to forego some programs. A cost-of-living pay raise for teachers and state employes was postponed indefinitely. Other services could be cut if revenues do not improve. A freeze on hiring is now under discussion, along with a delay on capital improvement projects.

Despite the crunch, the state was judged healthy by bond investors when it sold some previously approved water pollution bonds in June. It paid an interest rate of 3.6 per cent, well below the prevailing market rate for municipals, now averaging almost 5 per cent but going as high as 11 per cent for New York State's short-term notes.

North Carolina, where the voters must approve any bond issue, has built up a state debt of $458 million. Debt service requires only 2 per cent of the state's revenue each year.

The percentage of revenue required to service existing debt is a key indicator of a state's health for bond analysts, who look askance at a state which must devote more than 10 per cent of its revenues to retiring bonds.

Across the country, state debt loads vary. All bonds floated by Texas, for example, are self-liquidating, paid off automatically from designated revenues, such as university dormitory rents. California devotes 2.1 per cent of its revenues to debt. Pennsylvania pays about 4.4 per cent. Massachusetts is about 8 per cent. At the other end of the spectrum, Vermont and Connecticut each pay 15 per cent. New York pays about 12 per cent, including the debt service of independent state agencies.

Many states with favorable debt loads have been blessed by factors unrelated to their fiscal conservatism. In largely rural states like Arizona, Tennessee, South Dakota and to a lesser extent North Carolina, agriculture provides a healthy economic base. The major cities are newer and smaller than in the Northeast industrial belt. They have not been surrounded by suburban communities that debilitate the tax base of the central city and force it to depend on state government for financial aid.

In North Carolina, the major cities have suburban areas within the cities' limits, so these areas contribute to city revenue.

Such healthy states usually do not have the welfare loads of a state like Massachusetts. Arizona's total welfare cost, for example, comes to less than $50 a year for each person in the state, while in Massachusetts the per capita figure is nearly $200 and in New York over $200.

North Carolina's crusty treasurer, Edwin Gill, put it this way: "North Carolina is not a wealthy state like New York. We have had to be financially conservative and responsible to insure that we'd be able to do anything for our people."

Gill, 76, was a legislator in 1929 when the Great Depression pushed many state and local governments to the brink of bankruptcy. North Carolina survived, despite the fact that the 1930s were a time of deflation, when debts grew relatively larger. In inflationary times, they grow relatively smaller.

Gill emerged from that experience committed for life to a philosophy he calls prudent. "You don't obligate yourself to more debt than you can expect to be able to pay," he says.

Of course, the fiscally conservative states do not enjoy the pinch that is requiring most of them now to cut spending to match revenues.

From 1967 to 1974, North Carolina's payroll grew by 24 per cent to pay for more teachers, mental hospital attendants and police.

During that period, state and local government employment across the nation rose 28 per cent, according to a study by the Joint Congressional Economic Committee. In the same period, federal employment rose 6 per cent and private employ-

Meeting set in bid to end school strike

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Negotiators planned a meeting today to try to end the two-week-long teachers' strike in time to open schools Monday.

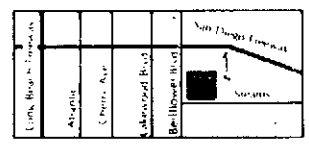

Ninety teachers remained in jail where they were ordered to stay until the strike was over.

Schools were open for the city's 20,000 pupils during most of the strike. But school officials ordered schools closed Thursday and Friday in an effort to break an impasse.

In the past year, however, the revenue surpluses that fueled the expansion have diminished. In total, the congressional committee found, they shrank from $6.5 billion to $3.9 billion. In the 20 states with the highest unemployment rates, they dropped to practically nothing — a total of $800 million.

In Illinois, for example, Gov. Daniel Walker had to cut $330 million from his budget for the current fiscal year to avoid a deficit. The state's revenues are stretched so tightly that it has developed a cash flow problem and has been forced to postpone payment of some bills until the revenues have become available.

Massachusetts has a $400 million deficit in this fiscal year, 14 per cent of the budget, and Gov. Michael Dukakis has asked the legislature to increase taxes and cut spending, mostly for social services and higher education, to eliminate the deficit.

In the last fiscal year, only Massachusetts and Connecticut actually closed the books in July with deficits: $70 million in Connecticut and $450 million in Massachusetts. The other states, despite declining revenues and rising costs, managed to balance their budgets. And a few, like Texas, had big surpluses because of the tax revenues from booming energy and agricultural industries. The Texas surplus was nearly $1 billion. School aid was increased $700 million.

But even Texas feels the pinch when it tries to sell bonds. Since they are tax free, state bonds have always sold for low interest rates. Ten years ago, the average rate was 3 per cent, nearly two percentage points below the current average.

John K. Pfeiffer, vice president in charge of bond rating for Standard and Poor's of New York, says he's received visits from 10 state governors in recent months. Each tried to persuade him that his state deserved a high credit rating, despite the New York City crisis.

The rising interest rates have helped to trap several Northeastern states in a cycle of debt they are now struggling to break. These states have been the hardest hit because of high unemployment. They import much of their food and energy. Most have decaying inner cities that place severe demands on state governments.

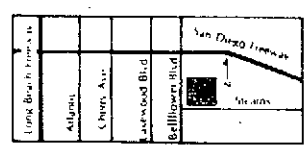

In addition, the Northeastern states are those which have the lowest debt barriers built into their statutes and state constitutions.

Officials in Northeastern states are incensed that their budgets bear the burden of welfare recipients who often come from places like North Carolina, where payments are lower.

L.B. outcry spurs FEA oil price review

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a result of Long Beach protests, Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb has agreed to review his rejection of a request for price increases on California crude oil, an FEA spokesman said Saturday.

The review will be made at a meeting Dec. 4 with members of the California congressional delegation.

The spokesman said the request had been rejected on grounds that granting an increase would amount to special treatment for the state.

He said that after analyzing evidence on the request by the California State Lands Commission, Zarb decided "there was no substantive argument for making the change" affecting controlled prices for so-called old oil in California.

However, Rep. Mark W. Hannaford, D-Long Beach, charged that the decision was "a shocking betrayal of California taxpayers which will cost the state of California $200 million in lost revenues annually."

Hannaford, whose district includes oil wells on state-owned tidelands, asserted that unless the price increases are granted "it will be no longer economically feasible to continue production at many wells."

He said the FEA decision "will hamper the efforts of California independent oil producers to compete with the major oil companies who have their own wells."

The Lands Commission had asked the FEA for price hikes which would narrow the current differential between California old oil, averaging $4.21 a barrel, and the national average price of $5.25 a barrel.

The designation "old oil" applies to oil from wells drilled before 1973, up to the amount produced by those same wells during corresponding months in 1972. Other domestic oil is now free from federal controls.

California oil prices have been lower than the nationwide average because the oil is heavier and had been more costly to refine than other oils. However, state officials contend that new techniques have been developed to make refining California oil less costly.

The FEA spokesman said Zarb had decided that "an upward adjustment of the differential cannot now be justified."

"Although the FEA fully recognizes the necessity for new price incentives to maintain old oil production at or above current levels, it finds no reason to believe that greater incentives are needed in California than in the rest of the nation," he said.

The spokesman said there was no "particular inequity" affecting California oil and "no evidence to believe that production costs have increased there more rapidly than elsewhere in the United States."

Buttocks stuck, jury swayed, bus line pays

OAKLAND (AP) — A jury has awarded $4,300 to a woman bus passenger who claimed her posterior became stuck in the restroom window when the bus swerved.

An Oakland-Piedmont Municipal Court jury made the award Friday to Eula Wright, 47, of Berkeley after a psychiatrist claimed she suffered emotional distress.

Ms. Wright told the court the incident occurred when she was returning by Greyhound bus May 3, 1974 after visiting her son at Fort Ord military base near Monterey.

While she was inside the bus restroom and fully clothed, she said, the bus swerved causing her buttocks to pop out the emergency window and become lodged outside.

The plaintiff said she freed herself after several minutes.

Judge Klein tells NOW courts discriminate against women

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Joan Dempsey Klein criticized her profession Saturday for prolonging what she called sexually discriminatory laws.

"Since the beginnings of this nation, judges, 99 per cent of whom are males, have utilized generalizations and stereotyping about men and women in their reasoning to prolong the existence of blatantly sexually discriminatory laws," Mrs. Klein told delegates to the fourth annual convention of the California branch of the National Organization for Women (NOW) in Los Angeles. The feminist group is holding two days of meetings.

"Such generalities as all women are weak, fragile, emotionally unstable, shy and retiring, passive, unable to handle money matters nor make decisions, dependent, and akin to children in their need for care, play an all-too-frequent and large part in the collective American male thinking process," the jurist said.

Mrs. Klein urged delegates to work for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, which has been ratified by 34 of the required 38 states.

"Whether ratification becomes a reality by 1979 will depend on the pressures exerted upon legislators in those state where the issue is pending," she said.

Mrs. Klein called opponents of the proposed 27th Amendment "well-financed, aggressive and articulate, if oftentimes misinformed factually."

Mrs. Klein said passage of the ERA was needed to correct discrimination in all areas of the law.

"It is not only in employment that sexually discriminatory laws abound," she said. "An examination of laws relating to credit, housing, education, sports, the military, marital and criminal legislation, etc., disclose the same faulty logic being used to justify different treatment of the sexes."

Delegates will elect officers for the coming year and adopt resolutions today.

Court ruling called threat to state's timber supply

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California may run short of timber if a federal court ruling banning the clear-cutting of trees in national forests is extended to the state, says a federal forestry official.

Ted Koskella, the U.S. Forest Service official in charge of resources in California, said in an interview that the ruling could cut timber production from national forests in the state by as much as 60 per cent.

"We'd have to completely rethink our timber management plans," Koskella said.

One timber industry official said the ruling could prompt companies to strip private lands of their trees to make up for the loss of wood from national forests.

THE RULING in August stemmed from a suit brought in West Virginia by several conservation groups. It is not being applied in Western states, but it could be if a similar suit is brought and upheld.

A federal appeals court ruled that both clear-cutting and thinning in the Monongahela National Forest in West Virginia violated the 1897 federal law which established the national forest system.

Clear-cutting is removing all trees in an area. Thinning means cutting selected trees, including young ones, in crowded areas. Both are common logging practices.

The court said clear-cutting violated a rule that national forest trees must be marked before being cut for sale, and thinning violated other restrictions.

THE SIERRA Club, one of the groups that brought the suit, said in its newsletter that the ruling meant "the Forest Service will have to give up tree farming and go back to practicing forestry."

Officials say national forests hold about half California's commercial timber and yield about two-fifths of its lumber.

George Craig of the Western Timber Association, a group of companies that buy timber from national forests, says those forests yield 2 billion board-feet of lumber a year in the state.

Harris: Ford on defense

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Pollster Louis Harris said Saturday it appeared President Ford was running scared because of Ronald Reagan's entry into the 1976 Republican presidential nomination race.

"The acrid smell of fear seems to come out of Mr. Ford in terms of Ronald Reagan," said Harris, who shared a panel discussion on the coming campaign with National GOP Chairman Mary Louise Smith at the conclusion of the National Republican Governors Association winter conference.

Mrs. Smith cautioned against divisiveness within the party which could jeopardize the GOP's chances of retaining the White House next year.

"The defensive posture of Ford politics has done more to make this a much closer contest than it probably normally would be," Harris said, noting it was unusual for an incumbent president to face a serious challenge within his own party.

HE SAID the Ford reaction to the Reagan campaign was building public support for Reagan by making him look stronger than he might be.

"It is my judgment that Ronald Reagan has been helped more in his challenge to President Ford by President Ford's attitude toward Ronald Reagan than by anything Ronald Reagan has done."

Louie Nunn, former Kentucky governor now serving as one of Reagan's strategists, said supporters of Ford had coerced nine of the 12 governors attending the conference to sign a letter backing Ford's bid.

He said the Ford strategists had raised the spectrum of pet programs such as federal revenue sharing going down the drain if Ford isn't elected next year.

Howard "Bo" Callaway, Ford's campaign director, denied this allegation, saying most of the governors supported Ford before they came here.

CALLAWAY agreed that Reagan presented a strong challenge for Ford, but said the President "has the respect of the American people" and will end Reagan's bid early by beating him in the first three primaries next year.

The letter signed by the nine of the 13 GOP governors — one wasn't here and three abstained from signing — was finalized Saturday for sending to Ford.

Govs. Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia, James B. Edwards of South Carolina and Meldrim Thomson Jr. of New Hampshire didn't sign, and Gov. James A. Rhodes of Ohio didn't attend.

Moore assumed chairmanship of the GOP governors group Saturday and said in that leadership position he didn't feel it proper to sign the letter, although he has stated his support for Ford. Edwards and Thomson are Reagan supporters.

Categorical grants rapped by governors

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The National Republican Governors' Association adopted only one resolution before concluding its winter conference on Saturday, calling for elimination of categorical federal grants and substituting block grants for them.

CIA bid to woo minorities hit

New York Times Service

SAN DIEGO — The CIA's renewed efforts to recruit blacks and other minority students at large universities has led to protest rallies and picket lines on three campuses of the University of California.

Faculty members joined student demonstrators this past week in San Diego, Los Angeles and Berkeley, demanding not only expulsion of on-campus agency recruiters but also "full disclosure and immediate cancellation of all other associations" with the agency.

The intensified recruiting of minority students for foreign intelligence work, ordered by William E. Colby, the outgoing director of the CIA, because of "a need for CIA's staff to reflect the diversity of American society," centered on the three campuses, where the agency has encountered sharp hostility in the past.

The agency has not changed its recruiting techniques, a spokesman said in Washington.

"We have about a dozen regional recruiting offices, as before, across the country," he said. We place ads in colleges newspapers, we work through college placement agencies, and we have a fair number of walk-ins, the same as it has been since the inception of the agency."

The spokesman said applications were "way up."

The most forceful anti-CIA action came on the San Diego campus Tuesday when the faculty senate, with support from the Black Studies Third College and the Center for Chicano Studies, mailed out ballots to its 700 members for a referendum on severing all ties with the agency, including any funded activities as well as recruiting.

University officials denied the existence of any agency-financed projects on the campuses.

A straw vote taken at an earlier faculty meeting showed four out of six of those attending opposed to what speakers denounced as "this shocking invasion of the campus by an agency of proven involvement in political assassination and other insidious actions."

At Berkeley, 300 students and faculty attended two rallies in Sproul Plaza, organized by a coalition of student organizations, that passed resolutions condemning the presence of the agency recruiters on campus and demanding repudiation of all connections with agency programs.

A picket line was set up around the campus placement office where minority students were being interviewed for agency positions.

Speakers at the Berkeley rallies included State Assemblyman Kenneth Meade, several professors and leaders of the Associated Students Council, the Education Liberation Front, the Spartacus Youth League and the Peace and Freedom Party.

Two rallies were held on the Los Angeles campus where 100 students picketed the Federal Volunteers Service Office set up at the UCLA Graduate School of Management for agency job interviews.

Winston Doby of the vice chancellor's office defended the agency recruiting before one of the meetings.

"We have to recognize the CIA is a legitimate agency governed by the same employment rules as any other government agency," he said.

The campus protests erupted following the disclosure that administrative representatives from the San Diego, Berkeley and Los Angeles campuses had attended a conference on Oct. 23 and 24 at the CIA's headquarters in Langley, Va., in response to an Aug. 23 letter from Colby to the University of California's president, Dr. David Saxon.

Commission rules may shift

Members of the Long Beach City Council serving on city advisory committees and commissions, except the Recreation Commission, would not have a vote on items before such bodies under an ordinance that has been ordered prepared.

At present, council members serve as members of the Park, Human Relations and Recreation commissions. Council representation on the Recreation Commission is specified in the City Charter, and the others by ordinance.

The council's Rules and Procedures Committee recommended an ordinance to provide that council members not have a vote on the advisory bodies because, it said, such power by elected officials might "intimidate" some committee actions.

Mayor Thomas J. Clark said council members serving on such citizen committees "tend to have very strong weight" on issues and suggested it might be advisable to eliminate council membership.

Councilman Don Phillips asked how the Rules and Procedures Committee saw the role of council members on the advisory bodies, and Mayor Clark said he felt it should be one of liaison only.

Under the proposed ordinance, which the city attorney's office was asked to prepare, council members would have the right to participate in discussion of any issue but not to make a motion or vote, the mayor said.

Holiday road show

Members of Poly High School's Caprice Welfare Club put finishing touches Saturday (a bit early for most folks) on Long Beach Public Transportation Company's Holiday Special bus. More than 30 members of the group turned out for the day-long bus-painting event on Pine Avenue at Fourth Street, and passersby stopped to watch as the white bus gained a holiday glow in red, green and assorted colors. Welfare Chairman Phyllis Bailey said club members volunteered to paint the bus after learning that the school's art students had done similar projects in past years. "The artistic members are sketching and the rest of us are painting," said one member. "We're all having a great time." The bus is to be used on regular routes during Christmas season, according to company officials. Ms. Bailey said it will be easy for other students to tell the bus was painted by Caprice Club members—the mouse at the front of the vehicle is the club's mascot.

State university seeking funds as enrollment surges

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

State university officials will ask for $2,195,000 in additional funds this week to offset a surprise enrollment surge that has unbalanced college budgets.

Although they think they'll get the money, planners at the 19 state colleges are weighing unpleasant alternatives they'll have to resort to this spring if the State Finance Department turns them down.

Those alternatives include placing lids on new enrollment—at entire colleges or in "impacted" programs—and laying off some part-time faculty. Larger class sizes are also possibile.

Some college officials believe that if enrollment continues sharply upward, instead of leveling off or growing slowly as they had expected, economy-minded state officials may push harder for imposing tuition.

The enrollment increase, a nationwide phenomenon that appears to be caused primarily by unemployment, has already forced colleges in other states to severely limit enrollments.

The State University of New York has decided to hold enrollment at present levels for the next five years at 20 of its campuses. Michigan State University is moving to decrease its student body.

When California enrollment records were tallied this fall, the state university system had three per cent more students than its budget provided for. The increase at Long Beach State University was 3.7 per cent (for a total of almost 33,000 students). Dominguez Hills had 5.1 per cent more than expected.

Each state college has reacted in a different way to this fall's surge of students. But each has had to make contingency plans to cut back services next spring to make up for the overload this fall.

Fullerton State University announced a collegewide enrollment ceiling.

At Long Beach State University, college officials said enrollment lids would probably have to be placed on even more "impacted" departments than this semester and some part-time faculty would probably be laid off.

"We hope the money comes through from the state," said LBSU vice president David Gray. "Otherwise we'll have to take some action in the spring. We can't operate this far out of balance."

University system officials will ask their Board of Trustees to request additional money from the State Finance Department Monday. "We're optimistic about getting it," one official said. (LBSU would get from $200,000 to $300,000).

The proposal for more funds states that the enrollment jump "has placed critical demands on faculty and support resources necessary to accommodate the over-enrollments."

Hearings slated on condemnation, housing project

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Public hearings on two significant Long Beach permit applications — one for demolition of a downtown building, the other for a proposed housing project in Naples — will be held Monday by the South Coast Regional Commission.

They will be among about 70 applications to be considered during the all-day session, starting at 9 a.m., in the council chambers at Huntington Beach City Hall.

THE CITY of Long Beach is seeking approval to demolish the 11-story Omar Hubbard Building, 310 W. Broadway, on the site of the proposed Long Beach Art Musuem in the Civic Center superblock.

Its 118 units have been vacated to make way for the proposed demolition. The building once offorded a magnificent view of the ocean and was one of the first own-your-own apartment complexes on the West Coast.

New construction has virtually obliterated the view, however, and — according to the commission's staff report — it would cost $2 million to bring the deteriorated building up to code.

COASTAL commission staff planners are recommending approval of the project, with one condition, that before the permit is issued, the city "submit proof that demolition will not result in making low or fixed-income housing more difficult to obtain (specifically housing of comparable quality and cost)."

The Naples housing project, proposed by Read & Faubus Development Co. of Costa Mesa, would allow for construction of five two-story duplexes, each 25.5 feet in height, with attached covered parking for 20 cars.

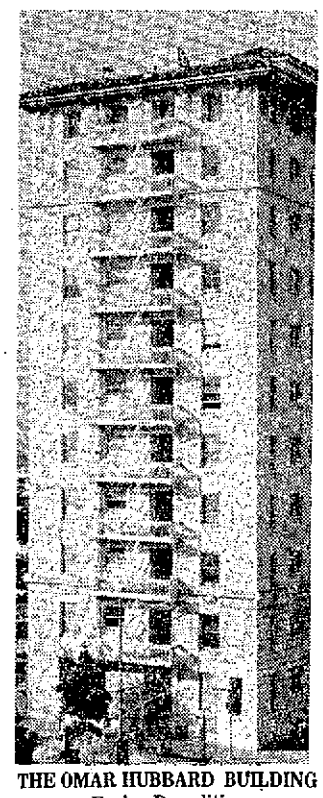

The plot, at 5934-5952 Naples Plaza, is zoned strip C-1 with R-1 zoning on surrounding streets.

PROPOSED land uses for the parcel have been a controversial issue in the Naples community for more than two years.

An 18-unit condominium project was denied by the regional commissioners in November, 1974. They approved a modified proposal, however, for 15 units with increased on-site open parking. This was appealed to the state commission by area residents.

The regional commission's decision was reversed by a unanimous vote of the state commission, which denied the project on the grounds of excessive height (51 feet), lot coverage (81 per cent) and nonconformity with the character of the neighborhood.

CONTROVERSY again arose when the Long Beach Planning Commission certified an environmental impact report on the current proposal, even though the Naples Improvement Association had asked for a two-week postponement.

THE OMAR HUBBARD BUILDING
Facing Demolition

Tom Seegar, NIA president, said delay was sought because the association, having received the EIR only five days before the planning commission meeting, did not have time for resident review and an evaluation of the project.

L.B. lawyers find surprise, sentiment on Soviet trip

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Three Long Beach lawyers on a whirlwind trip to Russia found apprehension and surprise, a sentimental reunion, exasperation, beauty and a host of diverse, contradictory impressions.

And, although three lawyers anywhere would have trouble agreeing on anything, these three concurred that Russia offers:

—The appearance of affluence by city dwellers.

—Complete equality for women.

—No litter anywhere and generally few consumer goods.

—Bureaucratic snafus equal to those anywhere in the world.

For one of the three, Deputy Public Defender Elvira Austin, the highlight was a tearful, joyous meeting with the 83-year-old grandfather and aunt she last saw when she fled Kiev in 1943 with her mother and father.

FOR DEPUTY City Prosecutor Ron Brodsky the trip was an eye opener, a surprise.

And for attorney Richard Smith, the experience was both a surprise and a confirmation of previous convictions.

The three were part of a group of 161 Americans on an Aeroflot inaugural flight from Los Angeles to Moscow Nov. 7-15.

On the itinerary were Moscow, Leningrad, Odessa and Kiev—the museums, public buildings, cafes, streets and parks.

IF THE TRIP was an endurance contest because of the time schedule, it was also an exercise in frustration because of the intransigence of Intourist, all agreed.

Says Smith: "It wasn't that we couldn't go anywhere we wanted, but they were insulted if we didn't want to look at the missile display or stand in long lines to visit Lenin's tomb."

Unnerving, too, was the incident when a 9-year-old Russian boy, given a Polaroid picture of himself and his dog, showed it to a policeman and then was roughly dragged away by the officer.

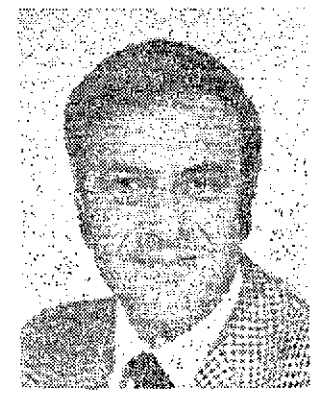

"We were appalled and demanded an explanation from our guide," says Smith. "She said it was because he was a truant and was in the habit of begging gum from tourists."

HOWEVER, explains Brodsky, the member of their group who took the picture said the boy had said nothing to her before she clicked the camera. Later Brodsky's wife, June, saw the youngster released and darting down a side street.

Mrs Austin's grandfather, she says, is the same shouting, unreconstructed enemy of the state she knew as a child—still damning those who took away his home and art gallery. Otherwise, he is comfortable in an austere apartment, his physical needs provided for in his old age, his days made happier by her gifts of his favorite "Black Doctor" wine.

The aunt, also 83, lives in one room of her 40-room home in Moscow, the rest of the house having been converted by the state to

ELVIRA AUSTIN
A Tearful Reunion

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

THERE'S A certain young lady in Concord, Calif., who thought the recent rummage sale of the Junior League of Long Beach, Inc., was just great. Why not? As a result of the sale she's the best-dressed baby on her block.

Later on, the young lady will call me "Grandfather," but in the meantime I'm just "Goo," a sound that comes trippingly to her tongue at 4 months old. Even though her vocabulary is still in its formative stage she is more articulate than most of the young "method" actors you see on the Merv Griffin and Johnny Carson shows.

Money is no object where Summer Anderson's wardrobe is concerned, which is why my wife, Mike, plunked down a fast $1.50 for two Junior League rummage sale outfits for her. The costumes are a bit large, but Summer will grow into them, for she's a chip off my old block.

We had rummage sales when I was a child, but in those days we called them "Dad." At least that was true in my case. When my father gave up on a suit after 10 or 12 years it became my property. One such legacy was the vested, dark blue pinstripe I wore to Confirmation when I was in the sixth grade.

I stood out among my knicker-clad male classmates, particularly when the suspender button on the oversize trousers popped as I made my way down the aisle to the altar. The pants stood at half-mast when the priest dubbed me "George" and shooed me toward the sacristry where a vigilant nun waited with a safety pin. Her solution was to pin the front of my errant trousers to my four-in-hand tie (also one of my father's hand-me-downs. This bit of inventiveness caused me to walk in a crouch when I rejoined my classmates for the recessional.

I thought I could fade into the crowd, but my squeaky oxfords kept whispering my secret to the congregation. When the shoes weren't squeaking they were flapping and slapping against the marble aisle. My Dad not only had a big heart where his son's apparel was concerned, he also had big feet—and I was wearing his hand-me-down shoes.

That wasn't the end of my difficulties on Confirmation day. The shoes had been tan before they were bequeathed to me, and they had to be black for the ceremony in church. Dye from my shoeshine kit took care of that but couldn't cope with the rain that was pelting down outside the church.

In the eyes of the church I was now a soldier of the Lord. Alas, the dye on my shoes went AWOL, which was not an auspicious beginning for the new soldier.

However, blessings are where you find them. The rain clouds had a silver lining, for the downpour caused my sizes-too-large hand-me-down suit to shrink. Even though I was drenched to the skin, I had a better fit than before.

I didn't know that at the time; the knowledge came after the suit had been draped across a kitchen chair for the night to dry by the pot-bellied coal stove.

If I have any advice for my granddaughter, it's this: Pray for sunshine and never dye your pink booties black. Also, wear your rummage sale dresses in good health and with the same pride I wore my dad's hand-me-down suit on that day so long ago.

Even if Summer Anderson toddles into a rain-shower she should have no worries about her dress shrinking. God looks out for children in second-hand clothing, as I can attest.

NOW, LET'S meet Joe Stevens, 15, and Louis Schwing, 14, members of Lakewood's Troop 134, Boy Scouts of America, and two of the coolest first-aid men in the business.

The youngsters demonstrated their skill last Sunday when their troop was backpacking in San Gabriel Canyon at Little Bear Creek in the Angeles National Forest. The scouts were hiking back to their base camp when 13-year-old Kevin Blakley slipped and fell into a rock-littered creek bed, suffering an arm fracture.

Joe and Louis didn't waste a second. They made Kevin comfortable, checked him for possible shock and quickly applied splints to the fracture. Louis then raced off to summon help.

A ranger Louis met on the trail radioed for a sheriff's helicopter while Louis hurried to the base camp to tell Kevin's father, Scoutmaster Gerald Blakley, and his advance party.

Meanwhile, Kevin had been airlifted to Arcadia Methodist Hospital. Rangers and hospital officials hailed the first-rate doctoring of Joe and Louis, said they couldn't improve on it. Are the Boy Scouts "prepared"? Just ask Kevin Blakley.

A censor in Nebraska

In Nebraska, a county judge imposed severe limitations on what news organizations could publish or broadcast about a man accused of murdering six persons.

Some of those restrictions have been lifted by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun, but others remain, and their presence is disquieting.

JUSTICE BLACKMUN ruled that the trial court could temporarily ban any publicity linking the facts of the crime to the person accused of committing it. This would ban reporting of the fact that the accused man has confessed to the mass murder. It would ban reporting the statements of persons who say the accused man told them about the slayings. It would ban publication of the information that the accused man left a note at the murder scene.

The Nebraska secrecy order is different from the usual court order barring law enforcement officials and parties to a case from providing information about the case. The Nebraska order directly bars newspapers and others from publishing information revealed in open court and also from publishing information about the defendant's criminal record.

The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution bars any abridgement of freedom of the press, but Justice Blackmun suggested that while this amendment would come into play to protect reporting of the trial, it does not apply to news stories before the trial starts.

The justice's intentions are laudable. He wishes, as did the trial court judge, to ensure that so far as possible jurors will not have been subjected to prejudicial publicity. Once a jury has been chosen, Justice Blackmun must reason, it can be sequestered if necessary to protect its members from being influenced by newspaper and television reports on the case.

IT MAY WELL be that in this particular case delaying the publication of information will do the public no harm. But there can be cases in which such a delay would be harmful. It might increase public fears. It might even make it easier for a corrupt judge to dismiss a case.

Newspapers and broadcasters should use discretion in reporting information such as criminal records that might not be admissible as evidence in a trial. Ordinarily, publication of that sort of information can be delayed until the jury verdict is in without depriving the public of information it needs to have. But the First Amendment clearly leaves the responsibility for exercising such discretion with the press and not with the courts.

An order issued by a Supreme Court justice in a case such as this is only temporary. His rulings do not become binding on other judges in similar cases. Justice Blackmun's assent to court-imposed censorship is regrettable, however, and we hope it is a one-time anomaly that neither he nor other judges will repeat.

Reagan will surprise Easterners

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — There's a touch of parochialism in most of us, so California reporters who have covered Ronald Reagan in the past should be excused if they enjoy the discomfiture of eastern seaboard reporters whose political prejudices are about to be strained.

The Easterners know all about Ronald Reagan, you see. Ronald Reagan is an ex-actor, so everything he does is theatrical. He is great on television, O.K. on a rostrum in front of an audience, but no way is he going to get down and mix it with the common folk, right?

Wrong. At least the last part, about mixing it up with the common folk.

EASTERN COLUMNISTS and political reporters will discover their error when they watch Reagan campaign — the same way their western colleagues discovered their own error, first in 1966 and again in 1970.

One incident from Reagan's successful re-election effort in 1970 will illustrate.

The then governor was traveling down the San Joaquin Valley in an incredibly plush converted bus which, reporters were told, had been used to take the stars of the "Lassie" television series to shooting locations.

Reagan was in a private compartment up front. The reporters and campaign staff were forced to endure the back of the bus, where there were large, comfortable seats, tables, a shower, a kitchen, and a bar, well stocked.

What eastern writers will probably learn first about Ronald Reagan is that he digs organization, smooth, punctual, efficient organization. If the travel schedule reads "Arrive Topeka 11:32 a.m.," that is when Ronald Reagan and party will arrive in Topeka.

AND SO IN 1970 as reporters were moved comfortably from one valley town to another, handed advance copies of speeches at appropriate times (and given time to write and file stories), there was little to abuse the still-existing prejudice that Ronald Reagan lived a life insulated from real people.

He was deposited on a stage, cracked a few jokes written for him by Pat Buttram, read a speech, shook a few selected hands, got back on the bus, and went to the next place, where he was deposited on a stage, cracked a few jokes written for him by Pat Buttram, etc.

But now we were approaching Visalia, near Fresno, and there was word that students at the local junior college had scheduled a demonstration at the shopping center where the governor was to speak.

UNRULY STUDENTS made security people nervous, and so various options were considered. Cancel the appearance, move it to another location, ask for uniformed police assistance in advance, try something else. Reagan said forget it. Go where we're supposed to go, be there when we're supposed to be there, and park the bus.

It was just before noon when the bus arrived at the crowded shopping center, and sure enough there were the students, carrying signs and shouting about people on welfare.

Reagan got off the bus, surrounded by his security men, and began walking along the mall toward where he was supposed to give a speech, and the students and their taunts and jeers and shouts and signs followed right along.

Suddenly Reagan heard something that made him mad. He stopped, climbed on a bench, and asked who had said whatever it was that offended him.

A BLACK YOUTH stepped forward, and repeated a charge about people on welfare not having enough to eat and its being Reagan's fault.

Ronald Reagan took the kid on, told him about welfare money being taken by people who really didn't need it, leaving less for those who really did, told him he was weeding the cheats out and recited numbers showing that the truly needy now had more.

He shut the angry black student up, is what Ronald Reagan did, and the startled students whose notions of an aloof, insulated governor had just been shattered wandered silently away while their target went to where he was supposed to go and said what he had been scheduled to say.

It is a scene that had taken place, in various similar forms, in 1966, and which took place at other times in 1970. It is a scene that will occur in 1975 and 1976. Ronald Reagan is devastatingly effective.

TRUE, HE IS theatrical, and he does indulge in fantasy frequently. He thought people really believed him when he said he was not a presidential candidate, when in fact he had been one for years, and he still thinks people believe him when he says he is not a politician when in fact he is one, a superb one, and has been accepted as such for an even longer length of time.

But, those fantasies aside, Ronald Reagan knows the world he lives in, knows the people whose votes he wants, and knows how to give the impression he is of it and for them.

Reagan has undoubtedly hurt himself by waiting so long to declare and thereby losing some support, particularly in California, that he could have had. But he is a tough politician and a tough campaigner, and he will, at least in the beginning, bewilder the Easterners who expected him to be neither of those things.

Another CIA device

Somewhere in the Senate intelligence committee is a fan of synecdoche, and maybe even of James Thurber.

It was Mr Thurber who first brought synecdoche — pronounced sin-neck-doe-key — to our attention in a small essay on the funny language of prosody.

SYNECDOCHE IS a rhetorical device in which a short word or phrase is substituted for a longer one, or vice versa. On the farm, the classic example is probably the use of "head" for "cattle," as in "He runs 400 head." In the city, the classic example may be the use of "the law" for "a policeman," as in "Watch it, Charlie, here comes the law!"

The Senate committee notes that the rare reverse-twist synecdoche — in which a longer phrase substitutes for a shorter one — appeared in CIA discussions that spoke of "doing something about Castro." That may have been a longwinded synecdoche for "killing Castro."

The original government synecdoche fan may have been within the ranks of the CIA intellectuals, for the word first popped up in its current spy-story context in a report by the CIA's inspector general in 1967. That report, the Senate investigators discovered, grumbled that confusion arose because of "frequent resort to synecdoche — the mention of a part when the whole is to be understood, or vice versa."

"Thus," the report went on, "we encounter repeated references to phrases such as 'disposing of Castro,' which may be read in the narrow, literal sense of assassinating him, when it is intended that it be read in the broader figurative sense of dislodging the Castro regime."

IT IS TOO bad, it seems to us, that the CIA did not apply to its search for synecdoches the imagination of James Thurber, who became absorbed in the subdivision of synecdoche in which a container is substituted for the thing contained. Thurber lay awake nights trying to think of an example of the reverse of this: the thing contained for the container. He finally found one, which as we recall required him to make up a small scene in which someone brandished a milk bottle at a loudmouth. "If you don't shut up," Thurber imagined him saying, "I'll smack you on the head with the milk."

If the CIA really wished to speak enigmatically, it might have resorted to a metonymy similar to the one in which "the White House" substitutes for "the President," as in "The White House has announced plans. . . ." Havana might have been substituted for Castro, as in "Let's light up a Havana."

Senator Soaper

SCIENTISTS WORK to predict earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. The red-headed stenographer says she'd be more interested in predicting her boss' temper tantrums.

SOME CANDIDATES are finding it difficult to raise campaign money, especially since these days they have to spend most of it before the campaign even starts.

WELL, YOUR HONOR, this fellow had a roll big enough to choke a horse, which I consider very inhumane, so I took it away from him before he could choke some innocent horse or even a large dog.

Letters to the editor

Medical malpractice

EDITOR:

One of the proposals now being advanced by various medical groups is to limit physicians' liability for medical malpractice damages to $100,000. Any balance of a jury verdict in excess of that would be paid from a state fund created by taxes on insurance policies or group insurance policies.

Limiting the recovery for the victims of malpractice would imply those victims suffer less pain than the victims of other types of injuries. Not even a medical doctor could convince any patient of that.

If the balance of the jury verdict were paid from a fund created by the contributions of income from doctors who make in excess of $100,000 a year, the plan might have some merit.

Unfortunately, the great majority of the medical profession is being forced into a high premium situation due to the practices of some of the higher risk fields of medicine. Yet it is those same higher risk fields that are producing the higher incomes for the practitioners.

Perhaps the costs of medical malpractice could be reduced by simply requiring the doctor found to have not rendered appropriate care to contribute all fees received in the treatment of this particular patient toward the payment of the malpractice insurance premium. In this way the doctor who practices good medicine for 40 years without a malpractice claim against him will not be penalized for the carelessness of another practitioner.

First freedom

EDITOR:

The lead editorial in the Nov. 14 edition seems to me to be one of the finest you have ever published. Your political opinions, my thoughts and the decisions Justice Douglas helped to make may not have agreed at all times, but we are in perfect accord that protection of freedom of the press is vital to this 200-year-old "experiment in democratic living."

Highest compliments to the writer. In this instance, it does seem a shame that editorials traditionally are not bylined.

Rising values

EDITOR:

Assessor Philip Watson's comforting news about the low Long Beach property tax rate would have been more informative if he had let us in on how it was accomplished.

After taking a jolt a couple of years ago when land values were raised significantly on the assessment rolls, I find that this year, with no changes in our property, assessments were again increased, by 10 per cent on the land and 80 per cent on improvements.

While the assessor has the excuse that he is simply complying with the law, it somehow seems unfair to all of us who have been belabored by inflation in recent years to have the same weapon used on us again to increase our property taxes.

To get some impression of what happened, I spent about an hour at the local assessor's office checking assessments. The many telephone and personal inquiries I heard there convinced me that the shock I received was shared by many of my fellow citizens.

Race to success

EDITOR:

I was sick when I read that the Marine Stadium's racing program had ben cut by three dates. It isn't right that a few selfish, loud, wealthy and influential persons can cut Marine Stadium racing down and down until there will be none at all.

As for the Grand Prix, if we lose that, this city is doomed to be an old retirement town. I have a friend who, with her husband, attended the race in September. She was there the whole day and was so excited and happy. She is looking forward to the next race. Incidentally, she is middle-aged and sightless. She couldn't see, but she could hear.

Bedroom TV

EDITOR:

It seems that TV and the movies have run out of things to say. I would not be surprised if our TVs in the bedroom have not found a lasting home there. It seems the words, talent, plot, story and meaning have all given way to the word SEX.

When all this started it was said the movies were becoming more real. I believe the movies are letting the minority teach the majority — but what?

I thought that a movie was made to take you away from real life. It is to put you in world that should be.

Where have all the writers gone, long time passing? To the bedroom?

As you clearly point out, we did pass a resolution creating an independent 15-member commission to study our salaries and those of other elected officials, and we expect to have their findings made available to us by March 1. A wing — and a prayer

NEW YORK — President Ford came home with the turkey and put it in the East Room. "I've got the turkey" he told everybody, and his voice swelled with pride, for he had been fiscally responsible in negotiating the purchase and, though it weighed 537 pounds, it had cost him only $2.637 billion cash, which was nothing in Washington money terms.

Leading everyone to the East Room to see his prize, he cracked the door, stuck his head in and was struck a resounding feather blow in the nose. He withdrew and slammed the door.

ALARMED, Ron Nessen mounted a chair and peered through the transom. "That's the weirdest turkey I've ever seen," Nessen exclaimed. "It doesn't go 'gobble, gobble, gobble,' like turkeys are supposed to. It goes 'flap, flap, flap.'"

Henry Kissinger mounted the chair to see for himself, gazed a long time, then stepped down and addressed the President. "Who sold you this turkey?" Kissinger asked.

"It's a secret," said the President, grinning.

"You know, of course," said Kissinger, "that this is a highly unorthodox turkey." "I know," grinned the President. "It weighs 537 pounds."

"It has only one wing," said Kissinger.

THE PRESIDENT smiled.

"Nothing but one wing," said Kissinger.

The President nodded.

"No drumsticks. No thighs. No breasts. No back. No neck. Just one wing."

"And you'll notice," said the President, "that the one wing is the right wing. It's got no left wing, this turkey."

Dr. Arthur Burns, the wizard of currency, beamed delightedly through his pipe. "In that case, it will never be able to commit fiscal irresponsibility," he said.

Betty Ford said she was sure this was in its favor, but how was she going to roast a 537-pound wing; and even after she did, who was going to eat it?

"Eat it!" exclaimed Bo Callaway, the President's wizard of politics. "Nobody's going to eat this wing. We're going to fly it to victory next November!"

AT THESE WORDS, the wing beat so seriously against the door that the White House shook, and Donald Rumsfeld came running to tell the President that Ronald Reagan was on the telephone. "Reagan says somebody stole his turkey and he wants it back right away," said Rumsfeld.

"That's nonsense," said the President. "I paid cash to a reputable salesman of turkeys and snake oil, and threw in Nelson Rockefeller to sweeten the deal. The turkey is mine."

At the mention of Nelson Rockefeller, the wing uttered a blood-curdling flap and crashed against the door with such force that the frame buckled.

Everyone recoiled. Secret Service men drew machine guns, and the wing uttered another harrowing flap that sent the door crashing down. In an instant, an enraged mass of feathers was struggling to burst through the door.

AS THE Secret Service men took aim, the President threw himself between their guns and the turkey. "You can't shoot that wing," he cried. "Barry Goldwater is in there!"

With a horrendous sighing and flapping of feathers, the enraged wing burst free and began pursuing everyone through the White House.

"To the bomb shelter!" cried the President. "No wing on earth can break through those walls."

Everyone fled for dear life, escaping into the bomb shelter and sealing the hatch in the nick of time. Everyone, that is, but Senators Hugh Scott and Jacob Javits, who were plucked up in a wing joint and carried to the kitchen to be chopped into the giblet gravy, which the wing was preparing for the great Thanksgiving feast it contemplated in Kansas City the following summer when it would serve the Republican party, roasted, stuffed and garnished with California's delectable Reaganberry Sauce.

President Ford and his friends sat safely locked in the bomb shelter listening to the wing whistling happily in the kitchen above. "I'll go up and try to pacify it," said the President. And he did. He was never seen again. Someone who resembled him appears in the kitchen now and then holding a giblet chopper, but he had feathers instead of whiskers and hair.

The atmosphere at the top

NEW YORK — The outlines were generally known but still it was hard to credit the details disclosed in Washington about the Central Intelligence Agency's plots to assassinate foreign leaders and the Federal Bureau of Investigation's efforts to assassinate the character and career of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King.

In fact, if King was right in believing that the FBI was trying to drive him to suicide — and documentary evidence appears to support that interpretation — then the bureau can be said to have tried to assassinate him physically. Its method was only slightly more devious than the CIA's poisons and its deals with Mafia killers.

CAN THESE things actually have been done in the name of the American people, by their authorized security agencies, through the consent or indifference of their elected political leaders? The answer is "yes," and that fact has to be faced in all its implications before anything effective can be done to prevent such obscene actions in the future.

The Senate Intelligence Committee, for example, is going to offer legislation to outlaw assassination plots against foreign leaders. But what good will that do, if nothing else is done? Both CIA and FBI officials have shown themselves repeatedly willing to ignore and break the law. Even the committee's own report tells how a former CIA official, Richard Bissell, waved aside suggestions that planning to kill Patrice Lumumba might be legally a murder plot; and Richard Helms, the former CIA director and still this country's accredited ambassador to Iran, told the committee himself that it had never occurred to him to check on the agency's legal authority for the mail intercepts it used in snooping on American citizens.

But the intelligence committee is centering its recommendations on greatly improved congressional oversight, including a joint House-Senate Oversight Committee. Here again, the intention is good, but if nothing else is done little will be changed in the actual operations of the FBI, the CIA and other security agencies. They have shown time and again their ability to co-opt or to dupe their congressional overseers, not to mention their supposed political masters in the executive branch; and a major reason why they so frequently disclose their great desire for more formal oversight arrangements is that they know such committees as that now being proposed usually become the ardent defenders and proponents of the agencies supposedly being overseen and controlled.

The more important necessity, without which oversight is likely to be futile, is for Congress to rewrite and sharply restrict the missions of the security agencies to clearly defined activities. The open-ended authority the CIA now has to do virtually anything either directed by the National Security Council or not specifically prohibited by it is one root of its troubles. Another probably is the linkage between its intelligence-gathering and analysis function, and its covert operations.

NOT ALL covert operations are bad — for example, the clandestine organization of democratic labor unions in third-world countries where there might otherwise be no such unions — but to vest the power to conduct them in a huge secret agency that also provides the government's basic intelligence estimates give that agency too much power to influence rather than serve foreign policy. And the very scope of the CIA's mission now insures that it can usually find some justification and necessity — not to mention means — for doing almost anything it thinks useful to "national security."

Somewhat similarly, the FBI's sweeping authority to conduct counterespionage operations gave it the opening to engage in domestic political spying; since American Communists or Fascists or dissidents might become foreign agents, they had to be watched and reported on, in the bureau's view. And Congress itself, by requiring such abominations as the "security register" of Americans to be arrested and confined in the event of a war, gave the bureau an even broader mandate to check up on the political views and activities of thousands of citizens.

BUT OVERNIGHT, new laws and more restricted missions still will not "control" the security agencies unless the example is set for them at the top, in Congress and the executive branch. Who stood up to, and demanded accountability from, J. Edgar Hoover in his prime? In fact, when President Johnson and Congress combined to exempt him from mandatory retirement in 1965, they gave him license to pursue his own peculiar version of "national security" — including his war on Martin Luther King, which became known at the time both in the White House and Congress.

As for the CIA, if its efforts to murder Fidel Castro and Patrice Lumumba were not actually ordered by President Kennedy, the agency still drew in no small part its impressions of what was desirable and permissible from the political atmosphere in which it operated. More than any other factor, that atmosphere, in the executive branch and Congress, determines finally whether oversight and the law will prevail or become ciphers.

America's troubled cities

CLEVELAND, Ohio — The cities of America all have their troubles, but there is probably still more civic pride, more striving by private individuals and institutions to face our problems and correct our faults in the United States than in the cities of any other nation.

Go where you will in the big towns of the United States today and you will find disintegration, racial segregation, economic disruption and political and moral confusion. But you will also find recovery, reconstruction and a tremendous struggle, against formidable odds, by what amounts to a vast army of people of all classes and races, in private and public works, to be faithful to the ideals of the nation.

CLEVELAND IS only one illustration of the point.

James Reston

New York Times News Service

I have spent two weeks here, talking to students at Case Western Reserve University, to the mayor of Cleveland, the superintendent of schools, to politicians of both parties and to the editors and reporters of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Cleveland Press, and the Ohio black press, dominated by W. O. Walker of the Call-Post.

Seeing the life of a city in these terms, you get a better understanding of American democracy. The Western Reserve University was founded in 1826, when John Quincy Adams was President. Thomas Jefferson and John Adams died that year on the same day, appropriately on July 4.

This university is not only educating young undergraduates and administering one of the best medical, dentistry, and nursing professional schools in the world, but it is also dealing with the human and technical problems of its own community here in Cleveland.

IT IS INVITING the old people of the Cleveland community into its classrooms, and it is making the thoughtful minds of its faculty available to help deal with the distracting and troubling problems of this entire northern Ohio area.

Still, Cleveland, like Boston, and many other major cities, is now involved in a major political and legal problem over the racial integration of its public schools, and this is an odd and troubling situation.

In some ways, Cleveland has been more progressive on racial questions in the schools than any other American city. Forty per cent of its school-teaching staff is black, as compared to 5 per cent for Boston. Forty-five per cent of Cleveland's administrative staff is black. Two of the five leaders of the Board of Education here are black.

Yet it is true that 57 per cent of the Cleveland school population is black and because of the "white flight" from the central city to the suburbs there is clearly segregation of the races in the city schools.

ACCORDINGLY, the NAACP has brought the Board of Education into the federal courts this past week, charging "intentional" segregation and calling for "comprehensive reassignment of students" — which of course means substantial and controversial busing.

The local black leaders are very dubious about the wisdom of all this. Even the local NAACP leaders, in contrast with the national NAACP leaders, have their doubts.

And the whole community is wondering whether the racial situation would be better after a court order for busing than it is now.

The other day, Henry Kissinger, the secretary of state, asked, "Why do we insist on tearing ourselves apart?" and this is what many people in the Cleveland community are now asking about the situation here.

LBSU audience told Reagan a 'potential hazard' to President

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

The Illinois Congressman who holds the third-ranking position in House Republican leadership said in Long Beach this weekend that Ronald Reagan is a "potentially hazardous" threat to President Ford's political health.

But Rep. John B. Anderson, who aligns himself with Ford in the growing intraparty struggle between the two candidates, said Reagan would have to do more than "tick off a lot of charges" about what's wrong with the country "if he's going anywhere."

"Reagan's conservatism is not mirrored in the country to the extent that he could win the race for president," Anderson said.

Although he avoided strongly attacking Reagan himself, Anderson denounced the ultraconservative economic philosophy of unnamed Reagan supporters.

Noting that some Republicans have charged that Ford's deficit budget disqualified him from claiming the mantle of fiscal conservatism, Anderson said the nation's recession gave Ford no choice.

"I don't think the future of my party lies with latter-day Neanderthalism in fiscal policy," he said. "Americans want new ideas, not a retreat behind old cliches."

ANDERSON, chairman of the House Republican Conference and second-ranking Republican on the House Rules Committee, made his remarks in a press conference and in a speech to about 75 persons Friday at the Graduate Center of Long Beach State University. His talk was sponsored by the college administration.

He said the Republican Party is in trouble with the nation's voters because of its "elitism."

"The party is becoming more exclusive instead of appealing to a broader spectrum in society," Anderson said. "The GOP must respond to the needs of a new and changing clientele."

It's vital to the party's health that its leaders ask, "What are we doing wrong that millions of Americans have deserted us?", he said.

Anderson said that only 21 per cent of the country's registered voters are Republicans, as opposed to 38 per cent in 1940. He said 96 per cent of the party's members are white, only 18 per cent are under 30 and 81 per cent are Protestants.

Only 15 per cent of the nation's college students consider themselves Republicans, as opposed to 32 per cent Democrats, Anderson said.

AT THE SAME time, an increasing number of Republican incumbents are being defeated or are retiring, he said.

Although Anderson noted that the party faces a "potentially divisive fight" between Ford and Reagan, he said it's too early to term Reagan's presidential bid so divisive that it will damage the party.

"It's not the candidates who will cause such division, but over-eager supporters looking for a fight," Anderson said.

He said that Repulicans should look for new solutions to problems such as welfare instead of suggesting "patchwork solutions" such as crackdowns on welfare fraud.

"Reform of the welfare system will take total consolidation of all systems into a single, cash-dispensing agency," he said.

"People will listen to the party that gives them ideas for positive reform," Anderson said.

More folks read more books than ever at L.B. libraries

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Circulation of books and periodicals in the Long Beach Main Library was up 21.8 per cent in the fiscal year ending last June 30 and has jumped another 21 per cent in the past four months, City Librarian Frances Henselman reported.

That gain, and a 9.9 per cent increase at Burnett Branch Library, helped increase circulation in the Long Beach Public Library system by 4.2 per cent over fiscal 1973-74, Mrs. Henselman said.

A study of circulation figures indicates that the increase at both the Main Library and Burnett Branch stems from the purchase of a large quantity of books for the two facilities, she said.

"It shows that when people have the materials they use them," she said.

USING MONEY which was the library's share of possessory-tax litigation on oil two years ago, the Main Branch added 21,638 books in 1974-75. It had purchased 13,666 in 1972-73, by comparison.

Burnett Branch, at the start of last year, began receiving federal funds under a special program, and most of the money has gone into book purchases, Mrs. Henselman said.

The branch bought 4,376 books last fiscal year, as compared to 1,957 the prior year.

From July through October of this year, she said, the Main Library's circulation figures have increased another 21 per cent, and Burnett has recorded a 30 per cent increase.

Anticipating greater stack and storage space when the new Main Library in the Civic Center is opened, Mrs. Henselman said the money is being spread out so funds will be available to buy additional volumes when the increased space is available.

SHE SAID the library staff anticipates an increase of from 20 to 40 per cent in circulation when it moves into the new Main Library.

At the end of fiscal 1974-75, Mrs. Henselman reported, the Long Beach Public Library had a stock of 652,185 books. Of these, 467,143 were adult books, including 341,839 nonfiction and 125,304 fiction. Juvenile books totaled 185,042, of which 119,161 were nonfictoon and 65,881 were fiction.

The totals represent a gain of 20,810 volumes in adult books and 6,173 in juvenile books. The library also had 17,817 records and 816 films available for loan, as of the end of the fiscal year, Mrs. Henselman said.

Enrollment surge hits colleges; funds sought

"Without additional resources, enrollments in the winter and spring terms will by necessity have to be curtailed."

The report points out that the Legislature's Budget Act allows the Trustees to declare an "enrollment emergency" when enrollment projections are exceeded by more than 2 per cent.

The enrollment rise at LBSU was primarily caused by more present students continuing in college and taking more classes. But there were also more new students.

"My own belief is that this is a temporary phenomenon," Gray said. "But since we can't predict the impact of future social change and the future state of the economy, we don't know for sure."

College officials won't know until next month whether spring registration is up also. Applications are being taken for next fall starting this month.

Some qualified students applying to LBSU programs in physical therapy, nursing, and art are already being turned away, according to Leo Goodman-Malamuth, academic vice president. He said the radio-TV department also has more students than it can handle.

Students who want to major in some popular subjects such as accounting are being admitted to the college but have been unable to get the classes they need, he said.

Gray ruled out placing enrollment ceilings on the college as a whole for next spring.

He said that LBSU officials want to accommodate all qualified student who apply.

However, many faculty members would rather have an enrollment ceiling imposed than see the sizes of their classes continually increased.

Jim Ryan, chairman of LBSU's Academic Senate, said he believed some classes have already grown larger because of this fall's enrollment surge and the class size trend in recent years has been upward.

"Administrators are reluctant to put a lid on enrollment because it would put them in a poorer position to get more funds," Ryan said. "But the larger classes get, the less effective professors can be and the less learning will take place."

Although college officials have considered dismissing part-time faculty next spring, Ryan said the long-term trend seems to be to hire more part-timers to cope with increased enrollment, instead of recruiting more expensive full-time professors.

However the college reacts to this fall's enrollment increase, no one wants to over-react and discourage too many students from applying.

If the up-trend continues for several semesters, that's probably what college officials will end up doing. But if it's only a one-time "blip" in enrollment patterns, turning away too many students could be disasterous.

"We've been working to attact more students for the past several semesters because we were worried about falling enrollment," one college official said. "If word gets around that we're overcrowded—and enrollment suddenly drops off—then we'll have more budget troubles."

house many other families. She is equally unreconstructed but less vocal, and she appreciated, above all other gifts from her niece, armloads of warm clothing.

"THAT IS the most expensive thing in Russia—a pair of shoes costs half a month's wages," explains Mrs. Austin, who speaks fluent Russian and acted as translator for the group.

Despite the high prices, she says, people in the streets are well dressed, and stocks of clothing in the stores, if not high fashion, are well made and ample.

Her most colorful memories: speaking Russian with African students and late-night talks with the floor managers at hotels who bemoaned the lack of consumer goods and entertainment in their workaday lives. She also recalled that there, as elsewhere, it pays to go to the top when a problem arises.

"Once in a nightclub and once at the ballet I was confronted with the 'get in line and wait' syndrome to the point of absurdity. When I stood my ground and demanded, in their language, to 'see the director' the problem was solved," she says.

NONE OF the three suffered the customs harassment that Long Beach Municipal Court Judge Charles Litwin experienced when he left Kiev two weeks earlier. That involved dumping out everything he had packed, including his coat and shirt pockets and his wife's box of Kleenex.

RICHARD SMITH
Convictions Confirmed

In retrospect, he decided that it was because of his visit to the home of two Jewish physicists in company with a tour couple who were active in protesting Russian anti-Semitism.

The trio's luggage wasn't searched, nor were their cameras confiscated, Smith said, although one fellow traveler, a North Hollywood physician, had his camera seized and emptied during a 90-minute interrogation by Russian police which delayed the plane's departure.

One fellow tourist, Brodsky recalled, got up early every morning, boarded the subway and wandered at will, taking endless photographs and making his way back in a cab.

FOR SMITH and his wife, Judi, however, the atmosphere was oppressive and controlled. "They never smiled, they screamed and shouted constantly, they pushed and shoved, and the slightest deviation in schedule threw Intourist into complete chaos," he said. "I was prepared for an Iron Curtain atmosphere, and I found it. What surprised me was the cosmopolitan atmosphere and the cleanliness of the cities."

Mrs. Austin and Brodsky, however, met those who smiled and danced and clowned at dinner, and Mrs. Brodsky communicated in sign language with women on the street who stopped her and asked her how many children she had.

In restaurants and on tours they constantly saw women supervisors laying down the law and reprimanding male underlings, all report.

MOST BEAUTIFUL cities were Leningrad and Kiev, and the streets of each city were without litter, they said.

Most impressive is the preservation of culture in each city, they agreed. "If it's historical or artistic they've kept it and are proud of it," says Mrs. Brodsky.

Mrs. Austin, who watched television and read periodicals, says frequent subjects were Watergate, New York's financial crisis and racial injustice. Pamphlets in several languages at the airport quoted from Russian Premier Leonid Brezhnev's United Nations talk on Russia's desire for peace.

Mrs. Austin, the only one able to discuss politics, didn't, she said, for fear of reprisals against her relatives.

Would they go back again?

Emphatically yes, all agreed, but on a more extended, less structured trip.

Center ribbon-cutting due

Formal dedication and ribbon-cutting ceremonies for the $750,000 North Long Beach Neighborhood Facilities Center are scheduled to be conducted from 1 to 4 p.m. today at the center in Houghton Park, 6335 Myrtle Ave.

City Councilman Russ Rubley, whose Ninth District encompasses North Long Beach, said the ceremonies are to include flag raising by members of Boy Scout Troop No. 57, introductions of several area legislators, the center director, contractor and architect. Refreshments are to be served on the patio, and tours of the center are scheduled to be conducted.

The event, which is open to the public, also will feature donation of a small pick-up truck on a one-year lease basis by Long Beach Fabricators, a business in the northern portion of the city, Rubley said.

Rubley added that the center, designed to serve more than 60,000 North Long Beach residents, will provide health services, senior citizen programs, employment counseling, juvenile and family counseling, and meeting space for community clubs and organizations.

In addition, he said, Big Brothers for fatherless children are to be available from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays; social and protective services from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays; nondiscriminatory housing listings from 9 .m. to 1 p.m. Thursdays; legal advice and representation from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fridays; Camp Fire Girls from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursdays; consumer problems advice and education from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Tuesdays; and child development provided by the Long Beach Unified School District from 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Traffic safety course slated

Traffic Safety for Adults is a new course being offered at Norwalk-La Mirada Adult School that may sometimes count for court credit in lieu of fines.

Classes are held each Wednesday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Deputy Monte Allen of the Norwalk sheriff's station is the instructor.

Collection points set in Toys for Tots drive

Collection points for donations for Toys for Tots, the annual holiday project sponsored by the Marine Corps Reserve, are open in 40 Southland locations.

Decorated barrels have been placed in fire stations, hospitals, colleges, banks and several business in the Long Beach area so individuals may donate Christmas gifts for needy youngsters.

The barrels are available during the normal working hours of the businesses.

They will remain in the locations until Dec. 19. The toys will be sorted and distributed to local agencies, which will in turn deliver them to needy youngsters.

John G. Clock, attorney, ex-USGA president, dies

Prominent Long Beach attorney John G. Clock, a former president of the United States Golf Association (USGA), died Saturday following a long illness. He was 79.

Memorial services will be conducted at 4 p.m. Tuesday in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Seventh Street at Atlantic Avenue.

JOHN G. CLOCK

MR. CLOCK, a native of Iowa, moved to Long Beach with his family when he was about 12 years old. He served in the Army during World War I and was graduated from the University of Southern California School of Law following the war.

He maintained a law practice in Long Beach from the early 1920s until a few months before his death. His first law partnership was formed as Clock and McWhinney.

He later practiced in the Jergins Trust Building with the law firm of Clock, Waestman and Clock. The latter Clock was his nephew, Henry.

MR. CLOCK was a member of the Long Beach and Long Beach-Los Angeles County Bar Associations, the American Bar Association and the American Bar Foundation. He also was a life member of the American College of Probate Counsel.

Long active as a leader in professional organizations, Mr. Clock served as president of the Long Beach Bar Association in 1943; was elected a member of the California State Bar Association's board of governors in September 1945; was elected vice president of the California State Bar Association in September 1947, and served as chairman of the Lawyers' Committee for (former Republican Gov.) Goodwin Knight in 1953.

HE WAS admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court in 1956.

He also was an enthusiastic supporter of amateur and professional golf and a member of the Virginia Country Club.

In 1958, his law firm waged a successful battle against a Los Angeles County Superior Court decision that ordered golf clubs to pay unemployment tax for caddies. The firm of Clock, Waestman and Clock appealed the decision and won a reversal from the California Supreme Court.

MR. CLOCK served as president of the California Golf Association in 1950 and had previously been president of the Southern California Golf Association.

He served as vice president of the USGA in 1958 and 1959 and was elected president of the association in 1960 and 1961, after having served nine years on the group's executive committee.

He also held membership in the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrew's, Scotland.

HE WAS awarded a Gold Card, signifying life membership in the Southern California Professional Golfers Association, on his selection as "Man of the Year in Golf" for 1958.

Mr. Clock, who maintained his long-time residence on Devon Place near the Virginia Country Club until his death, is survived by his wife, Blanche; a daughter, Rosemary Sadler; nephew, Henry Clock; and four grandchildren.

The family suggests that remembrances be made in the form of memorial contributions to Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach.

Plea issued

The North Long Beach and the Westside Neighborhood Centers have issued special pleas for cash and food donations to feed needy families on Thanksgiving.

They will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today to receive donations. Donors may also phone and have contributions picked up.

Driver education classes slated

A second 12-week driver education course will be offered by the Bellflower Adult School Dec. 9 through March 12.

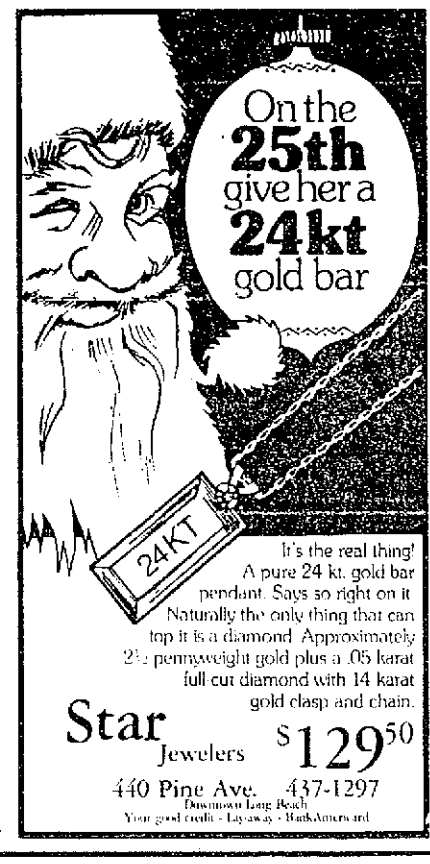

Students may register at the first class, which will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 9, in Room 502 at Bellflower High School, 15301 S. McNab Ave.

Arnold Winokur is the instructor. Cost of the course is $25 plus a registration fee of $2. Classes will be held on Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. and Wednesdays from 6 to 10 p.m.

Two killed in crashes

Two young Norwalk men were killed in separate traffic accidents in Santa Fe Springs, authorities reported Saturday.

Sheriff's deputies said 19-year-old Alan Lewis, of 11629 Pantheon St., died early Saturday when his car was struck by a train as he attempted to cross the tracks at Lakeland Road and Bloomfield Avenue.

Investigators said Lewis drove around the crossing barricades and past flashing lights to the tracks. His car was hit by the oncoming train and dragged three-quarters of a mile, they said. Lewis was pronounced dead at the scene at about 3 a.m.

Highway Patrolmen, meanwhile, said 23-year-old Michael Lynn Milling, of 14838 Madris Ave., was killed when he lost control of his motorcycle and crashed on an offramp of the Santa Ana Freeway.

Officers said Milling apparently was traveling very fast when he attempted to exit the southbound freeway at Rosecrans Avenue.

They said Milling hit a curb and was catapulted over a guard rail. He was dead on arrival at Norwalk Community Hospital at 10:30 p.m. Friday, officers said.

Decomposed body found

The badly decomposed body of a woman in her 20s was discovered Saturday in an oil field near 31st Street and Linden Avenue by a high school student who was looking for lizards, Long Beach police reported.

The victim was not identified. Police said she had been dead for at least two weeks and may have been sexually assaulted.

Investigators said the woman's clothes had been pulled up around her neck and added that she may have died from a blunt-force blow to head.

An autopsy was scheduled for today, they said.

Compton man wounded

A Carson sheriff's deputy shot and wounded a man who allegedly attacked him with a knife and a flower vase in an East Compton home Saturday afternoon.

Investigators said the shooting occurred after Deputy Richard Shear answered a family disturbance call at the home of Willie C. Curry, 36, 16307 S. Thornson Ave.

They said Shear told them he shot Curry once in the hip during a scuffle when he was cornered by a man wielding a knife and flower vase.

Curry, who was first reported in satisfactory condition at Paramount General Hosptial, was later transferred to the jail ward at County-USC Medical Center and booked for suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon, deputies said.

They added that Shear was not injured in the 12:34 p.m. incident.

Thieves steal paintings

Paintings valued at $395 were stolen from the Crest Theatre, 4275 Atlantic Ave., by burglars who may have purchased tickets to see the movies, then hid in the building after it was closed for the night.

Manager Charles Robinson told Long Beach police that the paintings were part of an exhibit from the Theatre Gallery in Hawthorne, officers reported Saturday.

Christy's Christmas At Los Cerritos Center

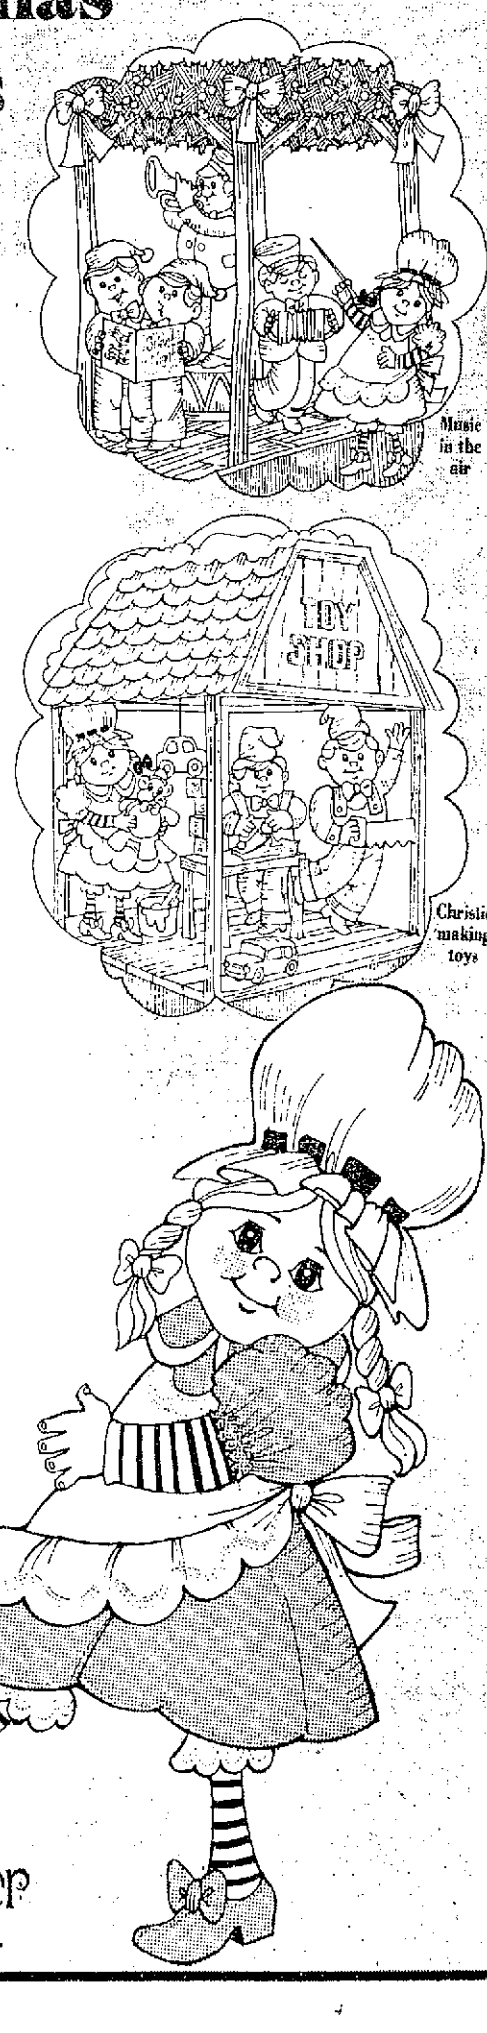

Santa will arrive in a colorful, antique touring car with Christy and Rudolph November 23 at 11:30 a.m. Lohman & Barkley, KFI radio personalities, will be on the mall in front of Ohrbach's to greet Santa, and a Christmas parade will follow throughout the mall.

Once upon a time, there was a little girl named Christy who had never heard of Christmas. One day she set out for the great tree forest to see if she could find one. Soon she came across a group of animals. "Good morning," said Christy. "I am looking for a Christmas. Do you know where I might find one?" Mr. Raccoon spoke up and said, "Why don't we all go with Christy to find a Christmas?" "Let's ask Mr. Reindeer, he travels a lot," said Miss Squirrel.

"Mr. Reindeer, this is our friend Christy. She is looking for a Christmas. Can you help her find one?" "Sure, I will take you all to Santa Claus, he knows all about Christmas." So, they continued through the forest to Santa's house.

"Santa, where can we find a Christmas?" asked Christy.

"Well, Christmas is lots of things," exclaimed Santa. It is visions of sugarplums; sharing a Christmas feast, the traditional photo of children, baking Christmas goodies, music in the air, and making toys. Christmas is sparkling windows, snowflakes dangling from the roof, the twinkle of lights, and most of all, sharing time with those we love. It is all at Los Cerritos Center. Join us daily from 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. and Sundays 11:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m., and see and live a little girl's Christmas dream."

DELL

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Improved coordination and expansion of personal enterprises turn this into an upbeat year. You're tempted to take on more than you can easily handle, and circumstances force you to prune your schedules, which you may find embarrassing. Relationships thrive along lines suitable to your age. Today's natives are perfectionists, put in time and effort to achieve accuracy. Many excel in sports.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Begin a new job or treat the old one like new. Calculated risks are tempting; you stand a good chance of coming out ahead. Social moves take you to strange places off your regular beat.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Stabilize your base of operations with definite agreements and firmly stated goals. Don't waste time on people who refuse to be serious. Overtime is worthwhile if you can manage to do it.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): An improvement of your position is probable. Go on the theory that yours is the best course of action under the circumstances. Invite friends in to talk shop, compare notes and solve problems.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Personal initiative pays off; just watch expenses. That whim or impulse purchase misses by a mile. Postpone investments and permanent financial arrangements for another week or two.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): You have higher energy available and can sell anything you believe in if you really try. Accept a chance to assert yourself and your objectives. Build up your most important long-range plans.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seek help for activity that will upgrade your situation. You may have to relocate to pursue your career. Intuition is clear however far afield it leads. Good news tonight.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends offer advice on every subject. Eventually you must make up your own mind, but it's fun to listen to all sides. Don't pick up the tab. Don't invite guests home right now.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go back to those who came to your aid before. Promote current ideas, and have a sales pitch ready. Educational travels and scholarly projects are favored.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Overconfidence is your potential downfall today. Don't take anything for granted or skip any of the essential details as you push ahead. Conditions are great for making progress.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): See that communications continue in good order as you organize a fresh campaign or revise existing programs. Associates offer suggestions; take a close look before you react.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enthusiasm attracts extra cooperation. Your earning capacity rises. Add to reserves and start a new savings account. Give personal plans your full attention.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): The opportunity is there to demonstrate what you've achieved lately and to receive the proper backing. File petitions or applications. Express your opinions where they count.

SEN. MAGNUSON

Why honor Magnuson?

THE WATERFRONT

Back when this writer was in the Marine Corps, we used to call the type of action taken this week by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners as "blowing smoke."

The board passed a resolution praising Spyros S. Skouras for serving as chairman of the Admiral of the Ocean Sea Awards Committee, which will host a dinner in New York honoring Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., who is chairman of the Senate's Interstate Foreign Commerce Committee.

It just so happens that Skouras is owner, president and chairman of the board of Prudential Lines. It also so happens that Prudential recently announced it is moving from Long Beach Harbor to Los Angeles Harbor.

Los Angeles port officials were understandably happy with the return of the shipping line to their port and estimate the move will increase port revenue by about $250,000 a year. The company, then known as Grace Line before it was purchased by Skouras in 1967, called at Los Angeles Harbor for nearly 40 years before moving to Long Beach.

In a resolution adopted by the Los Angeles board, Skouras was saluted for "...serving in an instrumental role in paying tribute to a great and outstanding American (Magnuson)."

The commission had previously voted to spend $550 for a full page advertisement in a souvenir program to be distributed during the New York banquet and to authorize a harbor representative, possibly Mayor Tom Bradley, a city councilman, or a harbor commissioner, to fly to New York to attend the Magnuson dinner. The air fare, hotel, taxi fares, and other incidental expenses would be paid by the harbor department out of port revenues.

Magnuson is sponsoring a Senate bill that would extend U.S. coastal jurisdiction out to 200 miles. Owners, operators, skippers and more than 2,000 fishermen who man the commercial fishing boats operating out of San Pedro and San Diego oppose adoption of the Magnuson bill. Supporting them are thousands of cannery workers who process the fish landed by the fishing boats. So do the workers making the cans in which the processed fish are sealed. So do the truck drivers who haul the canned fish.

The reason?

It is feared that if Sen. Magnuson's bill becomes law (a similar bill already has cleared the House of Representatives) that many of the 148 maritime nations will take similar action. Already 11 nations have claimed the 200-mile jurisdiction.

The general manager of the 40-boat Fisherman's Cooperative in San Pedro has stated that if the fleet home-ported in Los Angeles Harbor were prohibited from fishing within 200 miles of the coasts of Mexico, Central America and South America it would "kill" the fleet and eliminate thousands of jobs of Terminal Island cannery workers—mostly women of minority groups.

John Royal, secretary-treasurer of the 550-member Local 33 Fisherman's Union, labeled the action by the commission saluting Sen. Magnuson as a "slap in the face" to the California fishing industry.

Royal, who served as a member of the Harbor Commission for four years, asked:

"Has the commission allocated any monies to honor our own California senators and congressmen who have and are fighting to protect our fishing industry?

"At the risk of sounding like a disgruntled former harbor commissioner, which I am not, I wonder about the legality of spending nearly a thousand dollars to pay tribute to a man who is backing a law that could kill the Southern California fishing industry," Royal said.

The harbor commission officially has taken a stand against adoption of the 200-mile limit. Asked how it could spend money to honor a senator sponsoring such a bill, the harbor department's general manager, Fred B. Crawford, defended the commission's action:

"Senator Magnuson, despite his sponsorship of the 200-mile bill, during his long tenure in Congress has sponsored much legislation of benefit to the Port of Los Angeles."

Diving medics

Emergency medics with skills comparable to those of military combat corpsmen are being trained to handle deep-sea diving injuries in a program sponsored by the Commercial Diving Center on the Wilmington waterfront and by the University of Southern California.

James Joiner of San Pedro, executive director and president of the diver training center, considered to be one of the best in the world, notes there are now about 300 offshore oil platforms operating throughout the world, with another 200 under construction. All require the services of skilled divers. Many of the platforms are hundreds of miles from land, and at times isolated by weather conditions.

26,836-ton catch of anchovy told

During October, California's commercial anchovy fishing fleets landed 26,836 tons of the small pelagic fish, compared to 6,936 tons taken during the same month last year.

However, Herb Frey, a senior marine biologist with the Department of Fish and Game, points out that a comparison of monthly totals can be misleading and not an indication of the abundancy of the anchovy fishery.

"While the tonnage taken this year was nearly four times of that taken a year ago, it might well be that the fishing boat skippers in Ocober 1974 elected to fish for other species such as mackerel which brings higher prices at the canneries," Frey said.

The total tonnage of anchovy taken through October this year is 42,777 tons. That compares to 8,842 tons for the same seasonal total last year.

During October live bait fishermen were filling commitments without trouble, although San Diego bait dealers had to fish as far north as Oceanside, according to the DF & G.

Secret Witness

A summary of rewards, cases

The Independnt, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 56 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $38,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home at 261712 S. Pacific Ave. in San Pedro at about 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 42-year-old Donna Rae Goodell, found beaten to death in her home at 12230 Briarwood St. in Stanton on April 21, 1975.

— Rewards totaling $2,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by Knights of Columbus Council 3449 — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Steven Robert Snedeker, 18-year-old clerk shot to death during a robbery at the H & O Liquor Store, 6069 Cherry Ave., on the night of Jan. 27, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 25-year-old John Richard "Sharpstick" Dekker of Bell Gardens, shot to death by an unknown assailant as he was sitting in the Chit-Chat Bar in Bell Gardens shortly after midnight on Oct. 4, 1972.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killers of Jose Ballestero, 18, of Wilmington, stabbed to death by a group of young men as he was walking to his nearby home from a bus stop on L Street near Lakme Avenue at 10:45 p.m. on March 17, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Ashok N. Parekh, 27-year-old owner of Paul's Market, 755 Magnolia Ave., shot to death during a holdup at his store on Sept. 19, 1974.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Douglas Rehpohl, 32-year- old music teacher moonlighting as an Anaheim taxi driver, found stabbed to death near his cab on Sunset Road south of Ball Road in the Anaheim area on the night of Oct. 12, 1974.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Andrea "Treecy" Logan, 5-year-old Long Beach girl found strangled in an alley back of 136 Walnut St. near her home on May 7, 1974.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Mrs. Evelyn Sarah Cunningham, 56, found beaten and stabbed to death on the kitchen floor of her home at 3701 Linden Ave. on March 20, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of nine young men whose bodies, most of them sexually mutilated and one decapitated, were found throughout a wide area of the Southland beginning on Dec. 26, 1972.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-252o from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself . . . any name, as long as it's not your own . . . .and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Prints traced in death case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police said Saturday they were checking fingerprints found the home of an 83-year-old woman who was bound, gagged and apparently beaten to death by robbers.

Inspector Hobert Nelson said the prints were being traced to determine if they might belong to the person or persons who forced their way into the home of Fusayo Kono, the mother of a Japanese hotel executive.

Nelson said Mrs. Kono had been dead "for some hours" before her body was found Thursday in her home.

NEVER was I ever called "My Love"
Never have I kissed a Turtle Dove. Never has a whisper warmed my ear.
Never have I held a thing so dear, However did I live & got to be 35 or so & you not come to me. However do I bear the live long day. However do I sleep all the night away. However do I wake & you not be, in the hollow of my arm alongside me. However can I live & not have you. However can I ever. Oh God. What if I never?

PSSSST! CAN YOU KEEP A SECRET?

If you're searching for a rare buy on a home, and would be interested in living in a beautiful Long Beach condominium, you might sneak over to Second Street East this weekend! Prices start at $43,900.

Although we're just putting the finishing touches on our exclusive 24-home condominium, and actually won't be holding a Grand Opening for another month, we're certain you'll be impressed!

The reason we're sneak previewing Second Street East is because the developer, Wilcraft Development, Inc., can't stand NOT letting the cat out of the bag. You see, it took two years to get approval from the Coastal Commission to build the luxurious four-story, full security complex because it's only two blocks from the Pacific Ocean.

Every one of the residences has patios & balconies. And many of the two & three bedroom, two bath homes have sea views. We're especially proud of our unique suspended bridge system which provides additional privacy & allows exclusive entryways to each home.

Naturally, we offer all the modern conveniences: Sturdy double-wall construction, handsome gas log fireplaces, a total early warning fire detection network, wet-bars, all-electric kitchens, walk-in closets, formal dining rooms, individual laundry rooms, even two car garages with electric controlled doors & plenty of storage space for all residents. So bring your friends to Second Street East. But keep it a secret!

Michigan can't 'Buck' trend

Ohio State plants Roses again, 21-14

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — For an unprecedented fourth consecutive year, his Ohio State Buckeyes are going to the Rose Bowl.

But to hear irascible Woody Hayes talk, Saturday's stunning 21-14 Big Ten championship victory over arch-rival Michigan was the biggest game in his 25-year Ohio State career.

"It's the greatest comeback I've ever had," said Hayes after holding deadline-frenzied reporters out of the locker room for 30 minutes following the game, in which the Buckeyes scored twice in the final four minutes to overcome a 14-7 Michigan lead.

"It's the greatest game I've ever coached," Hayes said. "We were outplayed until they scored in the second half. It's amazing how the game turned around...once we changed our pass protection, we were all right."

While Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin had his 100-yard-a-game streak snapped at 31 with a 46-yard rushing performance, it was quarterback Cornelius Greene who marched the Buckeyes to the tying score and Griffin's younger brother Ray who made the game's biggest play.

The younger Griffin, a sophomore safety, picked off a pass from Michigan freshman Rick Leach and returned it 30 yards to the Wolverine three yard line with just 2:23 remaining.

Pete Johnson—who scored all three Buckeye touchdowns—bolted over on the next play to snap a 14-14 tie and doom Michigan to defeat.

However, the Wolverines' consolation is a berth in the Orange Bowl against Big Eight champion Oklahoma, a 35-10 victor over Nebraska.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler, often criticized for running a conservative offense, had his Wolverines take to the air 21 times, only to see young Griffin's interception destroy his hopes of a triumph.

"When the score is 14-14, you've got two choices to make," he said. "You either play conservatively or you play to win. We decided before the game not to play for a tie, so we had to gamble late in the game and you all know what happened when we had to go to the air."

Michigan bolted ahead 14-7 with less than six minutes to play on a 43-yard drive.

Then Greene, mixing passes with a few runs, marched the Buckeyes to their second touchdown. Hayes didn't bother to go for a two-point conversion after Johnson's second touchdown, with 3:18 remaining, and Tom Klaban's conversion kick tied the game. The Buckeyes' better over-all record would have sent them to the Rose Bowl regardless of a tie, but the younger Griffin erased that possibility with his

Big win, big wait for Cal

STANFORD (AP) — The California Bears, who may have no place to go now, were well traveled on Saturday.

Especially Chuck Muncie, who would love to match his talents against those of Ohio State all-America Archie Griffin in the Rose Bowl.

"If Chuck Muncie isn't a Heisman Trophy winner, then who is?" Cal coach Mike White asked after his Bears trounced Stanford 48-15 to clinch at least a share of the Pacific-8 championship.

"If it happens, it will be a treat," Muncie said of the possibility of beating incumbent Griffin in this year's balloting.

"He's awesome, just awesome. He's got to be the biggest all-round threat in college football,"

Rich Waters, a Stanford defensive back, said of Muncie.

White, in a statement which told the story of the 78th Big Game between the schools, said, "Muncie can do it all — run, catch passes, block and throw."

The big tailback ran for 166 yards and three touchdowns, caught a pass from Joe Roth for another touchdown and threw a 46-yard scoring pass to Wes Walker.

Now comes the Big Wait for the Bears, who won't go to the Rose Bowl unless Southern California can beat UCLA Friday night. UCLA would tie for first with a victory and get the bowl invitation by virtue of an earlier 28-14 win over Cal.

Soaring Sooner

Sooners smother erring Nebraska

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma's season-long plague of fumbles finally rubbed off on someone else, and the Sooners rubbed it in with a shocking 35-10 victory over second-ranked Nebraska Saturday.

Oklahoma, ranked No. 7, lost three fumbles, but Nebraska wound up with a terminal case of turnovers. The previously-unbeaten Cornhuskers lost four of five bobbles, had two passes intercepted and Oklahoma turned the miscues into five touchdowns.

"Nebraska is a great team, but today they made some of the mistakes and turnovers that have hurt us in the past," said Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, soaking wet after his players tossed him in the showers.

"We were lucky. If Nebraska hadn't made some of those mistakes, we would have had a hard time winning. We made a lot of mistakes in the first half, but we were a good enough football team to come back and capitalize on Nebraska's mistakes in the second half."

The victory earned Oklahoma a trip to the Orange Bowl and a share of the Big Eight championship. Nebraska players previously voted to refuse any bowl bids if they lost to the Sooners but coach Tom Osborne said after the defeat his team will probably take another vote on whether to accept an invitation to the Fiesta Bowl against the winner of the Arizona-Arizona State game.

"We knew that turnovers would be the most important part of the ball game," said Osborne. "But that's football. Sometimes it bounces your way, sometimes it doesn't. As long as we were hanging on to the ball, I though we were playing pretty well. It was the same thing that happened to Oklahoma against Kansas."

Nebraska threatened three times in the first quarter, but the Cornhuskers could manage only a lone field goal from opportunities that could have produced three touchdowns.

The Sooners came from behind twice, on Steve Davis' fourth down, one-yard run in the second period and Horace Ivory's second chance, five-yard dash in the third quarter. It came two plays after a

SAN DIEGO — Mike Willis summed up the evening succinctly:

"It was a 'hellified' effort by everyone," Willis yelped in the Long Beach State locker room moments after the 49ers had given host San Diego State a 21-17 defeat as a going-away present.

The Aztecs are going independent next June 30 in hopes of seeking greater challenges than they have found recently in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

In their final year in the PCAA the Aztecs finished third with a 3-2 record, trailing San Jose State (5-0) and the remarkable 49ers (4-1), who in two years under Wayne Howard and his staff have rebounded from the depths of a 1-9-1 season to the heights of a 9-2 year.

Long Beach, which had driven inside the San Diego 20 in an upset attempt a year ago only to be thwarted by a pass interception, got its game-winner with 51 seconds remaining Saturday night when quarterback Joe Paopao flipped a swing pass to halfback Johnny Washington. Washington then outmaneuvered two San Diego defenders and just made the corner of the end zone.

The Washington heroics came on third-and-four at the San Diego five yard line. The former Riverside City College star had just come into the game to replace Herb Lusk who had sprained an ankle on the previous play.

Television replays of Washington's brilliant running seemed to indicate that the 165-pounder had been kocked out of bounds at the two.

"I made it into the end zone...barely," contradicted Washington. "I had nowhere to go outside so I faked inside and went out. I know I had the first down and I went over the marker in the end zone."

Washington's exceptional effort was actually a bonus for the 49ers, who merely ran his play to set up a fourth down maneuver.

"We weren't going for a field goal," Howard said. "We were setting up a two-point conversion play we'd worked on all week and we have to run the play from the right hash-mark. That's why we threw the pass to Johnny."

Pens crown Kings

PITTSBURGH (Special) — Veteran Vic Hadfield scored two goals and Syl Apps scored one and assisted on three others Saturday night as the Pittsburgh Penguins came alive with three times in the last period to defeat the Kings 6-3.

The game was tied three times before Apps tipped in a slapshot from the blue line by Bob Stackhouse to put the Penguins ahead to stay early in the third period.

Hadfield's first goal came in a wild first period and tied the score at 2-2. His second at 8:35 of the final period put the game out of reach.

FORMER King Lowell MacDonald, who set up both of Hadfield's goals, also had an assist on a first period power-play goal by Jean Pronovost, which gave the Penguins a short-lived 3-2 lead.

Ron Stackhouse started the scoring for Pittsburgh early in the first period when he tipped in the rebound of a shot by Pronovost. Tom Williams tied it 1-1 for the Kings when he and Bob Berry engineered a two-onone breakaway three minutes later.

Marcel Dionne, breaking out of a fve-game scoring slump, put the Kings ahead 2-1 when he blasted a 30-foot shot past Michel Plasse. Then came Hadfield's first goal and Pronovost's go-ahead score before the end of the period.

VICTIM of the six-goal onslaught was Rogie Vachon who had shut out Pittsburgh four times in his last seven games against them. It was only the third win for the Penguins in their last 13 meeting with the Kings, two of those games ending in ties.

Dionne, who came to the Kings in a controversial off-season deal with Detroit, faces his old teammates for the first time tonight when the Kings and Red Wings tangle in Detroit. Some familiar faces who will be opposing the Kings are Dan Maloney and Terry Harper, the two players the Kings gave up to acquire Dionne.

Palomino gets a lesson and a draw

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Carlos Palomino started another class Saturday night.

Ringwise Hedgemon Lewis gave the Long Beach State senior a boxing lesson at the Olympic Auditorium, although settling for a draw in their 10-round welterweight bout. There were no knockdowns.

"I'm satisfied," said Palomino, who entered the ring as a 10-7 favorite of the estimated 4,500 spectators and emerged with his record at 18-1-3.

"It was a close fight, but I don't think I lost it. I could have won it if I had been doing the things I know I can do."

Referee Rudy Jordan scored it 4-4, judge Pat Murphy 3-3 and judge Lou Filippo was by far more generous to Palomino than anyone else around ringside, favoring the fighting 49er by 6-3.

The Independent, Press-Telegram had it 6-6, and Palomino had to come from far behind in the last two rounds to manage that.

Palomino spent the first eight rounds trying to get a fix on his elusive prey, who was grinning broadly through his mouthpiece at the less experienced man's frustration as early as the second round.

Lewis, 56-6, needed only the first round to learn that it wouldn't pay to press his younger and stronger foe, so he settled into the fencing game that had confounded most of his opponents—including, at times, champion Jose Napoles.

Palomino was impressed.

"Oh, yes," Carlos said, agreeing that Hedgemon was the class opponent of his career. "He's a smart fighter . . . a two-time challenger for the title."

Lewis was characteristically cocky although he felt like he had lost.

"I kept waiting to be that old man you guys were writing about all week," the 29-year-old campaigner told reporters. "It never happened."

But when Palomino, 26, caught him with a solid left hook late in the seventh round, Lewis sneaked a quick look at the clock. He also seemed awfully weary at the finish, especially after he got careless in close and Palomino wobbled his knees with a stiff left and overhand right with a minute remaining in the ninth.

"I'm not the kind of guy that's gonna run the whole fight," said Lewis, who weighed 148, a half-pound more than Palomino. "I might have slowed down a little, but not enough to lose the fight."

Palomino thought he had wasted too much time.

"I was just a little cautious," Carlos said. "In the early rounds especially, I wasn't doing what we'd worked on. Then in the ninth I thought I hurt him, but I couldn't get there with the shot I needed."

Manager Jackie McCoy said, "You've gotta give Hedgemon a little credit for that."

Both sides indicated they would be agreeable to a rematch, although Lewis' handler, Eddie Futch, said his fighter will go through with his scheduled Dec. 12 bout against Harold Wester in Masdison Square Garden.

"I want to fight," Hedge said. "That's what I do for a living."

For Palomino, it's back to the books.

Tury Pineda, 137½, of Mexicali, Mexico, scored a 10-round decision over stubborn Claude Durden, 134½, in a companion bout.

49ERS WIN—

in Long Beach State annals.

San Diego, exploiting a 23-yard pass interference penalty on Long Beach, had driven 84 yards in 10 plays to go ahead, 17-14, with 6:52 to play on Ollie Brown's one-yard run.

But Long Beach responded by consuming 69 yards in 18 plays to get Washington in position to win the game.

Five times on the drive the 49ers were faced with third downs and each time they got the required yardage.

On one occasion, San Diego chipped in with a holding penalty; on two others Lusk ran for the needed yards; and on the others Paopao hit Leanell Jones with 16-yard passes.

Both of Jones' catches came on third-and-10 situations.

"Leanell did a super job," Howard said of the sprawling receptions.

"I'm just glad I was able to do it," replied Jones, who had caught only 10 passes in the 49ers' previous 10 games.

Lusk's second run was a bold call by Howard.

It was third-and-six at the San Diego 19 and Long Beach had thrown in that situation virtually all night.

But Howard called a sweep and this time Lusk bolted around the left side of the Aztec defense for eight yards.

Lusk carried twice more before spraining an ankle.

Exit the Praying Tailback, enter the Miracle Maker — Mr. Johnny Washington.

This is not to slight Lusk.

The 195-pound senior, who entered the contest as the nation's No. 3 rusher with 1,413 yards, and was playing with a broken hand and a sprained knee, stung the Aztecs for 183 yards and a touchdown before turning the heroics over to Washington.

It was Lusk's courageous 66-yard run that got Long Beach back in the game after San Diego had forged to a 10-0 second quarter lead.

Lusk bolted off tackle on the 66-yarder, shook off two tacklers, got to the outside behind a block from wide receiver Tom Boehme and struggled the 66 yards to the end zone with San Diego's Kevin Feeney about one step behind much of the way.

Willis, the remarkable receiver from Long Beach City College, accounted for all 68 yards in Long Beach's other scoring drive, which consumed less than a minute at the end of the first half.

Willis first caught a "streak" pass for 38 yards from Paopao, then lured an Aztec defender into a 21-yard pass interference penalty before taking a nine-yard strike from Paopao for his first touchdown since the opening game of the season.

Willis finished with five catches for 73 yards.

Perhaps the evening's most heroic performance, however, was turned in by the beleagured 49er defense.

The 49ers were playing the contest without starting tackles Jeff Lyall and Rich Valenzuela and had another tackle, Al Best, injure his knee before the game.

But Best played, leading a crippled corps of interior linemen that included Frank Allen, Kevin Russell, Ron Kipp, Fred Bryant and Kise Fiatoa, who were also performing in subpar health.

That group accepted the challenge in the final 30 minutes, yielding the one score but stopping all three of San Diego's other drives with interceptions.

Two of the interceptions, by Julius Mathis and Ben Randolph, were inside the Long Beach 10.

Randolph's came with 16 seconds remaining.

"I'm glad I got it," sighed a tired Randolph. "They were picking on me all night."

The 49er senior was grabbed by Mathis in the lockerroom.

"If I'd gotten that last guy you'd have gone all the way," Mathis said.

LBCC tumbles East L.A. but Valley champ

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

Long Beach City College played its trump card Saturday night, but L.A. Valley didn't follow suit.

While the Vikings were disposing of host East Los Angeles, 14-3, just freeway miles away Valley was putting the finishing touches on its first Metropolitan Conference championship since 1955 with a 52-28 win over injury-riddled El Camino.

The Vikings did their part, but Valley spoiled the party. A Long Beach win and a Valley loss would have created a three-way Metro deadlock and forced a vote for a playoff representative.

But Valley's victory ruined all the Vikings' hopes. The Monarchs jumped off to a 14-0 lead over El Camino, stretched it to 28-14 at the half and then exploded for three final-quarter TDs to put the icing on only their third winning season in 20 years. Valley will meet Fresno in the Potato Bowl next weekend at Bakersfield.

Despite the Valley-El Camino outcome, Long Beach still staged quite a comeback, winning four of its last five games—including its last three in a row—to finish with a 4-5 over-all record after dropping its first four.

All the scoring came in the second quarter. East L.A.'s Efrain Velasco put the Huskies on top with a 42-yard field goal five seconds into the second period. Long Beach roared right back one minute later when freshman Greg Hopkins marched the offense five plays for a TD following a 66-yard kickoff return by Ed Gillies from the Viking goal line to the Husky 34.

White for four yards, then on third-and-six rolled to his right, stopped and threw across the grain to tight end Larry Koontz for 30 yards and six points.

Thanks again to Gillies, the Vikings were back on the board with 4:13 remaining before the half. On fourth-and-11, the sophomore "Mr. Everything" raced 63 yards with a fake punt to the Husky one, setting up White's touchdown.

The night was one of severe frustration for the sixth-ranked Huskies. East L.A.'s trouble began even before kickoff when it was learned that the state's 14th-rated over-all passer, Walt Ransom, had been hospitalized with an agonizing kidney injury sustained during last week's loss.

His replacement, freshman Mike Willams, ran well, but was hesitant and erratic with his passing and in general was unable to move the offense.

Husky running back Alvin Fike, coming off a disappointing 29-yard output last week, surpassed the 1,000-yard mark with 2:16 remaining in the first period and finished with 68 yards on 19 carries.

Cerritos finishes with tie

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

Cerritos College concluded a season of frustration on an appropriate note Saturday night, combining a season low 260 total yards with 104 yards in penalties en route to a 28-28 tie with visiting Grossmont College.

The deadlock gave the Falcons a 4-4-1 record, 2-3-1 in South Coast Conference play, and Grossmont finished with a 4-5-1 mark, 1-4-1 in the SCC.

Cerritos had recovered from a 14-point deficit early in the period to take a 28-21 lead on Trini Gardea's one-yard touchdown plunge with 3:08 remaining in the third quarter.

The Falcons were quiet thereafter and Grossmont concluded the scoring with Larry Downs' three-yard TD run with 5:06 to play. The Griffins had a chance to win the game with four seconds remaining but Jorge Da Silva's 46-yard field goal attempt fell far short.

Cerritos, which fumbled four times and tossed up an interception, stayed close only through the thievery of its defenders. The Falcons surrenderd 314 yards but forced six turonvers, three of which were followed by touchdowns. Bo Larson (two interceptions) and Billy Whitford (interception and fumble recovery) led the way while Eddie Riley and Mike French also picked off errant passes.

Gardea entered the game at quarterbackafter a sluggish start by Jim Conley and completed 11 of 18 passes for 141 yards and a touchdown. The Falcons gained only 89 rushing yards, led by Marty Campbell's 68 and a pair of touchdowns by Ken Oates.

Carelessness proved Cerritos' downfall, however, as it permitted Grossmont six first downs by penalties, the last on an offsides call during a Grossmont punt with only a minute to play.

Trojans lace Australians in cage debut

Forward Greg White scored 19 points to pace USC to an 87-56 victory over the touring Australian Olympic basketball team in the Trojans' 1975-76 debut Saturday night at the Sports Arena.

The Trojans used an aggressive man-to-man defense, coupled with superior board strength, to hand the Australians a fifth successive loss on their current tour of West Coast schools.

San Jose earned bid to a bowl

San Jose State, with a 9-1 record (its only loss was to Cal by three points), should have received a bowl bid, in the opinion of Long Beach State's Wayne Howard.

"You can't ask for much more than what San Jose accomplished," said Howard, who found himself in the unaccustomed position of supporting a conference archrival.

"San Jose's record is far better than that of a lot of bowl-bound teams and the Spartans played equal to two Pac-8 teams in Rose Bowl contention (Cal and Stanford). Bypassing San Jose was an insult to both the Spartans and our conference."

If his 49ers had been in San Jose's position, would Howard have lobbied for a bowl bid?

"Hell, yes. I'd try like the dickens to get our team into some bowl. We would have earned the right to a bowl berth. The best team in our conference is more deserving of a bowl bid than some of those third and fourth place teams with three or four losses."

MUCH MOANING by Dodger fans has resulted from the recent trade with Atlanta, but one very responsible baseball man claims "the Dodgers made a great deal".

His explanation: "The Dodgers really gave up very little, outside of Lee Lacy, to land Dusty Baker and Ed Goodson. Baker is the young spark and potential super star they needed, while Goodson is a very good pinch-hitter and a guy who could have a big year. He's done it before.

"The Dodgers didn't need the other three players they traded. Jim Wynn's arm was gone and everybody knew it. His power was diminishing, too. Tom Paciorek was a great minor league hitter. Period! He was a terrible defensive fielder, which (Walt) Alston and (Al) Campanis realized. Jerry Royster could help the Braves, but he wasn't really needed by the Dodgers.

"Sure the Dodgers are being criticized now, but how quickly fans forget. Remember when they traded Singer, Frank Robinson, Valentine and Grabarkewitz for Andy Messersmith? They were criticized then, too, but who's laughing now?"

Campanis, the crafty Greek, rarely is outfoxed. He has a reason for every move. While his latest deal — on paper — seems to favor the Braves, I, too, remember the uproar when he dispatched Robinson and Singer to the Angels. I have a strong hunch that Mr. Baker will justify Campanis this time, too.

WHEN DON MERRY interviewed Dr. Stephen Horn, he discovered that the Long Beach State president learned early to seize the initiative.

As a high school student in Hollister, with a passing interest in journalism, Horn was hired by the town newspaper to deliver accounts of his school's football games.

"I got paid five cents an inch," he recalls, "and I bet our school was the only one in the state which got 55 and 60-inch stories.

"Sometimes they were a little longer because I included a few paragraphs on what the band did at halftime."

"But," he conceded, "that was only because I was a member of the band."

Would you say that was a Horn tooting his own horn?

AFTER A RECENT Ram game, a youngster shoved a piece of paper into linebacker Jim Youngblood's hands, demanding an autograph.

When Youngblood returned the signed paper, the kid looked at the signature and snorted:

"Aw, nuts. This ain't the right Youngblood."

If looks could kill, Jim Youngblood (not Jack) would have withered the brat in his tracks.

HOW WAS RON JESSIE able to catch 10 passes in a game (vs. Atlanta last Sunday) in these days of sophisticated defenses? The question was posed to Chuck Knox, who answered:

"The first question is, 'Where was Ron Jessie?'.

"You see, we used several different offensive formations and Jessie was in a different place on every pass play. Even as sophisticated as defenses are today, a good receiver in a different place can catch passes all day."

The Ram coach added this afterthought: "It helps, too, when someone like Ron Jessie is single-covered."

To which, I'm sure, the Falcons will say "Amen!".

RICH SAUL CLAIMS he cannot pick out any single person as his toughest defensive opponent because the game has changed so much today that he faces a different man across the line on nearly every play.

"You play against so many defenses today—New Orleans alone has seven— that you hardly see the same guy twice each game," said the Ram center. "It's not like the old days when you played a whole game with the same guy against you.

"I might play opposite four or five people in one game today. So it's impossible for a center to single one guy who's the toughest because it's never the same one who lines up against the center. They're all tough, anyway."

IN THE AFTERMATH of the controversial last-second touchdown that paved the way for the Cardinals' win over the Redskins last Sunday, it might be pointed out that the NFL has 11 new officials this season.

The inexperienced ones have been involved in numerous controversies, including the Cardinal-Redskin fuss and a very bad call (films substantiated the error) that probably cost the Rams a win over the 49ers.

It seems imperative, therefore, that the NFL install a training camp for officials, something it does not have now. Most NFL officials are lawyers, bank officials, schoolteachers—people used to exercising authority during the week. They then seem to extend that authority onto the field.

The result of the lack of training—most NFL officials have graduated from college ranks and there is a big difference in pro and college rules—and overextension of authority is a chain of inconsistent calls.

Too many games have been decided by bad calls and it's high time the mighty NFL shapes up and educates its hired hands.

Hudson High streak ends

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. (AP) — The nation's longest prep football winning streak was snapped at 72 Saturday as Ishpeming defeated Hudson High School, 38-22, for the Michigan Class C State Championship.

Hudson High, representing a tiny Michigan town of about 2,500 persons, had set the record last week in the semifinal round of the playoffs, the first state championships in modern Michigan history.

The previous record of 71 consecutive victories by a prep team had been held for a decade by a Jefferson City, Mo., high school.

Hudson High last lost in the opening game of the 1968 season. Over the last decade, the school has won 86 games, lost five and tied one.

Legend least of Bartow's concerns at UCLA

The first thing Gene Bartow noticed about UCLA was that it's the biggest city he's ever coached in. Not Los Angeles. Just UCLA.

The next thing he noticed was that the basketball players are a little taller than the ones he had at Greentop High.

People have wondered how J.D. Morgan, the big kahuna of Westwood, ever found Bartow. It would have been easier a few years ago. There were only 412 people in Browning, Mo., his hometown.

But by the time John Wooden withdrew blushing after his 10th national championship, Bartow had progressed into prominence, in spite of himself.

"I started out at a small high school," he says. "I had no great ambitions to be a major college coach."

But up he came from Greentop to St. Charles to Shelbina to Central Missouri State to Valparaiso to Memphis State to Illinois, collecting a state title here, a small college title there, some conference successes and even some international renown for his work with the Puerto Rican team that finished fifth in the '72 Olympics and the U.S. National team that swept through the People's Republic of China, 8-0, like Chiang Kai Shek in the good old days.

Just a smalltown kid with no ambition at all.

SUDDENLY, UCLA was calling him on the phone.

"My first impulse when J.D. talked to me," Bartow says, "was, is this the right thing to do—to try to follow John Wooden? Some people don't feel it can be done, with peace of mind.

"But then I got to thinking, here is the best basketball program in the country, and I'm a basketball coach. If you're a politician and somebody gives you the chance to be President, I think most people would go that route."

Actually, Bartow already has outstripped Wooden. John never won a national championship in the first game of the season.

Of course, it was the Australian national championship, which the Bruins may or may not claim after Friday night's warmup to their serious season opener next Saturday.

They'll be playing in St. Louis, Mo., the new coach's home state, against the University of Indiana, which represents the former coach's home state and is considered by those informed on such matters to be the best college team in the country.

The game will be on national TV. Clearly, Bartow has no cause to be nervous at all.

COMPARISONS BETWEEN the personal and coaching styles of Wooden and Bartow are inevitable.

RICH ROBERTS

Bartow believes in God. Wooden was God. But the "Clean Gene" image disturbs the new man.

"Some of my Valparaiso (Ind.) friends like it very much," Bartow says, faintly smiling. "I don't know when it started. Maybe some of the Memphis players called me that. I'd rather it not be used. Some people might infer the wrong thing.

"I try to attend church every Sunday with my family—the Methodist in Reseda. I don't drink, I don't smoke, I very rarely swear. No big deal. I think J.D. is concerned about this kind of thing, but I think J.D. hired me because he thought I could do the job.

"If I can't win I'll have serious problems. It won't matter whether I swear a lot or not."

MORGAN DID give Bartow one bit of advice.

"He emphasized," Gene says, "in his own way, 'I think you can do the job. Don't worry. You're your own man. Don't try to be somebody else.'

"There's no doubt I've studied John Wooden. As a high school coach I listened to him at clinics. We've used some of his drills for a number of years. At Valparaiso I used his 2-2-1 zone press, as he had explained it.

"We shared the office for five months. Certainly, he has not tried to get involved. When I ask him for advice he's very cooperative. He's interested. He recruited these players. He wants us to be successful.

"I've said to him many times, hey, come in to practice, walk on the floor and make yourself at home. So he comes, sits down and watches.

"If I had any hangups about John Wooden, I wouldn't have taken the UCLA job. John Wooden won't bother me. Losing a game or two might."

"If I had any hangups about John Wooden, I wouldn't have taken the job at UCLA. John Wooden won't bother me. Losing a game or two might."

BARTOW, 45, seems to be geared low enough to withstand the heat when critics descend at the first sign of adversity with the admonishment that "John Wooden wouldn't have done it this way."

Bartow, who has settled with wife Ruth and three children in Northridge, ponders that moment in his relaxed Southern drawl.

"The first time we lose a one-pointer and someone says John would have won that game by 10, I'll probably agree with him.

"This is one thing that worries me about being rated the No. 2 team in the country (behind Indiana). UCLA lost a great deal more than many people think. Back where I come from, we always figured John Wooden was worth 8 or 10 points on the bench. I believe that. I think he's the best basketball coach that ever lived.

"I think David Meyers will be rookie of the year in the NBA. That's quite a loss. Pete Trgovich, in my mind from reviewing films, was the best defensive guard in the Pac-8."

BARTOW DOES have two superb forwards returning in Marques Johnson and Richard Washington, plus some hot young freshmen he recruited himself. Wooden had a knack for suppressing the star system into a tight team unity.

"One of the great strengths of John was that he was able to have completely unselfish basketball teams," Bartow says. "Will our team be as unselfish as John's? I hope so. But I doubt that anybody can do it quite like John Wooden did it.

"On my real good teams I probably tended to give 'em a little more freedom. This may be a weakness."

Bartow, an easy man to like, leans back in his chair and laughs at the absurdity of his situation: the successor to a legend.

"I've joked about it," Gene says, "that this job has been great fun for the first eight months. I don't think John's been that difficult to follow. Of course, the games haven't started yet.

"If things don't work out, I can always go back to another small high school."

UCLA's Walker tips hat to Trojans

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Rich Walker wants to know what all the excitement is about. He says he doesn't understand this deep-seeded hatred between UCLA and USC fans.

It's a mystery to him why couples often won't speak to one another the week of the annual Bruin-Trojan war.

"I have a high school hatred," Walker admits, "but I can't relate to all these other things. Right now, the Trojans own the city and that gives them an edge in recruiting.

"They have an arrogance about them which they justly deserve. They've proven how good they are. If we beat them Friday night, we beat them . . . simple as that. All the pre-game talk doesn't mean a thing.

"I'd much rather talk about the game afterward than now because if we beat them, it'll be one of the most satisfying victories in UCLA history."

Walker is expected to play a large role in the Bruin game plan. As a tight end, he'll likely be on the receiving end of more than a few John Sciarra passes. He'll also do his usual share of blocking because the UCLA outside option game simply will not function without it.

UCLA's prize is the Rose Bowl, USC's is pride. Walker can tell you all about pride. His outgoing personality bubbles over with the stuff.

"If there wasn't a word mentioned in the newspapers or on radio or television all week, the Coliseum would still be packed Friday. It's that type of game. But how many of the people there are really loyal?"

Rick, who never attended a USC or UCLA home game until he was being recruited, recalls last year's Notre Dame-USC contest.

"I was sitting in the USC rooting section and you wouldn't believe the people leaving at halftime when the Trojans were down. Everybody else was at the concession stands when A.D. ran back the second-half kickoff. That's not loyalty to me.

"After one of our games this year I met a man in the dressing room who said he'd been a UCLA fan for the last 15 years. That's loyalty to me. I want to win for our team and for that man, not for the backslappers who are there one week and not the next."

"UCLA has all the ingredients to be a class situation. The basketball and track programs are already super and the rest of the athletic teams are at or near the top, too. If we beat USC, UCLA becomes the ideal place to play college football.

Besides being one of the Bruins' most ardent recruiters, Walker is also one of their most unselfish players. His relationship with fellow tight end Don Pederson is one of mutual admiration.

Lately coach Dick Vermeil has used the twin tight end formation for added blocking strength and it's meant more opportunities for Walker and Pederson to catch Passes.

"Don's caught seven passes and I've got nine. That's 16 catches out of 19 balls thrown to us which isn't a bad percentage. We've also accounted for three of the four touchdowns through the air."

While Pederson is a veteran tight end, Walker was switched over from split end this season and was slow making the adjustment. He incurred a number of penalties early in the year, but played a perfect game in the 31-9 win over Oregon State, catching four passes for 146 yards and one score. Those accomplishments earned the 6-4, 225-pounder the Pacific-8 Conference's offensive player of the week award.

No one was prouder than Doris Walker, who has been mother and father to Rick, his younger brother Derrick and sister Kisha since her husband died of cancer at age 44.

"My mother put tremendous pressure on me to make me a better young man and I love her to death for that," says Rick. "I've got a lot of respect for that woman. I don't know if I could have taken charge and raised a family like she did in the same situation."

Rick would like to give her some UCLA Rose Bowl tickets as a Christmas present. "I won't go myself unless I'm playing."

That means a victory over USC.

Husky spree clips Cougars

SEATTLE (AP) — Washington charged from behind to score on a 93-yard interception return and a 78-yard pass play in less than a minute of the fourth quarter Saturday to defeat cross-state rival Washington State, 28-27.

Underdog Washington State moved to a 24-14 halftime lead and picked up a second half field goal. The Cougars proceeded to dominate the second half and appeared en route to a clinching score in the fourth quarter.

Then, Al Burleson picked off a John Hopkins' pass and raced 93 yards to score.

After the ensuing kickoff, Washington State ran three plays and punted to Washington's 22-yard line. On the first play from scrimmage, Husky quarterback Warren Moon threw a pass that went into a crowd downfield. The ball was deflected into the hands of receiver Bob Gaines, who completed the 78-yard touchdown play that gave Washington the victory.

EUGENE (AP) — George Bennett rushed for 129 yards in 34 carries and Oregon returned an interception for a touchdown and recovered a fumble to set up another as the Ducks posted a 14-7 victory over the Beavers.

Oregon State's lone score came when Jay Locey stepped in front of Oregon's Tommy Garrett, picked up Jack Henderson's pass and returned it down the sideline 94 yards for the score.

Henderson, a sophomore who was fourth in the nation in passing going into the contest, completed just four of 18 passes for 36 yards and had two intercepted.

Arkansas still 'alive'

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas quarterback Scott Bull accounted for two touchdowns during a 96-second span and the Razorbacks scored a 31-14 victory over Texas Tech Saturday.

With Arkansas leading 10-0, Bull hooked up with tight end Marvin Daily on a 44-yard touchdown pass, then came back 1:36 later to score on a one-yard sneak. That made it 24-0 with 1:18 remaining in the first half.

The victory kept the Razorbacks in the Southwest Conference title chase and ended the Raiders' winning streak at four. Tech, in its first year under Steve Sloan, finished at 6-5.

Arkansas, already assured of a bowl bid, is 8-2 for the season and 5-1 in the conference. Arkansas would go to the Cotton Bowl if Texas A&M beats Texas Nov. 28 and Arkansas beats A&M Dec. 6. If not, the Razorbacks will play USC on Dec. 22 in the Liberty Bowl at Memphis.

TCU tips Rice, ends 20-game loss streak

FORT WORTH (AP) — Lee Cook threw two touchdown passes and scored once himself Saturday as Texas Christian edged Rice, 28-21, to end major college football's longest current losing streak at 20.

A meager audience of 12,875 watched the Horned Frogs end two years of frustration that dated back to 1974's season-opening triumph over Texas-Arlington.

Coach Jim Shofner's Horned Frogs had dropped 10 games in a row in 1975 before concluding this season on Saturday's high note.

Cook sneaked across from the one to tie the score at 7-7 in the second quarter and then hurled an 11-yard touchdown pass to Mike Renfro to lift the Frogs to a 14-7 halftime lead.

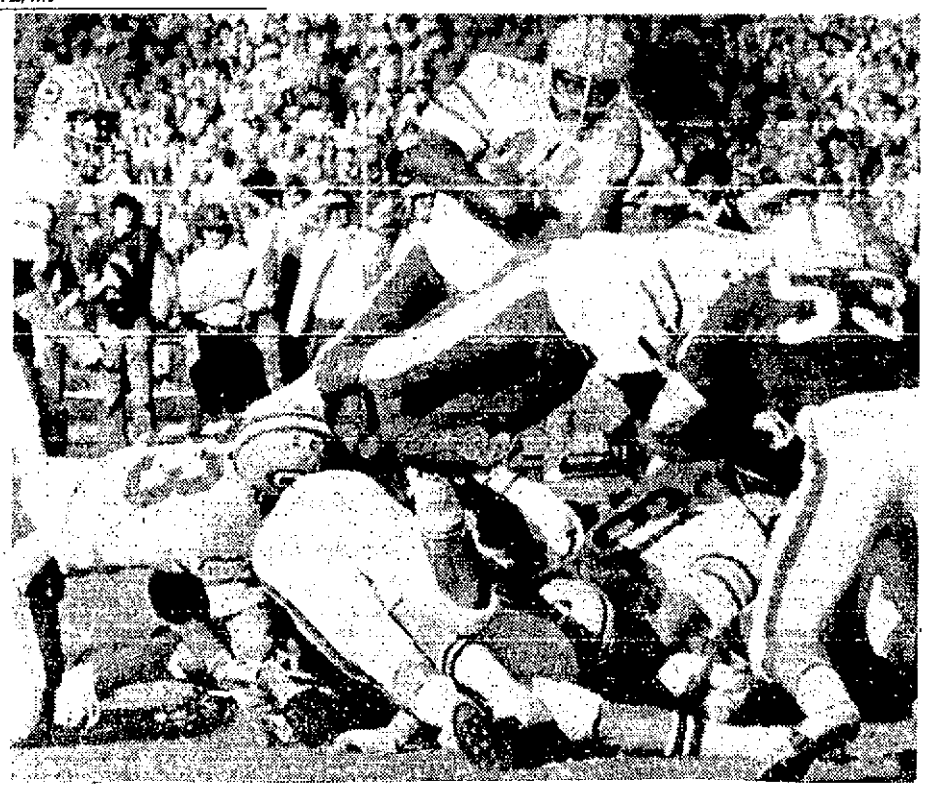

TCU blunted an Owl scoring threat shortly before the half, then turned Allen Hooker's third-period pass interception into a 21-7 cushion with Cook tossing three yards to Bobby Cowan for the TD.

Fullback Gerry Modzelewski bolted across from the one to climax a 51-yard TCU scoring drive late in the third quarter.

The loss was the Owls' fifth in succession in the Southwest Conference.

Muncie in motion

California's all-purpose back, Chuck Muncie, dives over for one of his four touchdowns Saturday as Bears walloped Stanford in traditional Big Game, 48-15. Muncie took handoff from quarterback Joe Roth, left. Cal now must wait and hope USC beats UCLA Friday if they are to get Rose Bowl berth. —AP Wirephoto

CAL—

"I'm going to be glued to the television tube Friday night," said Roth, the junior quarterback who finished the season with 1,880 passing yards and 14 touchdown passes.

"I'm just going to try and relax, maybe go up to the mountains," said Muncie, who likes to hike when he isn't in uniform running over tacklers.

"It's very satisfying to know you are on top," said White. "You can bet we'll be routing real hard for Southern Cal."

In Muncie's farewell performance, at least in the regular season, he went over the 3,000-yard mark in career rushing. Other final totals for the senior eagerly awaited by pro football include 37 touchdowns, 230 points and 4,188 yards all-purpose running.

Another Cal senior, wide receiver Steve Rivera, caught four passes to increase his school record career total to 138.

Sophomore place kicker Jim Breech scored 12 points, giving him a Cal single-season record of 72 points on kicks.

"Cal is a great football team," said Stanford coach Jack Christiansen. "I definitely think they're a Rose Bowl type of team, especially offensively."

The Bears were at their offensive best Saturday. Muncie made touchdown runs of one and 16 yards and caught a seven-yard scoring pass from Roth in the first half. In the final quarter, after Stanford scored a safety and a touchdown to pull within eight points, Muncie scored on a three-yard run and then fired a 46-yard bomb to Walker.

Stanford's offense, unable to move the ball on the ground, relied almost completely on the passing of Guy Benjamin who threw touchdown passes to Tony Hill and Jim Jenke but was victimized by three interceptions.

Phil Heck and Syd Lofton of the Bears intercepted Benjamin passes to set up Muncie's third touchdown and a 38-yard field goal by Breech, with both scores coming in the final two minutes of the first half.

Muncie carried the ball 30 times, and his 166 yards rushing gave him a total of 1,460 for the season and 3,052 for his career. Both totals are Cal records, along with his 37 touchdowns over three seasons.

Muncie's pass to Walker off a tailback option play was his third this season. He completed all three attempts for 146 yards and two touchdowns.

The California offense, ranked first in college football, compiled 487 yards.

LSU has easy time with Tulane, 42-6

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tackle Steve Cassidy and a glue-fingered defensive secondary set up four touchdowns to give Louisiana State a 42-6 victory over archrival Tulane Saturday night.

Cassidy and his defensive teammates stopped Tulane's running game with less than 10 yards for three quarters of the game, and kept intense pressure on Green Wave quarterback Buddy Gilbert.

Gilbert was intercepted six times, and four of them were converted into LSU touchdowns. Safety Mike Leonard picked off two of the errant passes, and Clinton Burrell and Ronnie Barber got one each.

Tailback Terry Robiskie scored two of LSU's touchdowns on one-yard plunges in the first and third quarters. Tight end Bo Dunphy took a 24-yard pass from quarterback Pat Lyons for the game's opening score and wide receiver Carl Trimble scored a second-quarter touchdown, turning a deflected pass into a 40-yard scoring play.

Irish ramble to 32-9 win

MIAMI (AP) — Defensive end Ross Browner set up a touchdown with a fumble recovery at Miami's three-yard line and gave Notre Dame a safety three minutes later as the Irish scored 16 points in the second period to post a 32-9 Saturday night.

The Irish, ending their first season under coach Dan Devine with an 8-3 record, got their other second-period tally after linebacker Doug Becker recovered another Miami bobble at the Hurricane's 19.

Browner pounced on a wild pitch by Miami quarterbacker Kary Baker at the start of the second quarter to set up a two-yard scoring run by Jerome Heavens that broke a 3-3 tie.

The safety came four plays later when Miami's Mike Archer, in punt formation in the end zone on fourth down, attempted to pass and was tackled by Browner.

Steve Niehaus's jarring tackle of freshman fullback Otis Anderson late in the half resulted in the recovery by Becker. Irish quarterback Rick Slager threw to tight end Ken MacAfee for 16 yards and then hit McAfee for three yards and the score.

A fourth-quarter fumble recovery by Notre Dame's Willie Fry at Miami's 41 set up a touchdown early in the last quarter on a four-yard run by Al Hunter. The Irish added another touchdown with 55 seconds left to play on a sevenyard pass from Slager to MacAfee.

Vols hold on, 17-13

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Stanley Morgan and Randy Wallace provided the firepower as Tennessee grabbed a 17-0 lead early in the second period, then held on for a 17-13 victory over Kentucky Saturday.

Tennessee's early lead was sparked by Morgan's 80-yard sprint on an off-tackle play with 2:48 left in the first period.

Wallace, a junior quarterback, provided the passing that led to a 32-yard Tennessee field goal with 7:55 left in the first period and a one-yard touchdown with 14:06 to go in the second.

Kentucky rallied with an 80yard march that ended with 2:41 left in the first half, when quarterback Derrick Ramsey rambled 37 yards for a touchdown.

In the fourth period, Ramsey hit sophomore end Dave Trosper with a short pass that turned into a 77-yard touchdown play.

However, Kentucky's try for a two-point conversion failed and the Wildcats could get no closer than the Tennessee 37 thereafter.

Duke, North Carolina settle for 17-17 tie

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Costly fumbles by Duke quarterback Mike Dunn and North Carolina fullback Bob Loomis halted long drives in the closing minutes as the two old rivals fought to a 17-17 tie Saturday.

It was only the fourth tie in the long series that dates back to 1888. Each team has won 28 times.

Duke appeared to be headed for a touchdown late in the fourth period, driving to the Tar Heels 12. As Dunn circled left end on a keeper, he fumbled, and Bobby Trott recovered for the Tar Heels on the nine.

Moments later, senior quarterback Billy Paschall then led the Tar Heels on a drive to the Duke 14. On the next play, Loomis fumbled, and Rod May recovered for Duke on its 12 with only seconds left.

Bears: The Scrap Iron Johnsons of pro football

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

If the Chicago Bears, 19-point underdogs, perform to expectations at the Coliseum today, one question sure to be asked of them is:

"How would you compare the Rams to the Dolphins, Vikings and Bears?"

One logical answer might be, "I don't know . . . how long was I out?"

The Bears are beginning to feel like the Scrap Iron Johnsons of the NFL, all because of a pounding schedule that finds them meeting their fourth division leader within six weeks.

They lost to Pittsburgh, 34-3; Miami, 46-13, and Minnesota, 13-9, but the last is thrown out because it was played on Monday night, when anything can happen. Didn't Fred Dryer score a touchdown for the Rams on an intercepted pass?

They might even have beaten the Vikings if their left cornerback had not left for lunch at a critical point. Fran Tarkenton spotted the vacancy in the Bears' defense and lobbed an easy TD to Jim Lash.

Linebacker Doug Buffone, who calls signals for the Bears and insists he didn't call a 4-3-3, votes for Miami.

"They're just awesome," Buffone says. "They've got more guys who can hurt you now. They're better than the Miami team we played a few years ago that won the Super Bowl."

To propose that the Rams would be courting the Bears' favor in Super Bowl speculation would be what coach Chuck Knox refers to as "a distraction" — like the late rumors that his secret desire is to coach the New York Jets.

But Ram fans will be interested to see how their club stacks up, since it's been difficult to tell against a lineup of opponents whose collective record is now 21-42, confirming pre-season suspicions that the schedule was less a test than the 12 labors of Hercules.

The fact that the Rams frequently have played it like The Perils of Pauline has not deterred them from their goal, which is to win the NFC West.

With a three-game lead and five to play, they can clinch their third consecutive title under Knox today if they beat the Bears and the Saints upset San Francisco in New Orleans.

But Knox is wary of the Bears, who have the league's lowest-scoring offense (87 points), even without the departed Bobby Douglass, and have been blistered for 241 points, even with the defensive expertise of former Ram linebacker Jack Pardee, their new coach.

The squad includes 15 rookies and only 16 players from the teams Knox used to see twice a year when he was an assistant at Detroit.

But right now the talent is raw meat, although rookie running back Walter Payton, the No. 1 draft pick out of Jackson State, broke loose for 105 yards against the 49ers last week and third-year defensive tackle Wally Chambers, who wears an earring, has been causing an uncommon bit of commotion.

The quarterback is Gary Huff, who inherited the job from Douglass, but with three rookies in his offensive line he is not yet working with a full deck of talent.

"Some teams," Pardee says, "are good enough to win when they're flat. We're not. We have to play with emotion every week."

It's clear from the Bears' schedule that the emotion is not fear.

GAME OF THE WEEK
Pittsburgh 23, Houston 17

Quick rematch between AFC Central powers. Steelers won two weeks ago without Joe Greene and little help from L.C. Greenwood.

Admittedly, the Oilers got some bad breaks in that game too, before falling, 24-17, and are coming off a big win over Miami.

Despite the fact that Houston is the most improved team in the NFL, the pick here has to be Pittsburgh. Terry Bradshaw has never been sharper and the Steelers are peaking just like they did a year ago when they started to smell the $$$.

Pittsburgh leads the over-all series, 8-3.

It not only goes faster than the others.
It gets there about $2,000 cheaper.

When we had an independent testing company test the new Fiat 131 against the Audi, the Volvo, and the BMW, we hoped the Fiat would manage to keep up.

After all, for a car that costs around $4,000 to just keep up with cars that cost around $6,000 would be quite a feat.

As it turned out, the three $6,000 cars didn't quite manage to keep up with us.

In four separate acceleration tests, the Fiat ran away from all of them. In fact, from 40-70 mph the Fiat beat the Volvo by the incredible margin of 157 feet.

The results of these acceleration tests were no fluke. In separate tests of cornering, steering, road-holding ability, and overall responsiveness, the Fiat proved itself to be every bit the equal of the Audi, the Volvo, and the BMW.

Does all this surprise you? It should. It surprised us.

Penn St. makes its point

Pitt can't kick and loses, 7-6

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Penn State's Steve Geise ran 29 yards for the winning touchdown with 8:18 remaining and Pitt's Carson Long missed three field goal tries in the last five minutes as the Sugar Bowl-bound Nittany Lions scored a 7-6 victory Saturday.

Chris Bahr's extra-point kick gave ninth-ranked Penn State, 9-2, the margin of victory, while Long had an point-after try blocked and missed field goal tries of 51, 23 and 45 yards down the stretch.

	Penn State	Pitt
First downs	11	15

Passes	9-20-1	6-13-2
Punts	9-36	8-39
Fumbles-lost	5-3	1-0
Penalties-yards	5-66	5-53

Long's 23-yard miss, wide to the right with 1:31 left, came seven plays after Penn State freshman quarterback Chuck Fusina lost a fumble at the Nittany Lions' 29.

HIS 51-yard miss came with 4:41 to play and his 45-yarder fell just wide and short with only nine seconds showing on the clock in the clash for the unofficial Eastern title.

Sun Bowl-bound Pitt fell to 7-4 despite 125 yards rushing by Tony Dorsett, who had his first 100-yard game in three meetings with Penn State.

The 17th-ranked Panthers, who haven't beaten Penn State since 1965, took a 6-0 lead midway in the second quarter when Elliott Walker burst 37 yards for a touchdown.

However, Long's extra-point kick was blocked by Penn State defensive back Tom Odell, snapping his string of 60 successive conversions.

PENN STATE, which didn't cross midfield the entire first half, drove 67 yards for the winning touchdown, led by Fusina, who replaced starter John Andress in the second half.

The score came when Geise, a sophomore halfback, bounced outside on a third-down, short yardage play and ran 29 yards untouched to the end zone.

Long had kicked 13 field goals this year, a Pitt single season record, and had only missed five attempts. He had not previously missed from less than 45 yards, but he missed in critical situations Saturday, twice in the last two minutes when it appeared Pitt might finally upset its arch-rival.

Yank skier lost for Olympics

VAL d'ISERE, France (AP)—Kim Mumford, 20, of Putney, Vt., is believed sidelined for the winter after fracturing her left leg in a fall while training with the U.S. ski team.

Miss Mumford, America's third-ranked woman downhill skier and a favorite to be selected to the 1976 U.S. Olympic team, was injured Thursday.

On his way

Pittsburgh's Elliott Walker breaks away from Penn State defenders Tom Odell, foreground, and Mike Johnson en route to 37-yard touchdown run. However, extra point was blocked and Pitt was beaten, 7-6.

Syracuse surprises West Va.

SYRACUSE (AP) — Syracuse upset bowl-bound West Virginia, 20-19, Saturday when Dave Preston stopped a two-point conversion attempt by the Mountaineers' Ron Lee in the final seconds.

Down 17-0 at the half, West Virginia battled back to 20-19 when Lee scored his second touchdown of the fourth quarter with 17 seconds showing on the clock. But his attempt for the winning conversion was stopped short, and West Virginia will take an 8-3 record into its Peach Bowl encounter with North Carolina State.

Defensive back Keith Moody sparked Syracuse (6-4) to its early lead, returning a punt 54 yards for a touchdown and setting up a first quarter scoring drive with a pass interception.

Dixon scored two second half touchdowns to lead Wyoming back from a 10-7 deficit. A 195-pound senior, Dixon scored his first touchdown on a 12-yard run late in the third period to put the Cowboys in front, 14-10, moments after Air Force had taken its only lead.

He scored again on a two-yard dive with less than three minutes remaining to give Wyoming an insurmountable edge and its second victory in eleven games.

Myer, who came to the Lobos last year from the junior college ranks, connected on 24 of 37 passes for 283 yards to spark New Mexico to 452 yards total offense.

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Tailback Louie Giammona rushed for 242 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead Utah State to a come-from behind 28-17 victory over Colorado State Saturday.

Giammona scored the go-ahead touchdown early in the fourth period and added an insurance score minutes later to wrap up the conquest.

CSU held a 17-7 lead going into the third period, but Utah State recovered a fumble by Jim McKenzie and marched 78 yards in three plays to narrow the gap to three points. The score came on a 64-yard touchdown bomb from quarterback Greg Van Ness to flanker Greg Daley.

Bucks' other Griffin gets the accolades

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A disbelieving Ray Griffin, the younger brother of Ohio State's record-shattering tailback, stole the glory Saturday.

"I've been waiting for this for a long time. I couldn't believe it," said Griffin of his first college interception that led Ohio State to victory over Michigan.

The 5-foot-9, 177-pound sophomore safety picked off a Rich Leach pass at the Michigan 33-yard line in the dying minutes and raced to the Wolverines' three. One play later, with just over two minutes to go, fullback Pete Johnson rammed in for the clinching touchdown as a record regular season college crowd of 105,543 sat stunned.

"I think the quarterback (Leach) underthrew the ball," said Archie Griffin's younger brother of the play which clinched a Rose Bowl trip for Ohio State.

Ray's performance helped erase some of the sting that Archie felt from the Wolverines' defense. The 1974 Heisman Trophy winner settled for 46 yards, ending his national record of 31 regular games of more than 100 yards rushing.

Woody Hayes, Ohio State's irascible coach, was nearly as startled as his little defensive star. "We thought we could get into field goal range after we tied it up. But we didn't figure on Ray intercepting and taking the ball to the three," said Hayes.

Hayes paid tribute to the Michigan defense, especially in shutting off the older Griffin, major college football's all-time rushing champion with 5,177 yards.

"That's the best defense Arch has seen in his career," said Hayes. "But it doesn't worry him that his streak was stopped, any more than it does me. All he's interested in is winning."

HAYES will be leading the undefeated Buckeyes to the Rose Bowl for a fourth successive year. Who would he prefer to play?

"I have no preference," he said. "Whoever they (the Pac 8) send will be a good representative."

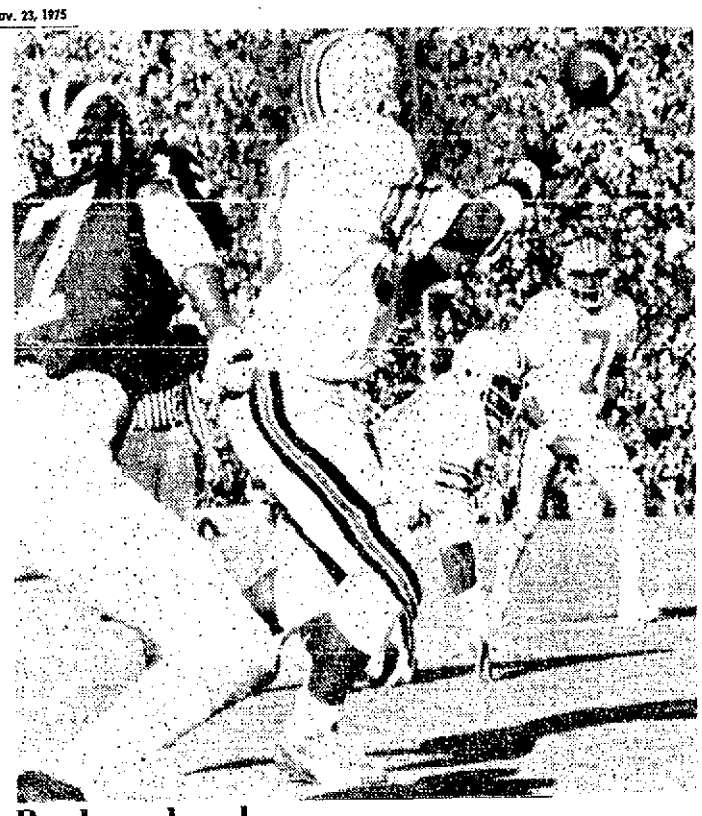

Hayes was asked if he thought Ohio State should still be ranked No. 1. "I think we should be," he said. "We beat the No. 4 team."

What about another national championship? "I wouldn't be against it," he said, looking up at his questioner with a smile.

Bo Schembechler, Michigan's coach, defended his strategy of having Leach pass after Ohio State's tying touchdown.

"We decided before the game we would not settle for a tie. Ties always seem to go against us. You either play conservatively or you play to win. We had to gamble late in the game and you know what happened when we had to go to the air," said Schembechler, who has lost only four games—all to Ohio State—in his last 70 regular season contests.

"No loss is easy to take, for me or my team. Not after that kind of an effort. Our team played one hell of a game," said Schembechler.

LAKERS HOST HOUSTON

The high-powered Lakers gun for their ninth Forum win without a loss tonight when they meet the Houston Rockets, a team they beat by eight points in Texas four nights ago.

Ed Ratleff, the former Long Beadch State star, will not be in his customary starting forward position for the Rockets due to a sprained foot which has sidelined him four games.

Houston will need all the offense it can muster against the Lakers, who are second in the NBA in scoring average at nearly 110 points per game. Their home average is even better, 113.

The Lakers have won by 16, 3, 8, 13, 16, 7, 17 and 12 points at the Forum, never scoring less than 105 points.

Balance has been the Laker trademark. Six players are averaging in double figures. Sub guard Don Freeman has netted 21 and 25 the last two games.

Ontario 500 dominated by good ol' boys

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

ONTARIO—For any auto race to be successful, it must have two elements: close competition and fan appeal. One, quite naturally, enhances the other.

Last year, the "good ol' boys" from NASCAR showed up at Ontario Motor Speedway after a two-year absence and gave their unmistakable brand of "Southern hospitality" to a record throng of 55,000.

Bobby Allison emerged the winner of the first Ontario 500, a three-hour marathon in which NASCAR scorers logged 39 official lead changes among five different drivers. Unofficially, there were more than 100 lead changes as Allison, A.J. Foyt, David Pearson, Richard Petty and Cale Yarborough formed a five-car nose-to-tail train throughout most of the race, utilizing spectacular drafting techniques in a constant ebb and flow for the top spot.

Most fans recall the race as the most thrilling ever held on the West Coast. The prospect of an "instant replay" of that type of racing looms today as an anticipated turnout of 80,000 awaits the 11 a.m. start of the 30th and final Winston Cup Grand National stock car race of 1975.

The five principals of last year's race have returned and all have qualified among the top seven in the two-abreast, 40-car lineup.

The field is further bolstered by two other legitimate front-running contenders—Buddy Baker and Dave Marcis.

Baker, winner of the Dixie 500 at Atlanta two weeks ago, qualified his Bud Moore-prepared '75 Ford on the outside of the front row at 153.421 mph. Only pole-sitter David Pearson exceeded that figure at 153.525, a track record.

Marcis, winner of one race and $115,660 this season, is the No. 3 qualifier in the familiar flame-red K & K Insurance Dodger belonging to long-time car owner Harry Hyde.

Baker believes the physical makeup and configuration of the $25.5 million racing plan, with its three-quarter mile front and back straights and wide aprongs in the turns, is conducive to competitive racing.

"The track is very wide and smooth all the way around," explains Baker. "If you are presented with the opportunity, you can pass anywhere. It's a far cry from Darlington and some of the other tracks we race down South, where you have to wait and pick your spots."

"Most of the guys realize we can play it a lot looser and take more chances here."

Baker also says that the art of drafting—using the vacuum of air created by a car in front to slingshot past—will play a tremendous role today.

"The long straights make drafting almost mandatory," he says. "If you can get behind someone and use his draft, it takes a lot of strain off the engine. That means a lot over 500 miles. You've got to be around at the finish to win."

Richard Petty, NASCAR's all-time career winner with 177 in 16 years on the trail, enters the $155,075 event with the opportunity to establish a record for money earned in a single season.

"King Richard" has collected 13 victories and $307,005 in official money through the first 29 races this year. He holds the current money record of $309,225 set in 1971 when he won 21 out of 46 races.

BUCKS BAG IT—

The Buckeyes stopped Michigan on the game's first series and then drove 63 yards in 15 plays on their first possession to score on Greene's seven-yard pass to Johnson. It was only the second catch of the year for Johnson and this was to be Ohio State's last major offensive thrust until the final minutes of the game.

Turnovers marred the rest of the first half, but Michigan did drive 80 yards in 11 plays to score on an 11-yard pass from tailback Gordon Bell to wingback Jim Smith 24 seconds before intermission.

On the ensuing kickoff, with a record, regular-season college crowd of 105,543 howling, the Wolverines recovered Archie Griffin's fumble and were poised to take the lead. But Bob Wood missed on a 37-yard field goal attempt on the last play of the half.

At one point, there were six turnovers in eight series in the first half, three by each side.

Michigan punter John Anderson, whose short kicks had been hurting his team all afternoon, managed a 33-yarder early in the fourth period that put the Buckeyes on their own six.

The Buckeyes were forced to punt and Michigan then drove 43 yards in nine plays to score on a one-yard sneak by Leach midway through the period that gave the Wolverines a 14-7 lead.

Behind for the first time all day, Ohio State suddenly snapped out of its offensive lethargy to come back on Johnson's two late touchdowns.

In the second half, Michigan's defense stymied the Buckeyes at virtually every turn. Archie Griffin was unable to break through the Wolverines' hard-charging defense which frustrated the option-type plays Ohio State has been so renowned for with Greene and Griffin.

The Buckeyes' initial first down in the march that tied the game at 14-14 was only their second in 35 minutes in which they had the ball.

The victory raised Ohio State's record to 11-0 and 8-0 in the conference. Michigan is 8-1-2 over-all and 7-1 in the Big Ten.

Greatest win ever, beams Sooner coach

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — "It was the greatest win I've ever been associated with," said Barry Switzer after his Oklahoma Sooners had shattered second-ranked Nebraska's dreams of a national championship with a 35-10 victory here Saturday.

Switzer said the win "erases that loss two weeks ago to Kansas and a lot of other unfortunate things that happened to us. That victory was the season right there."

Oklahoma has been plagued all year with turnovers, including nine in its only loss to Kansas. But the Sooners took advantage of Nebraska miscues to score their five touchdowns. Nebraska lost four fumbles and had two interceptions.

"I think our football team had the edge today, but I've got to think they're both equal football teams," said Switzer.

Oklahoma suffered several turnovers in the first half but Nebraska could only manage a field goal and trailed at the half, 7-3.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, speaking from a silent dressing room, said, "Oklahoma is just a great team, and certainly was the better team today. I told the players I'm not at all ashamed of this team. I think they've probably played close to their potential all year, including today."

Osborne said he thought a fumble by Vince Ferragamo in the third period—which led to a Sooner touchdown and a 14-10 lead—was the turning point in the game. He singled out the play of Sooner quarterback Steve Davis, who had 130 yards rushing, and the Oklahoma defense, especially end Jimbo Elrod, as the difference in the game.

"Oklahoma is by far the best football team we've played," Osborne said. "They've got a lot of fine offensive and defensive players—just look at their All-Americans and All-Big Eight players."

Sooner defensive coach Larry Lacewell was understandably happy. "Our defense just played super when it had to," he said. "I think this is the greatest victory we've had in the last four years because it allowed us to go to the Orange Bowl. It'll be great to be on national TV again."

Davis, who had not lost a game on the collegiate level until Kansas' 23-3 upset of the Sooners, said he had "a good feeling all week during practice about this game. Everybody in Oklahoma was ready for this win. It's a great way to end a career."

SOONERS' DAY—

touchdown run by Elvis Peacock was nullified by a penalty.

Peacock added an insurance touchdown, scoring from three yards out with 10 minutes remaining. The Sooners then added insult to injury, scoring twice in the final three minutes on runs of eight yards by Davis and four yards by freshman Billy Sims.

The final gun erased the last shred of Oklahoma's NCAA probation. And college football's defending national champions will meet Michigan in the Orange Bowl on New Year's night, their first bowl appearance in three years.

It was Nebraska's first setback in 12 games, since a 28-14 loss to Oklahoma in the 1974 regular season finale. Nebraska's defeat left Ohio State, third-ranked Texas A&M and eighth-ranked Arizona State as the nation's only unbeaten-untied teams.

Jubilant Oklahoma fans hurled oranges onto the field as the game ended to celebrate the team's bowl invitation.

Although Nebraska marched 67 yards to the Oklahoma 13 following the opening kickoff and recovered fumbles at the Sooners' 38 and 32 yard lines before the first period was over, the Cornhuskers managed only a 3-0 lead on Mike Coyle's 24-yard field goal.

Nebraska later forged ahead 10-7 on Monte Anthony's one-yard run after another Oklahoma fumble, but that was the Cornhuskers' last lead and the Sooners were soon in control.

The turnovers were welcome gifts for the Sooners, who had previously lost 21 of 54 fumbles and coughed the ball up three more times Saturday.

Nebraska stormed from its 20 to the Oklahoma 13 in 13 plays following the opening kickoff but Coyle missed a 31-yard field goal.

Joe Washington fumbled the ball away at his 38 on Oklahoma's third play from scrimmage and Jimmy Littrell bobbled at the 32 on the Sooners' next possession.

Nebraska's give-away program began late in the first period when Vince Ferragamo faded back to pass, was hit by Scott Hill and dropped the ball. Leroy Selmon recovered for Oklahoma at the Nebraska 42 and 13 plays later Steve Davis put the Sooners in front, 7-3.

Nebraska disdained a point blank field goal with seven seconds left in the first half and a dive by Anthony over left guard was stopped short of the goal line by middle guard Dewey Selmon.

Littrell gave the ball away again with a fumble on his 32 in the third period. Anthony scored Nebraska's touchdown nine plays later.

Ferragamo fumbled again at his own 47 late in the third quarter after Leroy Selmon shook him loose from the ball. Mike Phillips recovered for Oklahoma and seven plays later Ivory put the Sooners on top for good. Davis carried four times for 35 yards en route to a game-high 130 yards.

Nebraska had been averaging 32.3 points a game, but Oklahoma's stubborn defense, led by the Selmon brothers, end Jimbo Elrod, linebacker Bill Dalke and an outstanding secondary, limited the Cornhuskers to 70 yards in 39 rushes and 175 yards through the air.

Miracle Baron takes feature

Miracle Baron led from start to finish to take Saturday night's featured Mira Loma Mile at Hollywood Park before more than 16,000 Western Harness Racing fans.

With leading driver Joe Lighthill in the bike, Miracle Baron outraced Broadway Bret for the early lead and then backed off the second quarter to win while holding a clear advantage throughout the stretch. Broadway Bret was second all the way and Kay Wave finished third.

Owned by Barton A. Holl of Logan, Ohio, Miracle Baron was a 3-5 favorite and covered the final half in a minute flat for the victory. It marked Lighthill's 43rd win of the meeting.

A bargain $5,000 purchase at the 1972 Northfield sale, Miracle Baron paid $3.40 in boosting his seasonal earnings to $58,602. Broadway Bret, handled by Joe O'Brien, paid $3 and $2.20 and Kay Wave, third with Jack Williams driving, returned $2.60.

Last year Miracle Baron turned in a remarkable speed performance at Lexington's famed Red Mile. He began by winning in heats of 1:56⅘ and 1:57⅘ to set a new two-heats record for pacing geldings. His 1:56⅘ clocking was only two-fifths of a second shy of Armbro Ontario's world record for pacing geldings.

John to join L.B. Rockets

Dave Sylvia will open on the mound for the Rockets when the Long Beach team hosts Robinson's Mets this afternoon at Blair Field, 1:30.

Early-arriving fans may do a double take when they see one performer warming up, but their eyes will not be playing tricks on them. It will be Tommy John of the Dodgers.

John, out of action the entire '75 season after elbow surgery, started his comeback in the Arizona instructional league last month and will continue his conditioning with the Rockets.

Manager Jack Graham said John will only pitch an inning or two for the Rockets under game conditions "if and when he makes the decision. It's entirely up to him."

New DFG chief discusses outdoor goals, dangers

Charles Fullerton, director of the California Department of Fish and Game, was the guest speaker of the Southern California Sports Council at a dinner meeting in the Winchester Inn last week, and he reeled off facts and figures about the DFG so fast that it was almost impossible to absorb even the most pertinent facts.

Yet, when Fullerton finished his speech and answered a large number of questions, it was apparent that he is more concerned about the habitat of fish and wildlife than he is about the production. That is not to say that he wants to decrease the number of fish to be planted; he would like to increase that number.

CHARLIE FULLERTON
Definite ideas

He is most concerned, however, about where to put those fish; where the deer herds will roam, and all of the habitat of fish and wildlife that is disappearing so rapidly that by the year 2000 there may be no place to find fish and animals.

Also, Fullerton is quite concerned about the sportsman's dollars and getting the most results from such funds in the face of decreasing habitat, special interest groups' demands and the enormous rate of inflation.

He doesn't want to increase license fees because he thinks that the sportsmen are paying their maximum now for what they are getting, but he does want to see the public at large, not the fishermen and hunters, become involved in this state's outdoor situation.

FULLERTON LISTED major goals that he hopes to achieve in the 1976-77 fiscal year:

• Stretch the available funds (those that come from the people who buy fishing and hunting licenses) as far as is possible over the widest range of fish and wildlife.

• Seek additional money from the state's General Fund to care for nongame programs. Under that category he listed the special interest groups. Asked to define special interests, he named a few—those who want the sea otters protected, those who want special protection for the reptiles, the mountain lions, wild burros and wild horses.

• Reverse the 10-year decline in California's deer herds by improving the habitat. Deer will disappear from California unless such a program is undertaken and is successful. He discussed the "unit plan" at great length.

• Work to change the federal government's order that prevents stocking of fish in the high lakes of the National Parks. He feels that such a program is keeping people out of the parks and that trout plants do not degrade the environment such as the federal government charges. He feels that the people of the state and our visitors have rights to fish in all lakes if the environment is protected.

EFFORTS TO IMPROVE OCEAN fishing were listed as one of the main goals, not for the 1976-77 fiscal year, but immediately, and Fullerton told of some of those projects, such as the artificial reefs at Redondo Beach, Huntington Beach, Ventura Marina and even the Bolsa Chica program.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

About Bolsa Chica, he said that the department had acquired some rights to the marshlands from Signal Oil and Gas, and that immediate plans called for levees and water control to protect the now-degraded area. He foresees limited public use for some time when the preliminary work is done.

In the end, however, he thinks that Bolsa Chica should have an entry to the ocean, with certain types of fishing and a program similar to that of Upper Newport Bay, which he calls one of the most important projects that the DFG has undertaken in years. It and Bolsa Chica are the only wetlands between the San Francisco Bay region and the Mexican border.

When Fullerton was asked to define "special interests," he said: "We must not forget one special interest —fishing and hunting."

On offshore oil drilling, he said that the department was very much involved and also very much concerned and that the state and federal goverments must proceed with extreme caution, particularly in the areas around such faraway fishing fishing grounds as those offered by the Cortes Bank and others.

ONE OF HIS MAIN CONCERNS is the recent opinion given by a federal judge that the federal government has the right to use the water in California's rivers and streams the way it sees fit. That means, said Fullerton, that the federal government could dry up streams in the north where steelhead and salmon run and eventually spawn. He is convinced that every person interested in the outdoors should let his Representative or Senator in Washington know that we don't want that.

He hammered away at the decreasing habitat for fish and wildlife, citing such figures as these: Thousands of miles of steelhead streams already lost; three million acres of wildlife habitat lost since 1900; 90 percent of the coastal marshlands lost for all time; 30,000 acres being lost each year to subdivisions, highways, farms.

This columnist would like to add a personal opinion of Charlie Fullerton, a man I have known for a long time. It took months for Gov. Brown to make up his mind on a DFG director. In the end, he picked the best possible candidate for the job. Charlie served as deputy director under Ray Arnett and he served well. He is as dedicated about keeping the outdoors and fish and wildlife on a high level as any person could be.

Heading for weekend regionals

Short holiday for 49er spikers

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Thanksgiving vacation will be cut short for coach Dixie Grimmett and her LBSU volleyball team if, as expected, the 49ers finish in one of the top four spots at the SCWIAC tournament this weekend at Fullerton State.

Taking only one day's respite, they will head for Grossmont Colleg in San Diego for the AIAW Western Regionals Friday and Saturday.

Once again, Long Beach State is expecting its strongest competition to come from its own division which includes UCLA and UC Santa Barbara. The 49ers' recent 15-10, 13-15, 15-12 win against USC cemented the division title with UCLA finishing second. LBSU and UCLA split two league matches, but an additional victory by the Bruins in the UCLA Invitational has given them a slight edge in the over-all standings.

Also participating in the regionals will be colleges from Northern California and Nevada. The University of Hawaii has decided not play in the regionals and will wait for an "at-large" berth for the nationals in December.

Incidentally, Dixie, who is also assistant basketball coach at Long Beach, will be among the guest speakers at the USA Women's Basketball Coaches clinic Dec. 6-7 at L.A. State. The Clinic will be geared for junior and senior high scool coaches and college students.

Other guest speakers will include the Lakers' Bill Sharman, UCLA women's head coach Ellen Mosher, Long Beach State head coach Dwight Jones and Darlene May of Cal Poly Pomona.

ONE OF the hottest league competitions around is between the undefeated coed tennis teams of Orange Coast and Golden West Colleges. The teams played to a 6-6 tie last week and will meet again Tuesday at Orange Coast.

Long Beach City College coach Benny Crigger, whose team dropped a 14-1 decision to OCC and suffered a 9-3 setback to Golden West, rates Orange Coast as the stronger team.

"They are the two best teams in Southern California," Crigger said. "They have super girls on their teams. Most teams have good guys because of their varsity teams. The question is, 'Who has the best girls?'"

LONG Beach City College's basketball team continues as the league leader followed by Cerritos College. Mt. San Antonio College proved an easy 65-35 conquest Monday with coach Donna Prindle giving equal playing time to every varsity team member.

Toni Bell, top team scorer, hit for 20 points. Brenda Pinesett had nine, and Carol Dellavalle and Shannon Murphy each netted eight.

Although the junior varsity team only allowed 12 points in the first half Wednesday against College of the Canyons, the Vikings ended up on the short side of the final 32-28 score.

Upcoming for LBCC is Monday's match at San Bernardino College and a home game Wednesday with Los Angeles City College.

LISA Hall of Los Alamitos High went into the CIF-SS girls tennis individual sectional playoffs at Lowell High School this weekend seeded fourth. Also competing from this area are Melaine Stout of Kennedy, Erin Hirsch and Marta Sheehan of Warren and Ellen Turbow of Garden Grove.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

A satisfied Marilynn Tom watched her AA and A coed volleyball teams turn in a "total team effort" to down Orange Coast, 4-15, 15-7, 15-9 (AA); 15-11, 15-7 (A).

On the undefeated AA team are Ralph Smith, Patty Linza, Rocky Ciarelli, Dina Lopez, Mark Pick, Dracy Laurin, Mike Blanchard, John Gipp and Dana Avery.

LBCC hosts Fullerton College in its final league game Tuesday at 3:30.

LBCC's field hockey team easily handled Pierce Colleg Thursday 4-0 in a post-season game. LBCC, coached by Anita Miller, recently tied Long Beach State 1-1 in a practice match. The Vikings finished fourth in league play.

Moore teams in x-country CIF finals

Moore League champion Wilson and runnerup Lakewood qualified for the finals of the CIF, 4-A cross country championships at Mt. San Antonio College Saturday.

Wilson finished fourth in heat one with 144 points while Lakewood was fifth in heat two with 129 points. Crescenta Valley's Don Moses won heat won in 10:08; Foothill's Mark Spilsbury heat two in 10:11.

Finals are Saturday at Mt. San Antonio.

HEAT ONE: Edison 47, Palos Verdes 75, Bishop Amat 129, Wilson 144, Canyon 182. HEAT TWO: Costa Mesa 52, Foothill 70, Marina 91, Burbank 98, Lakewood 128.

Hill, Lindbergh win flag titles

Mark Hayworth passed and ran Hughes to the ninth grade All-City flag football championship Saturday with a 19-7 win over Hill at Millikan High.

Lindbergh, paced by quarterback Lynn Koehmstedt and the running of John Barber and John Lee, won its first city title in more than 20 years with a 40-13 thumping of Rogers for the eighth grade crown.

Caroline approaches 18

By LESTER DAVID
New York Times Special Features

At the threshold of 18 — her birthday is Thursday — Caroline Kennedy is a quixotic mixture of personalities. She is a sensitive teen-ager, pathetically seeking the approval of her friends. She is an uninhibited young hoyden, acting silly and engaging in uproarious stunts when the mood comes upon her. She is a serious-minded young woman who thinks deeply about the world and her place in it.

But she is not yet ready to enunciate her views about herself and the world in a formal interview. On the telephone, she tells why, simply but poignantly: "I've never been interviewed before." There is a pause and she continues: "I'm afraid the questions will bring up memories from the past."

Her voice is low and strong with a cultivated Eastern prep school accent which bears no trace of the flat Bostonian tones of her father or the little-girl breathiness of her mother. She appreciates being asked but she declines and in her brief explanation there is a hint that the world will some day hear from her: "I have nothing to say," she says, and pauses again before adding: "right now."

In private, however, Caroline has strong views and feelings which she does not hesitate to express and, in fact, acts in a manner that has to shatter, once and for all, the legend of "shyness" and "reserve" that has grown up with her.

Actually, at times she is astonishingly uninhibited. ("A pure nut!" one friend says admiringly.)

Caroline and her brother John have been among the most closely guarded children of our times, but for her the sheltered days are over.

AFTER GRADUATION from Concord Academy, Caroline went to England for a year's study at the London art auction house, Sotheby's. With 49 other students, she will spend the year in an art-appreciation course which includes visits to galleries and museums in England and on the continent, attending lectures and learning how to appraise the value of works of art. Caroline had applied and been accepted at Radcliffe College, the women's division of Harvard University, but decided to put off college in favor of a year's art study.

Her stay in London has not been without incident. On Oct. 23, a bomb exploded outside the residence of Hugh Fraser, a member of Parliament with whom she was staying. One man, a leading British cancer specialist, was killed in the blast. No motive has yet been discovered for the bombing, but police said they did not believe Caroline was the target.

If there are many sides to Caroline, the facet that gleams brightest, and is inescapable to anyone who knows her, is her abiding interest in and love for John F. Kennedy.

There is a special relationship between all fathers and daughters but, given the tragic circumstances of his death and his place in history, Caroline's attachment to the memory of the murdered President is deeper than most.

"I really loved him," she told young Juan Cameron. A tall youth from Washington with shoulder-length brown hair, Cameron was Caroline's boy friend during much of her final year at Concord Academy, an exclusive prep school where she studied during the past three years. They saw each other nearly every day, taking long walks, having dinner often, playing outrageous pranks — and talking endlessly. Juan, a 180-pound varsity football and lacrosse player, met Caroline in the fall of 1974 at Hickory Hill, the home of Ethel Kennedy. They were introduced by Michael, one of Ethel's sons and Juan's best friend.

NOW 17, Caroline Kennedy is participating in the night life and social scene during stay in London. Here, she leaves a party given for Andy Warhol. With her is Thomas Alexander Fermor-Hesketh, 25, third baron of Hesketh and one of England's most eligible bachelors. On top of stairs is Mark Shand, 24, whom newspapers call the favorite boy in her life.

"We'd talks about very personal things," Juan says in Dana Hall, his dorm at Middlesex, "like how we each are doing, what we feel, things like that about ourselves. Her father is supreme to her. He's on the top of her list of all the men she ever talks about. He was the best President the country ever had, she says, and because of him there's no doubt in her mind that she wants to spend her life doing some kind of public service work to carry on his traditions. She's made up her mind that she wants to follow in his footsteps."

In an elective office? Does Caroline plan some day to enter politics, perhaps become the country's first woman president? Juan laughs. "She might work in politics," he says, "but probably through the organizations that were his main interest while he was alive."

HER FRIENDS, sensitive, educated young people in college or college-bound, will rarely bring up the name of John Kennedy in her presence for fear of

Women excel in ROTC

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

Is it true love? Or mere infatuation?

That's a big question in military circles these days as increasing numbers of women seem to be losing their hearts to the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

According to statistics released by Army National ROTC headquarters in Monroe, Va., the number of women cadets has more than doubled since campus ROTC programs first began accepting women three years ago.

At many schools, an Army spokesman said, women comprise more than 30 per cent of this year's freshmen classes. The percentage at individual colleges may run higher, he said.

"Our percentage is going up all the time," said Mark Kodama, an information assistant for the Army ROTC program at UCLA.

"The first two years we made special efforts to recruit women," he admitted. "But this year we haven't done much at all."

The same kind of increased participation was reported by Maj. Isadore Washington Jr., a recruitment officer for the Air Force ROTC program at USC.

"As of 31 October 1975 we had 15 women enrolled in our program," Maj. Washington said. "This compares with eight women enrolled as of 31 October 1974."

Total enrollment in USC's AFROTC program, which involves students from 41 colleges and universities in the Southern California area, is 240 students, Maj. Washington said.

Maj. Washington, who is also a professor of aerospace science at USC, explained that the Air Force has long been an advocate of female participation in its officer training programs.

Women first participated in an AFROTC experimental program in 1956 and have been admitted to campus programs on a regular basis since 1970.

"In fiscal 1970 there were six women nation-wide in Air Force ROTC programs," he said. "This year there are 2,246 women participating in programs at 168 colleges."

WHY THE SURGE of interest among women in ROTC programs?

There are several reasons, military spokesmen agree. A major factor — or at least the most immediate one — is that participation in ROTC offers a way of financing the ever spiraling cost of higher education.

"I read about the four-year scholarships that were available if you got in the ROTC," said Gale Wuchner, a Long Beach State University freshman who is enrolled in UCLA's Army ROTC satellite program at LBSU.

"I didn't get the scholarship," the 18-year-old pre-medical student explained. "But I thought I'd try it out anyway to see how I liked it."

In addition to the four-year tuition and expenses scholarship, Army ROTC offers three-, two- and one-year scholarships for qualified students. Air Force ROTC cadets may compete for four-, three- and two-year scholarships.

Participants in advanced programs of either service (juniors and seniors) receive a $100 a month stipend. Scholarship recipients and those who receive the monthly stipend must agree to a period of active duty service upon graduation.

No commitment is required of freshmen and sophomore ROTC participants.

"Our experience has been that women compete favorably with men for scholarships," Maj. Washington said. "Of the 15 women now participating in our program, two are on three-year scholarship programs."

Military spokesmen believe that favorable publicity about the military as an equal opportunity employer and expanded opportunities for women also have contributed to the increased participation of women.

They explained that women are now fully integrated into the military service, barred only from flying planes (other than helicopters), serving aboard warships and bearing arms in combat.

Another factor, they added, is that the service is viewed as a good job in an uncertain economy.

HOW DO WOMEN PERFORM in comparison with their male colleagues?

COWBOY star Roy Rogers and his famous horse, Trigger — Trigger still resides at ranch, thanks to taxidermist.

Glad you asked that!

hy gardner

Q: When he was an eligible bachelor, was Henry Jackson ever in love with Princess Margaret? — Mrs. R. Layton, Seattle.

A: Such a rumor made the rounds of Washington society. Started by a local socialite, it stopped when the handsome Senator squelched the scoop. A would-be match-maker had suggested the pairing would "solidify relations between the U.S. and Great Britain." The "match" never ignited and Jackson married Helen Eugenia Hardin in 1961. They now have a son and a daughter.

Q: Some time ago Ray Charles told you he drove a car, sometimes flew a plane, despite his blindness. Isn't it dangerous to issue a blind person a driver's license? — L. Peabody, Philadelphia.

A: Definitely. Which is why the state of Tennessee recently issued "drivers licenses" to some 10,000 persons — provided they weren't used to drive! Human Service Commissioner Horace Bass explained that carrying a license would help such persons to cash checks and identify themselves, etc. Insofar as Ray Charles is concerned, he made it clear that nobody should try to do what he did — that it was foolhardy and dangerous.

Q: Robert Blake, who plays our favorite TV detective Baretta, even looks and acts like a real officer. Was he ever? Also, didn't he, as a kid, appear in "The Little Rascals"? — Pat Fasching, Pittsburgh.

A: No. Though Blake admits he was a little rascal, personally, he was not in that series. However, he played Mickey (opposite Spanky McFarland) for five years in the "Our Gang" comedies. He also played "Little Beaver" in the "Red Ryder" series.

The only time he was in a police uniform was when he was a motorcycle cop in the 1973 movie 'Electra Glide in Blue." His real name is Michael James Vijencio Bugitosi. "My father," he told a reporter, "was a frustrated show nut. And my mother was a plain neurotic, which made for a very crazy house."

Q: Is Roy Rogers' famous horse, Trigger, still alive? — Arthur Nardin, White Plains, N.Y.

A: No. Trigger died at a ripe old age a decade ago. Stuffed by a taxidermist, he now occupies a glassed-in cubicle in the Dale and Roy Rogers ranch in Apple Valley, Calif. Trigger's constant companion, the movie dog known as Bullet, shares the "stall."

Q: What was the epitaph Paul Newman once predicted would be on his tombstone? — Ms. Gladys Gallagher, Astoria, N.Y.

A: "It will probably read," smiled the blue-eyed superstar, "he was a terrific actor — until one day his eyes turned brown!"

Q: Following on the heels of daughters Zsa Zsa and Eva, I hear their mother, Jolie Gabor, has now written her life story. When will it be out? — Mrs. Cyril Burton, Philadelphia.

A: In the spring. As told to Cindy Adams. The gabby Jolie will relate how she raised her much-married maidens, Magda, Zsa Zsa and Eva. Mama admits she was very unhappy when Zsa Zsa divorced the late George Sanders and told him: "I like you so much as a son-in-law, I'll marry you to another one of my daughters." Sure enough Sanders later married Magda.

When Jolie's ship docked in Philadelphia, straight from Europe, she called Zsa Zsa to tell her, gleefully, that she had $100 with her. "That will buy you exactly two hats," was the girl's realistic reaction. Whereupon, with typical Gabor extravagance, Jolie tipped the ship's purser the $100 and launched her glamorous life in the new world flat broke — her only assets were her daughters!

ACTOR Robert Blake — star of television series "Baretta" was never real cop, but did start acting young.

SINGER Ray Charles — blind performer has done some scary things.

THE GABORS, Mama Jolie, center, Zsa Zsa, left, and Magda, right — Jolie's autobiography will soon tell more about the family's exploits. She liked one son-in-law so much, he married two of the daughters.

BLUE-EYED Paul Newman — wonders about value of eye color to acting ability.

Gershwin tunes bring audiences to his feet

If music is the stuff of life, the fiddlers are playing loud and clear. With any luck, rock and roll will get a decent funeral and we'll all be singing and humming and tapping our feet to good music again if the current craze for beauty continues in the upwardly mobile direction it's going. At least that's the way it looks in New York.

I can offer no better proof than the positively spectacular evening that took place in Lincoln Center as a tribute to the genius of lyricist Ira Gershwin. Mr. Gershwin will be 80 years old on Dec. 6. He is in such frail health that he couldn't travel. But he must have heard the applause and the beauty of his songs way out in Beverly Hills. It was a night to remember.

rex reed

Movie stars rubbed elbows with elderly dowagers lugging their last million in unhocked diamonds, while the cultured and the wise sipped champagne with Bette Midler freaks — proving, for always, that genius spreads to all ages and all persuasions when it has longevity.

What happened at Lincoln Center was as much a tribute to taste and intelligence as it was to Ira Gershwin, whose name and career have always been synonymous with both. Dolores Gray got everything off to a blazing start with "Fascinatin' Rhythm" and "I Got Rhythm," and there was no place to go from there but straight ahead. This woman lights up a stage like the Fourth of July, and if somebody doesn't get her back on Broadway, the world is in a sorrier state than we think.

She's a hard act to follow, but Harvey Evans and two delectable chorines brought down the house with "The Real American Folk Song Is A Rag," and the brilliant Anita Ellis sent electric shocks down the spine with "Someone To Watch Over Me" and "I Loves You Porgy." Chita Rivera sailed through the night in ostrich feathers and peach chiffon like the reincarnation of Terpsichore (Ginger Rogers, eat your heart out), and people like John Raitt, Sandy Stewart and Barbara Cook sang medleys of Gershwin that reddened a thousand eyes with tears and a thousand hands with applause.

IT WAS A NIGHT of show-stoppers, with each successive performer trying to top everybody else. But one major surprise that knocked the audience off its feet was the unexpected appearance of that saucy, sexy, Southern spitfire Elizabeth Ashley, wrapped in a black satin slip cut up to her Christmas decorations; swinging and saying the Gershwin-Kurt Weill "Saga of Jenny" while six chorus boys tossed her toward Heaven. The screaming crowd went berserk, and that was only the first act.

After intermission, during which voices came from everywhere echoing approval ("They should have recorded this night!" "It makes me feel alive again!"), Barbara Cook, who has one of the most beautiful voices ever heard by man, electrified the stately old Avery Fisher Hall with her moving rendition of "The Man I Love." Elizabeth Ashley got sawed in half by Doug Henning of "The Magic Show" while singing "Do Do Do What You Done Done Done Before." Kitty Carlisle Hart made one of her rare, magic appearances shimmering like a summer sundae in pink lemonade chiffon while her still gorgeous, lyric soprano voice hauntingly recreated "My Ship" from "Lady in the Dark," a show Ira Gershwin worked on with Kitty's late husband, Moss Hart. As I said, it was one of those nights that made history and made you wonder where all that beauty and genius and wit has gone in the declining years of musical theater.

We soon found out where it went when they brought out Jerry Orbach, a tone-deaf mediocrity who appears in the current musical, "Chicago." This was the kind of evening that separated the men from the boys, and poor, ossified Orbach proved what league he belongs in by turning out to be the night's only non-professional embarrassment. For some mysterious reason that can only be explained by the producers, Orbach was handed a plum in two of Gershwin's greatest triumphs, "How Long Has This Been Going On" and "S'Wonderful." He turned them into dirges, his voice wandering unsteadily through several keys beyond his range and ability.

BUT IT WAS ALSO the kind of night in which even a grave error like that could be forgiven. Quickly dismissed by mild, polite applause, he was immediately replaced before the audience whispers of astonishment could accelerate by the magnificent Chita Rivera, who woke everybody up to a standing ovation with her splashy production number, "Sam and Delilah" from "Girl Crazy."

And there was more: Bobby Short, demonstrating the ease and polish that has crowds filing in to hear him nightly at the Cafe Carlyle, waxing "I Can't Get Started" to a thrilling sheen. Gotham, that daffy singing trio, appeared in safari suits and pith helmets doing Gershwin's pastiche, "Sunny Disposish," and then the fireworks exploded. Another big-game hunter skated forth from the wings to tumultuous applause. Her name was Bette Midler, and if anybody still needs proof that Ira Gershwin is just as relevant and applicable to 1975 as he was to the music of the better musical years, she sealed the legend in gold.

After setting off a few kegs of her own dynamite with the obscure comedy tune "My Cousin From Milwaukee," she gleefully chided the audience ("This is the classiest night I've ever been associated with") and the orchestra ("We're all working free tonight except the band -- right, fellas and gals?"), and paid her own rhythmic tribute to Ira Gershwin by singing, with great feeling and emotion, her own contemporary arrangement of a song that could well be the theme of all artists who have achieved individuality and originality. The song was "They Can't Take That Away From Me," and until you hear Bette Midler sing Ira Gershwin, you don't know what love is.

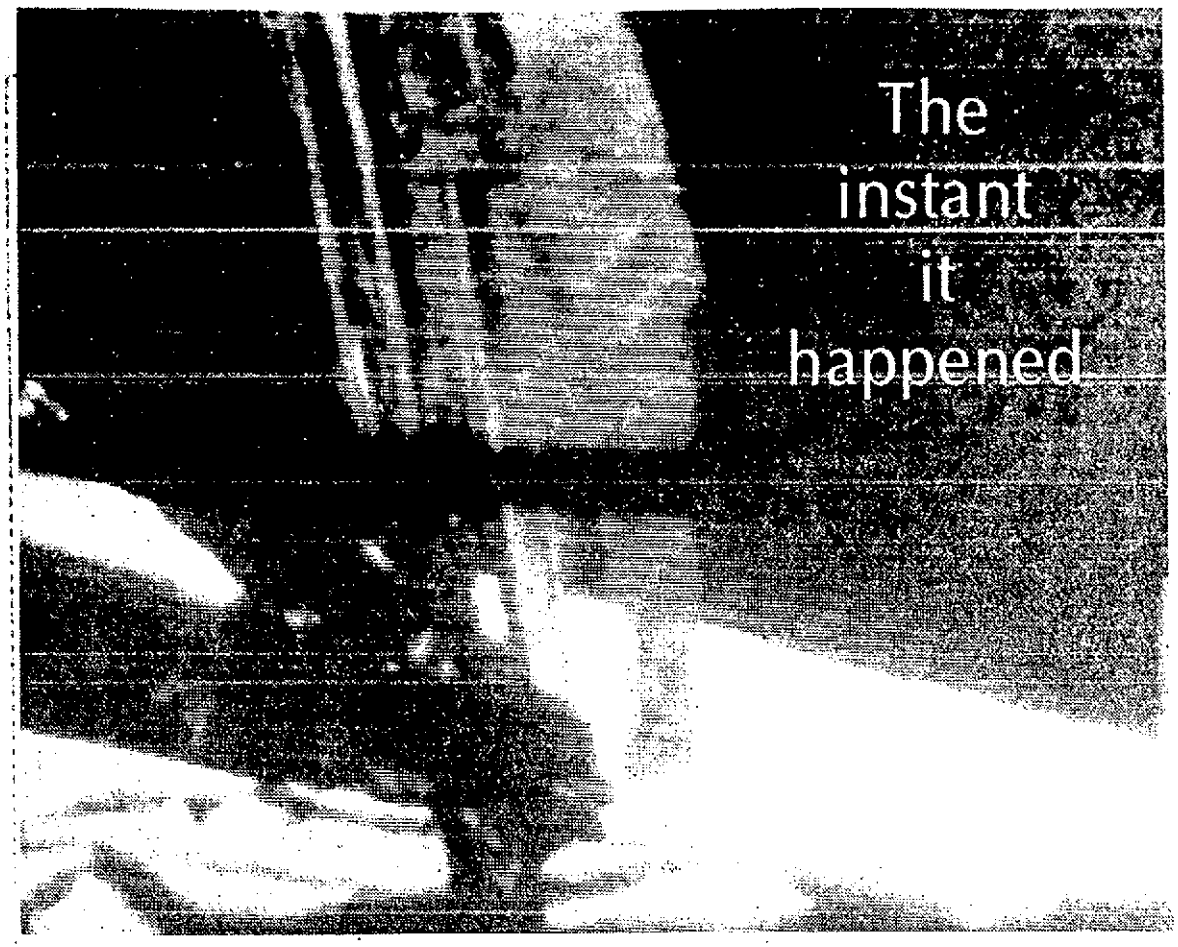

What seemed like 10 high school marching bands suddenly descended upon Lincoln Center at that precise moment, playing "Strike Up The Band" while baton-twirling nymphets and acrobats and cheerleaders turned the night into a cheering, screaming, riotous circus of joy and happiness. And above it all, the smiling caricature of Ira Gershwin beamed down from the massive stage with amusement and pride. A great night for a great man, and long may his cherished lyrics reign supreme.

ANOTHER KIND of patchwork quilt musical evening is currently packing them in on Broadway. It's called "A Musical Jubilee," and while it is not especially well directed or interestingly choreographed, it does provide a cornucopia of enchanting musical memories performed by a first-rate cast of troupers — Patrice Munsel, John Raitt, Tammy Grimes, Dick Shawn, Cyril Ritchard, Larry Kert and the indefatigable Lillian Fish who is older than Santa and

IRA GERSHWIN ...his music is still magic

Sunday, July 20, 1969...4:17:42 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time.

"Houston. Tranquility Base here. The Eagle has landed."

"Roger, Tranquility. We copy you on the ground. You've got a bunch of guys about to turn blue. We're breathing again. Thanks a lot."

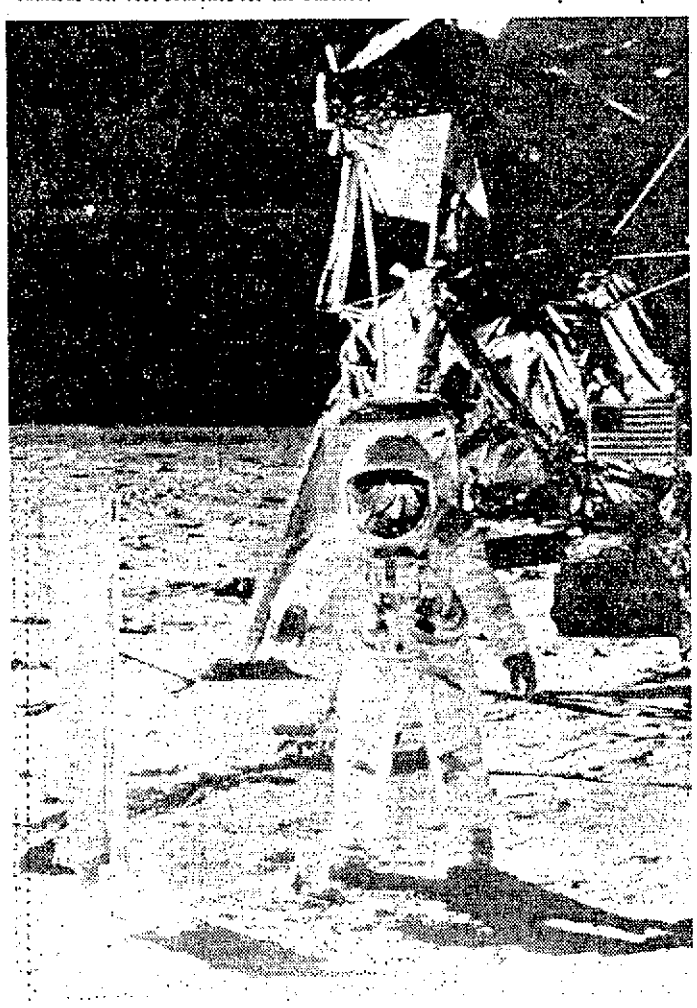

The culmination of centuries of dreaming: a ten-year, $20 billion drop in the bucket of time.

Now it is 10:56:20, the same day. A cautious left boot searches for the surface, and the shadowy figure steps off. "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

The staticky voice presses across 238,000 miles. And almost all the world watches and listens. Neil Alden Armstrong, 28, from a place called Wapakoneta, Ohio, on the planet earth, a man with an ordinary size 9½ foot, takes the first step on the moon.

"The surface is fine and powdery. I can pick it up loosely with my toe. It does adhere in fine layers like powdered charcoal to the sole and sides of my boots...I can see the footprints of my boots and the treads in the fine, sandy particles."

Vanguard, Explorer, Shepard, Grissom, Glenn, and always behind the Russians. Trailing the Sputniks, the Gagarins, the Titovs. Three men dead in a burning moon ship. But now, suddenly, the race is over. An American flag is unfurled on the moon. President Nixon says, "As a result of what you have done, the world has never been closer together."

Odd the way it happens. A picture taken by a robot television camera aboard a disposable landing craft named Eagle records the imperishable moment. Later, like tourists everywhere, the moon visitors photograph each other and Armstrong snaps his co-pilot, Edwin E. Aldrin, setting up a solar wind test. And man wins a new planet to walk on because two nations are locked in a contest for prestige on earth.

Ole, Acapulco! say L.B. Yacht Club Anglers

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN
Life/style Editor

WITH CAROLYN nursing the painful wounds of bursitis, comes an opportunity to fill this space with a few vacation reminiscences of last week's visit to Acapulco with 52 ardent anglers from Long Beach Yacht Club.

Well, those who weren't ardent anglers were ardent shoppers, and everyone got what they bargained for.

Festive mood began with a champagne flight, courtesy Western Airlines, aboard one of the city's finest Big Blue Buses, to L.A. International and the flight South of the Border.

Norm and Iola Masterson were trip chairmen, with an able assist from co-chairpersons Perry and Bernice Maxson, and travel service director Jim Worsham and Pauline, who had on-going hospitality hour in their adjoining rooms at Hotel Fiesta Tortuga.

So successful was the angling, a sailfish was the prize for anyone interested in dropping a hook into the water. A new, and welcome practice from previous fishing forays into Mexico, is the thrill and skill of fighting the good fight, then freeing the fish to swim again instead of being brought ashore for photographs and then carted off to the local fertilizer factory.

Ranking in first place in the ardent fishing class were Dr. Gordie and Dr. Olive Bateman who fished four of the six days. First day out, Dr. Olive fought and won a 100-pound sailfish on 12-pound test, and did as well on following days.

First place in the shopping class went to Hope Cunningham and Middie Masterson who waved farewell to Bob and Mel from shore and lit out for the shops, finding original Mexican designs to carry them through all the holiday parties to come.

In search of silver, Jerry and Corrie DeWit, Dick and Vera Brookins, Les and Mary Alice Dahl, Hal

carolyn mcdowell is ill

Bower and Elaine Kaylor and the Worshams made a speed run to Taxco to sightsee and spend.

Unfortunately, the trip was not as speedy as anticipated and they missed one of the trip highlights, a ceviche (for the uninitated, fabulous seafood cocktails) and margarita party hosted by the tour's traveling bachelor-types, Don Gillespie, Jim Pine and Ray Hagan. Polly Merrill, felled by Montezuma, missed the party, too, and sent Jack to enjoy her share of the goodies.

Last night out was a gala fiesta, with the women resplendent in their Mexican purchases, and the men handsome in thir embroidered Yucatan shirts, the "in" apparel for tourist and native alike. A personal alas. My tree of life skirt languished on its hanger, my 140 peso hairdo languished on the pillow and husband Harry, after seeing my needs were met by the Drs. Bateman, went off to mariache on his own with traveling buddies Frank and Ann Wade.

The group continued its fiesta mood the following Tuesday when Anglers met for their monthly dinner at LBYC and again on Thursday night for the Yacht Club's annual meeting when one of their number, Ron Dean, was elected port captain, while wife, Van, beamed.

And, thanks to the talents of Official Trip Photographers Lyle and Jo Abbott and Dr. Bob and Muriel Hastings, the colorful memories live on.

LAST SATURDAY was a day harpist Harriet Woods won't soon forget. Not that she'd want to, but she may still like to catch her breath.

Harriet, who likes to play her harp morning, noon, and night, set it aside the other Saturday afternoon to play hostess at a wedding shower for Linda Swanson.

Linda is the daughter of former Long Beach residents Bob and Pat Swanson. The Swansons moved to the high and mighty Mt. Washington area of Los Angeles only last year.

Harriet played her harp earlier in the afternoon at a fashion show in Costa Mesa before rushing home just 15 short minutes before her shower guests began to arrive.

She had gotten up at 6 a.m. that morning to make a batch of bread dough so that all shower guests could have the fun of making bread dough ornaments, paint them, and present them to the guest of honor.

With little time to relax after the last guests had departed, Harriet had to hasten down to the University of Irvine to play her harp that evening with the orchestra for the production of "My Fair Lady."

Never fear, however. Harriet will have time to take a few deep breaths before Linda's wedding to Gary Jackson at the Mission Inn, Riverside, on Dec. 27.

IT'S NICE to be remembered — something Vera Swope came to realize very pleasantly the other day when her two daughters, Marilyn Shirley and Marcia Foley, helped her celebrate her 75th birthday with a luncheon at Marilyn's home.

Vera had a chance to do some remembering of her own when the party turned into a reunion of teachers with whom she had worked years ago at Jefferson and Rogers Junior High Schools.

Party-goers were Lea Hunt, Hazel Liff, Margaret Parsons, Ethel Johnson, Vera Jackson, Mary Grant, Bernie Graham, Mary Jane Parker and the honoree's sister, Genevieve Fisher.

ANOTHER BIRTHDAY party had Pamie Cincola all at sea when her husband Mike gave her a surprise steak dinner party aboard the charming Bucaneer Queen. Not a bad way to turn 30.

Pamie, by the way, is PTA president at Minnie Gant Elementary School where everyone is paying attention to the Bicentennial. So naturally, the cake Mike ordered was in the shape of a Betsy Ross flag.

Besides her in-laws, Pauline and Mitt Cincola, Pamie was toasted by Jean and Dr. Gus Rose, Audrey and Jack Cardall, Trudy and Bill Cheney, Toni and Bob Ball, Lois and Dr. Ed Stemmer, Judy and Drew Ebright, Dottie and Tom Beck, Marie and Chuck Baughman, Barbara and David Heald, Virginia and Homer Davis, Sue and Clovis Putney, Ellie and John Eastman, Gracia and Ron Foster, Sylvia and Bill Fedak, Marge and Mel Harbert, Cynthia and Al Muir, Nina and Lew Berg, Jean and Dwayne Studer, and Pat and George Rory.

AT WIT'S END

Ode to the peanut

A young student wrote me this week, "Thank you very much for your biography which I was going to use for a term paper on persons I most admire. However, it arrived too late, so I did one on Fidel Castro."

There isn't a parent reading this column who will not understand that letter.

A "paper" at our house isn't just an assignment from a teacher, it's a "sentence" for the entire family.

The drama usually unfolds on a Sunday evening when, right in the middle of "Kojak," our son will ask out of left field, "Dad, who invented peanuts?"

"Planters. And turn the TV set up if you're going to carry on a conversation."

"What influence would you say peanuts had on the western world?" he pursues.

The entire family gives him their attention. "Why do you want to know?"

"I am doing a paper on the physical and psychological significance of peanuts on western civilization."

"WHAT HAVE YOU got so far?"

"Planters. Source of Ref: Dad, 1975."

"Get those reference books off the shelf," says his father, swinging into action. "Let's see now, peanuts . . . see Goober."

"I remember him from 'Mayberry, RFD.'" said our daughter.

"That has nothing to do with peanuts."

"Maybe Charlie Schulz . . ."

"Aha! Carver. Did he discover peanuts or was it soy beans?"

"Call the Bruners. They have a dictionary."

"Did you taste that meat loaf where Pat put in soy beans? It was delicious."

"Mom! Forget the meat loaf. My future is at stake. I have to trace the entire history of peanuts from Biblical times right up to present day. We're talking about 80 pages with a bibliography and table of contents!"

"When is it due?"

"Tomorrow morning."

Hours later, as we're all poring over every scrap of reference in the house on peanuts, he announces, "I've changed my mind. I'm doing a paper on how John Wayne changed the face of the West."

Seek ROTC's educational advantages

For the most part, spokesmen agree, women do as well if not better than men participating in ROTC programs.

"One of the highlights for AFROTC cadets is nomination for and appointment to cadet commander," Maj. Washington said. "Of the eight nominated for cadet commander for this spring, three are women."

Maj. Washington continued:

"We have found women to be competent leaders . . . they have successfully performed most leadership functions . . . all possess leadership, creative ability, initiative, aggressiveness, self-confidence . . . all the qualities found in a successful Air Force officer.

" . . . they prove men do not have a monopoly on these qualifications."

Both Kodama and Capt. Michael Thompson of the Army ROTC agreed that the 16 women enrolled in their program compete very well with men.

"Women are competing equally if not better than men," Capt. Thompson emphasized. "And that's not just academically. That's across the board. We've got a couple of supergirls at UCLA."

Maj. Washington and Capt. Thompson also agreed that thus far, women drop out of their programs with no more frequency than men. For both sexes, the attrition rate is high — between 50 and 60 per cent nationally — "but that's just a problem we have," Maj. Washington said.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Discover new use for gout medication

A RARE BUT DISABLING illness for which there is no known effective treatment may now have a remedy, researchers report.

The disorder is Mollaret's meningitis.

And the remedy is colchicine, a medication ordinarily used in the treatment of gout.

Four doctors in London, England, describe the case of a 63-year-old man who has had recurrent bouts of meningitis since January, 1972.

Mollaret's meningitis is characterized by attacks which recur at regular intervals of several weeks or months. A virus is suspected to be the cause of the disease.

This particular disorder begins as sudden attacks of recurrent fever, associated with headache, nausea, vomiting, neck rigidity, muscular pain and general discomfort.

ben zinser

The patient had suffered monthly recurrences.

Given colchicine, he has had only one attack since July, and it was much less severe than previous episodes.

Colchicine has a stabilizing effect on white cells, the doctors say, and Mollaret's meningitis is marked by an increase in white cells in the cerebrospinal fluid.

The report is in the Lancet, a medical journal.

Immunity levels among children one to four years old in the United States are still low enough to permit substantial spread of various diseases, reports the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Immunization levels among American children are no longer declining, but they are still dangerously low.

Immunizations increased last year for polio, measles, rubella (German measles), diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and mumps among those one to four.

But a national survey indicates that some 5.3 million children of nearly 13.2 million in this age group still are inadequately protected against all these diseases. About eight million are still susceptible to mumps.

THE WORLDWIDE incidence of smallpox has fallen sharply this year, notes the World Health Organization.

Only two countries, Bangladesh and Ethiopia, have been reporting active smallpox cases during the past few months.

But the number of new smallpox cases in Bangladesh has decreased greatly compared with the number of active cases reported during 1974.

In Ethiopia, 117 villages in 13 different geographic locations have reported smallpox.

Details are in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

YELLOW FEVER poses a threat in Bolivia.

Nearly 150 cases of jungle yellow fever, including 75 deaths, occurred in Bolivia during the first part of 1975.

Practically all of the reported cases occurred in persons who had not been vaccinated.

Newcomers to jungle areas have been especially vulnerable to yellow fever infection, according to the National Institute of Communicable Diseases, Bolivian Ministry of Health.

A NEW STUDY conducted in Great Britain shows that the drug sodium valproate can significantly reduce the frequency of both major and minor epileptic seizures when added to other anticonvulsive medications.

The drug is also known in Europe by the names Epilim and Depakine.

Details of the study are reported in the British Medical Journal.

THE PAIN RELIEF obtained with acupuncture may be merely a placebo effect, says a doctor.

Both acupuncture and a placebo (dummy pill) were effective in relieving shoulder discomfort in most of 42 persons tested.

A slightly greater number of the placebo group improved than did the acupuncture group, says Dr. Mary E. Moore of Temple University School of Medicine.

A HOT DOG, hamburger or even ice cream is a far better breakfast for the American worker than no breakfast at all.

So says Muriel S. Pappert, a member of the American Association of Industrial Nurses.

Mrs. Pappert, coordinator of health education for American Telephone & Telegraph, says that employes who eat breakfast tend to make fewer mistakes, have fewer accidents, are less irritable and get along better with co-workers.

"The body needs something to break the fast of the night before," she explains.

PHYSICAL FITNESS is directly related to reduced risk of coronary heart disease, says a noted authority on the topic, Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper.

In a study of 3,000 persons, blood pressure and blood-fat levels were found to be lower in physically fit individuals. These risk items were higher in persons in very poor physical condition.

Dr. Cooper, director of the Cooper Clinic, Dallas, Tex., devised in 1964 an exercise system for the astronauts. The system, called aerobics, builds the cardiovascular system. He has written best-selling books on the topic.

His latest report on fitness and coronary disease appears in Family Practice, a newspaper for physicians.

'Quality of life' at stake

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

"The level of the 'quality of life' in our city is the overall question posed by the presentation of this exhibition," says Jan Adlmann, director of Long Beach Museum of Art, about the show which opens next Sunday.

But "Long Beach Lost and Found" should be fun, as well. Assistant curator Helen Morgan has assembled a two-part exhibition of photographs, props, furnishings and memorabilia. One part brings back memories of movie palaces that were magnets in the 1930s. The second part is a photographic survey of more than 75 homes located in the Bluff Park community of Long Beach.

The exhibition will remain on view at the museum, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., through Jan. 4.

For the movie palace segment, Morgan relied heavily on the collection of Joseph J. Musil. He is a local designer who has created unusual wine shops and restaurants in the area and now is dedicated to preserving Long Beach motion picture theater architecture.

Trained as a set designer, Musil knows how much impact and imagination are needed to create for theater, either stage or motion pictures. When he was very young he began to collect photographs and memorabilia of Long Beach theaters — most of them long gone.

As guest curator, he writes that he hopes the viewer will find the exhibition an unusual, exciting experience as well as one of warmth and nostalgia. "Especially, " he says, "for those who remember the 9 cent Saturday matinee at the Ritz or the 37 cent general admission to the Strand on the Pike for two movies and five acts of headline vaudeville.

LUANNE PRYOR is guest curator for the display of Bluff Park homes. An eight-year resident of Long Beach, Mrs. Pryor's interest in historic preservation began many years ago in her native Denver where she grew up in an English Norman mansion. Later, in New York, when she was involved in a 10-year career in photojournalism with Look Magazine, she and her husband bought the famous Juilliard estate at Tuxedo Park. Although they abandoned restoration plans, she saved fixtures and paneling reminiscent of turn-of-the-century aristocracy.

Ever since, she has been deeply interested in preservation. In fact, she will appear Tuesday before the Long Beach City Council's Environmental Quality Committee to formally request that the city establish a Cultural Heritage Commission.

She notes, "Historic preservation is no sentimental adventure. It is a movement to preserve individuality in a world of sameness. What we have been, what we are now and what we can be in the future may all be merged together. Each person, each city and each nation must set its own priorities. However, we should well remember that the environment in which we live affects our everyday lives.

"In Long Beach, the number of structures of historic value already destroyed is considerable. The best of what we had is gone. The time has come to take a close look at what is left. The photographic exhibit of houses in the Bluff Park area illustrates a neighborhood with great character. There are others still left throughout the city. But if they aren't preserved, like those before them they will disappear, taking with them the very heart and character of the city."

THE ARTS were discussed from many points of view at the Quarterly Congress of the Arts at Golden Sails Inn. The luncheon meeting mainly concerned a panel discussion on "Government in the Arts — State, County and City". Panelists were Daniela Quinn, special consultant on the arts for Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.; Jule Foster, administrator of Los Angeles County Music and Performing Arts Commission; and Mayor Thomas Clark of Long Beach. John Watts, associate dean of the school of fine arts at Long Beach State University, was moderator.

In his introduction, Watts said that government in the arts is not new, that in fact, it dates back to 1628 when Miles Standish took one Thomas Morton in custody for arranging a community maypole celebration with poetry, music, dance and public participation. He added that despite the creation of the National Endowment for the Arts and other agencies, there remains an atmosphere of "confrontation, collision, suspicion and distrust."

Quinn explained that when Gov. Brown took office he had plans to change state support for the arts but first wanted ideas and reactions of arts groups. After many meetings, he and his staff found no consensus among artists. "The arts community was splintered as no other group in the state. Four arts bills were in committee. Finally, the governor compiled his own bill and on Sept. 30 the new California Arts Council was created. It will become effective Jan. 1."

FOSTER reviewed the role of the County Music and Performing Arts Commission which has been active for 27 years. "Of the $1 million the board of supervisors this year allocated for the arts, only five per cent went for administration. Some 56 organizations benefited, including 27 community orchestras. "Our policy is the reverse of the usual process where money first is granted, then distributed. We recommend the amount we believe is needed to the supervisors, then they make the grant."

This year, the mandate outlining uses for the money has been broadened and with the new guidelines of the California Arts Council, Foster said many more activities can expect help.

Mayor Clark talked about the city's contribution to the arts, plans for Pacific Terrace and its facilities which will include a large hall with seating for 3,000 on the ground floor and for 2,000 in the balcony. A smaller hall will accommodate 850. He compared the new complex to the Los Angeles Music Center. "Long Beach has made a definite and successful effort to remain a community — not a suburb of Los Angeles."

He also noted that the Municipal Arts Commission, relatively ineffective in the past, will be restructured by the City Council for a more active role.

After a question and answer period and a slide presentation on "The City of Long Beach" by Robert C. Benson of the Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce, Jerome H. Leff, president of Long Beach Regional Arts Council, and Doris Stovall, executive director, reported on the arts council's plans for the "Great Bicentennial Congress of the Arts Fair" to be held in Recreation Park July 3 through 6.

'Amahl' opera Christmas benefit

Long Beach Symphony Association has completed plans for its Christmas Benefit Concert — a concert which it hopes will be a source of gifts to Long Beach through the years.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," staged by the Pacific West Coast Opera Company, will be given Sunday, Dec. 14, at 2:30 p.m. in Lakewood High School Auditorium, 4400 Briercrest Ave. Pre and post concert music will be a contribution of the Long Beach Municipal Band.

Tickets, at $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children 14 or younger, may be purchased in person or by calling or writing to the symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

Since the gentle opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti first was performed on Christmas Day, 1951, it has become one of the most beloved holiday traditions. Its tender story of the little crippled boy, his encounter with the Three Kings seeking the Christ Child and his own generous gift to the babe embodies the true meaning of Christmas.

Beau Palmer of Los Angeles plays Amahl. Others in the cast are Gordon Ewing, Robert Swedberg, Anne Eagle Machamer, David Pittman Jennings and Richard Sisson.

AS FOR THE continuing gifts to Long Beach that this concert may generate:

In June, the Symphony Association established an Education and Performance Endowment Fund and all previous memorial gifts were transferred to this account.

Mrs. Edward A. Killingsworth is chairperson of the fund. She said, "It is my firm belief that this fund shall play a very important part in the symphony's plans to bring every conceivable opportunity for the people of Long Beach to hear and participate in live symphonic performances.

"For instance, through this fund, we hope to re-establish awards to young aspiring musicians, to help finance free concerts in the schools, to provide means to finance special worthwhile projects which might otherwise be left undone and, lastly, to provide a perpetual means of assuring the orchestra's continued existence.

"Gifts to the Endowment Fund are specially significant since each donation, no matter how large or small, will be placed permanently as a part of the fund. Only the interest from this investment will be used by the association for programs and projects.

"IT IS INDEED comforting for those of us who have worked over the years to see the successes of the Long Beach Symphony, to know that in future years this fund will become one of the major sources of revenue for the symphony."

Therefore, attendance at "Amahl and the Night Visitors" can provide not only a delightful musical experience — it can contribute to future musical development since proceeds will swell the Endowment Fund.

Mary Costa to sing in concert Friday

Mary Costa, Metropolitan Opera star, will appear in concert Friday at 8 p.m. in Garden Grove Community Church Auditorium, 12141 Lewis St. The 1,700-seat glass sanctuary is located at the intersection of Chapman Avenue and Lewis Street, one-half mile west of the Santa Ana Freeway.

This will be Miss Costa's only Orange County concert this season. It is presented in conjunction with Artist Series '75-'76, sponsored by the Christian Development Center for the Performing Arts and the Orange County Cultural Center, Inc. Tickets, priced at $6, may be purchased at the auditorium.

In addition to her roles with the Metropolitan Opera, Miss Costa has sung at Covent Garden, with the Bolshoi Opera in Moscow, and has given performances in Geneva and Lisbon. She has performed with virtually every major orchestra and opera company in the United States.

Widows pay price for over-protection

By DARRELL SIFFORD
Knight News Service

Back in the summer I interviewed a widow of 10 months who talked about the agony of readjustment and how ill prepared she was for it.

Among readers who responded was Mrs. Hertha Hahne of Philadelphia, who is in her 70s and who was widowed in 1949.

She wrote:

"My advice...to all wives of still loving and living husbands is: Don't let him be overprotective and shield you from all unpleasant affairs. You may pay a bitter price for it.

"Be aware of what he earns, of his pensions and insurance. And most of all — pamper his body, care for his health and preserve him for a ripe old age as much as you can by providing a peaceful home, with no nagging, no pushing for higher achievements and promotions. Enjoy the bliss of a good marriage as long as possible.

"Our men are made of frailer stuff than we are and they need pampering and coddling all their lives to survive the struggle of a cruel business world."

Mrs. Hahne is a native of Germany, came to the United States in the late 1920s. She has three children, including a daughter who is a professor of economics at Temple University, and nine grandchildren. Her husband of 30 years, at the time of his death at age 60, was an engineer and vice-president of a fabric company.

In an interview she talked about American marriage as she perceives it:

"THERE IS MUCH pressure on the typical businessman — the worries of running a business, of trying to get higher on the corporate ladder. He takes his worries home, but he rarely talks about them — because he doesn't want to bother his wife. By training he is made to feel that a husband should be all-knowing and all-protective.

"So he worries in silence. His wife, because he doesn't share his worries, thinks he is happy in his work. Then one day he suffers a heart attack, a stroke or develops pneumonia. And the wife wonders why."

Question: What would you suggest that the wife do — before the heart attack strikes her husband?

Answer: She ought to leave him be, not insist that they go out so often if he's tired. She should let him stay at home and enjoy an evening nap.

She should back off and let her husband proceed at his own pace in business and not put her own personal need of status so high that he must double or triple his income to satisfy her ambitions. American women, I find, tend to push husbands to achieve. And often they don't notice that the health is being broken in the process. So they are losing the goose that lays the golden egg.

Men are made of frailer stuff than women. I could see that in my baby boy in contrast to my baby girls. They need much more attention and care even when they are very young.

Men, beginning in their 50s, usually show signs of wear and energy drain from all their years of toiling. You can look in the obituaries every day and see how many businessmen have died at the peak of their careers — 45, 51, 60.

"You can look in the obituaries every day and see how many businessmen have died at the peak of their careers."

TO ANY WOMAN — no matter how young or how healthy her husband is — I would say: Prepare yourself to know enough to take your place in the business world. If you're faced with it, be sure you have the ability, strength and power to make a life of your own.

Q. How dies a wife prepare herself?

A. If she has no training, then she needs to go back to school — a business school or whatever. Maybe she can train to be an interior decorator if she has an interest in that. I had a friend who tried the landscaping business — because it always had appealed to her. A woman needs to draw on what she has been doing and add to it.

In my case, at one time, I trained in cosmetology, opened a special salon. Maybe because of my personality and foreign accent it became a hit.

Q. What happens if the wife has a husband who's threatened by all this?

A. It happens. No man would like his wife to put him in the shadows or question his ability to take care of family needs. It all depends on how the wife explains it to him. It can take a great deal of tact.

In my case, when I went to work, my husband didn't object because we could use the extra money to help finance his new business.

But a husband must understand that there is no shame connected with his wife's working. If a man likes his wife's looks, her personality, her graciousness as a hostess, well, then he also should like her ability to succeed in a job and make money. It's not taking anything away from him.

Q. What advice would you have for the wife whose husband is overprotective, won't discuss financial matters with her?

A. She must convince him of the need to share these matters with her. If the husband is overprotective, the wife has no idea of where she stands. She doesn't know her assets, where the important papers are filed. She may not even know how to balance a checkbook.

The husband may think he's doing her a great favor by shielding her from these realities. But, if he dies, she's left floundering. If a wife isn't in the know on family assets, she's like a business that makes a budget on non-existent capital.

Women are asking...

"How can I customize my pantsuit so it doesn't look like everyone else's?"

By REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL

A pair of patches can do wonders for personalizing a pantsuit. If you use more appliques in forming a pattern or scene, you're on target for some fall fashion fun.

Since the Bicentennial is upon us, many are using appliques in red, white and blue. Others go the sew-on route and select ready-made appliques. Stars, fruits, vegetables, animal shapes are available so you can dress up the yoke of a jacket, decorate a sleeve, or trim the pants and cuff. Still others, with needle know-how, are embroidering their own style signatures on the apparel.

Everything from handbags, to hats, to skirts, to parkas is getting the patch treatment. Recently, a group of college students completed a cross-country tour and saluted this fact with an iron-on bike patch decorated in red, white and blue stars and stripes. To secure to fabric, they used a dry iron at the wool setting, pre-warmed area where patch was to be applied, covered patch with pressing cloth, held iron on cloth 10 to 15 seconds, then allowed to cool.

If you would like a free iron-on patch, saluting the All-American bike tour (only one request in each letter), send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Reba & Bonnie Churchill, Independent Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

The Aces on Bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

We have a player who is always disorderly in placing the dummy. Who is authorized to rearrange some of dummy's cards?

Co-Defendant
Denver

Answer: A defender should not touch dummy's cards, but may ask the dummy or declarer to arrange them properly.

In the Summer Nationals held in Miami, declarer said to dummy, who had accidentally covered some cards with cigarettes, "Please uncover the diamonds." Dummy did so, showing the J-9-7-5-2. "Ugh," said declarer, "cover them up again."

Dear Mr. Corn:

We reached a slam, down one, on these cards.

Who gets the blame for over-bidding?

Wrong Ace
Milwaukee

Answer: Both of you. East was not strong enough for an initial two over one response and West didn't have to jump to four clubs since three clubs would have forced to game.

West was unwise to ask for aces with a void suit because the information might prove valueless, as it did. I would estimate the fault as West 75 per cent; East 25 per cent. I suggest this bidding.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened and I made a jump shift. The next player bid and partner passed. I say partner was forced to bid; others say not. Who is right?

No Agreement
Pacific Grove, Calif.

Answer: Your partner was not forced to bid since the opponent's bid kept the bidding open for you to continue. The pass should show a minimum hand, no great support for your suit and a willingness to defend if responder chooses to double the opponents.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I dealt and opened three spades. Next player bid four hearts and partner doubled. Was I right in passing with this hand?

Montgomery, Ala.

Answer: I have little criticism of the three spade opening, although my preempts are much weaker in high cards. Given the preempt, the pass was certainly clear cut since opener had much more defensive strength than could reasonably be expected.

It's an easy and inexpensive project, something that will last a lifetime. The well shown was made of standard lumber sizes available from all lumber dealers. In addition to its decorative and rustic charm, it can also be a very practical garden center. The bucket may be planted with flowers or the artificial variety may be used.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Spotlight on melton coating

frances dietrich

The word "melton" evokes a mental picture of a man's overcoat of many years ago, heavy, elegant and practically indestructible. The fabric was phased out to make way for lighter weight more casual topcoats.

Now, melton is being reintroduced; recognition of one of the all-time classic wool fabrics, which is just the ticket for today's smart sports outerwear for women and men.

There has never been a time when cold-weather sportswear was more in demand, whether in spectator styling or designs for rugged, active wear. Melton is also favored by designers of women's wear, who use it in long roomy coats, pea jackets, duffel coats and in wrap-styling.

Mundane "overcoat" colors have given way to orange, bright blue, camel color, red, green and bright plaids.

THE ORIGINAL melton was designed with a purpose: to provide the fox-hunting gentry of wooded Melton Mowbray in Leicestershire, England, with a sturdy, warm cloth for riding habits, which could be superbly tailored.

Melton is still created in very much the same way. There are varying weights, and quality depends upon the richness of the wool used. It is a plain woven woolen cloth, which is deliberately felted.

The newly woven cloth is run through warm, soapy water, then pounded and twisted to make the fuzzy woolen fibers interlock. After a cold rinse, which shrinks the weave and tightens the interlacing yarns, it goes through another torturous process. It is drawn through a series of rollers covered with fine wire hooks, which pluck up surface fibers.

This napping process gives the tough fabric a soft, smooth feel. The felting and napping combination makes the fabric warm and increases its durability. Melton has a distinctive appearance, being subtly napped and nonlustrous.

MELTON IS unique among felted and napped fabric such as kersey, beaver cloth and woolen broadcloth in that it has the shortest raised nap. In addition to all the other processes that melton goes through, it is double-sheared in order to get the close-cropped effect.

There is not a large amount of melton retail yardage or ready-to-wear, but if the wool growers of America have anything to do about it, you'll be seeing a lot more of this fabric and other wool classics. More sheep are being raised in more scientific ways to produce more wool.

It is expected that as petroleum feedstock for the textile industry gets higher priced, fashion designers and clothing manufacturers will turn more and more to wool as a basic fiber.

Meanwhile, when you find a beautiful piece of melton for home sewing, treat it with the care it deserves. You'll find it shapes and stitches like all fine wool. Often, it is in the pressing process that your careful work may be negated.

Though melton is sturdy, its napped surface requires a light hand with the iron. To prevent overpressing, which gives a shiny look, use low iron temperature, light pressure and a barely damp, not wet, press cloth. You can control the amount of moisture by dampening one-third of the cloth, then roll and wring to distribute moisture.

Press all seams as they are sewed. Do not wait until the garment is completely constructed.

Pots, pans kept mirror bright at very little cost

the Formula

By NORMAN H. STARK

Finished metals are, at least in my opinion, beautiful materials. They are made in many degrees of hardness and are therefore very versatile. But to keep them looking bright requires occasional cleaning and polishing.

This formula will keep all metals looking the way they did when they came from the mills. Take one-eighth cup of TRI SODIUM PHOSPHATE (TSP) (available at paint or hardware stores) and dry-mix with one cup of ordinary SODA ASH (also at hardware store) and add one-fourth cup of BAKING SODA, available at your grocers. Dip a damp cloth or sponge in the mixture and rub the metal. Rinse with clear water and dry with soft cloth.

The cost of making your own metal polish and cleaner is approximately five cents per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-brought brand by the number of ounces it contains. The compare the per-ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area. If you wish to make up a larger quantity — and save even more — buy your materials at a chemical supply company.

(Like any product you make at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

There has never been a how-to book so practical and helpful as THE FORMULA BOOK. Hundreds of easy recipes put savings and fun into the making of your own personal and home care items. Over 200 pages of recipes, diagrams and instructions on ingredients and equipment, in a large paperback format, for only $5.95. Send to Formula Book, c/o this newspaper.)

"Alamo's ideas in remodeling and decorating are great"
Richardson's

Actual Photograph of the Richardson's New Room

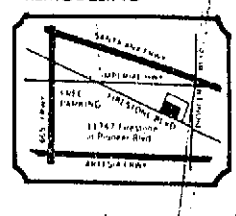

When Mr. and Mrs. Richardson decided to add a room to their home, they shopped around. They wanted to find a company that could do the job, and do it well. After talking to several companies they decided on Alamo. We asked Mr. Richardson why he chose Alamo. "It was the way they handled themselves, we were impressed with the people at Alamo Center. After the job was started we decided to change the position of the fireplace. This was done without problems or expense. The people at Alamo bent over backwards, to give us the room we wanted."

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are satisfied Alamo customers. If you are planning remodeling or adding a room to your home, talk to us. We will be happy to show you how Alamo can make your room addition or remodeling project simple, economical, and just right for you and your home. Alamo, the people who care.

EMMETT PARSONS
Plenty of fresh, firm swordfish

IN THE NEWSPAPER BIZ, we have such categories as "straight news" or "human interest" stories. I have one of each today concerning Cigo's, Pacific Avenue at Ninth Street, San Pedro, one of Southern California's truly superlative seafood houses.

First the news. Cigo's now has a big supply of fresh swordfish, the really good kind that has been extremely hard to obtain in recent years. Many seafood devotees (including me) consider the best swordfish to be superior to the more expensive ocean entrees, such as lobster or crab. Cigo's broiled swordfish steak is the firm but tender kind. The serving is generous — eight to nine ounces — and it's accompanied by all the many delectables of Cigo's fancy dinner, including antipasto of salami, cheese and marinated garbanzoes; splendid creamy Boston clam chowder AND salad; baked potato or mostaccioli pasta or French fries; hot cheesebread, coffee or tea. The price is $4.50, very reasonable for such a quality feast.

Now the human interest story. Cigo's is owned by Emmett Parsons who has lived in the San Pedro-Long Beach area since 1927. He is 5 feet, 6 inches tall. Recently he lost 11 pounds, so he is not nearly as round and fully packed as he used to be. Emmett's weight is a secret, but it is too soon for us to start calling him "Skinny." For a man to lose 11 pounds while surrounded by all those wonderful foods at Cigo's is indeed a miracle. Emmett quite obviously is proof that broiled seafoods aren't fattening.

If you happen to be on a diet, I have a suggestion that will bring you the ultimate in food pleasure. Sacrifice a little today. Eat only one meal. But let it be that feast at Cigo's. Enjoy all those many items including a baked potato, steaming and hot, oozing melted butter. Afterward, you'll wear a smile as bright as Emmett's. And tomorrow you can return to your regular diet.

Cigo's serves Sundays from 4 to 10 p.m.. The daily dinners are 3:30 to 10:30 p.m. and the popular luncheons are Monday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The facilities include a banquet room and cocktail lounge. The kitchen maestros are Tony Madrigal and Ralph Hedge, plus many assistants. They do outstanding work.

Also fresh on the menu are red snapper, $3.95; cabrilla whitefish from Mexico, $3.95, and white sea bass, $3.95. The supplies sometimes vary, according to weather conditions which may limit fishing boat activities. Cigo's has a bonanza of seafoods,as well as prime rib au jus and steaks, featuring abalone, halibut, sand dabs, shrimp, broiled squid, scallops, steamed clams, cracked crab and Dalmation-style cioppino. Unusually popular are the gourmet fish dinners, such as the mermaid, $6.75, or the fisherman, $7.95, including a huge variety of sea delicacies, some of which are quite exotic. (Cigo's will be closed Thanksgiving.)

LIFE SEEMS TO BE more complicated every year. In the past, most restaurants accepted phone reservations for their Thanksgiving Day feasts. But now there are many excellent restaurants throughout Southern California which don't accept reservations, serving on a first-come, first-served basis.

I'm happy to report, however, that the large, spacious Golden Sails Inn still serves its traditional Thanksgiving Day feast as it has done for years, accepting phone reservations. It's not too early to phone today to make certain you get a reservation.

The inn at 6285 E. Pacific Coast Highway at Loynes Drive is part of the multi-million dollar motel, restaurant and banquet center complex directed by John Apostle, one of Long Beach's leading businessmen for several decades. The glamorous, Mediterranean decor Espana dining room will start serving its Thanksgiving dinners at 11 a.m. and continue through 11 p.m. The menu will be prepared by the inn's large staff of culinary artists, working in their huge spic and span kitchen.

The Golden Sails' holiday dinner will include cream of fresh mushroom soup or mixed green salad; entree, appropriate vegetables, hot rolls with butter, coffee and such dessert choices as hot pumpkin or apple pie, ice cream or sherbet. The entrees will include roast young Vermont tom turkey, $5.65, with savory dressing, giblet sauce, cranberry sauce, whipped potatoes and green beans almondine; baked Virginia ham with Cumberland fruit-wine sauce, $5.65, including candied yams; juicy, tender roast prime rib of beef, $8.75, with creamed spinach and Yorkshire pudding; roast duckling with bigarade sauce and a compote of fruit, $8.35; veal Oscar, $8.75, with crableg and rich bearnaise sauce, and eastern prime New York steak, $9.95. Children's dinners will be $3.25.

The Golden Sails' banquet center is one of the largest in this area, with rooms of different sizes, some accommodating up to 750 guests. The Thanksgiving dinner will be served to family groups of 12 to 30 in private rooms or at large tables in the ballroom. Larger parties of 100 or more will be served in the banquet rooms. The prices for the groups will be the same as in the main dining room.

Caroline—JFK the number one man in her life

saddening her. "But she doesn't mind if they do, and she brings him into the conversation herself often," Juan points out. "Sometimes his name comes right off the top of my head, without thinking, but I can see that she doesn't feel bad. She's honored."

There is much other evidence that the memory of her father and his influence upon her have remained unusually strong in the dozen years since his assassination:

She surrounds herself with photographs of him, smiling pictures of the two together. Her room in Haines House at Concord during senior year, which she shared with Cynthia Porter of Brookline, Mass., was filled with them. She has two dozen in her large, bright bedroom in her mother's New York apartment on upper Fifth Avenue, overlooking Central Park. She carries pictures of him when she vacations and travels.

She has almost total recall of the White House years, though they ended when she was only six. Once she amazed the curator of Kennedy memorabilia when she entered a temporary building in Waltham, Mass., in which they were stored. She recognized at once all the objects the President had had in his office — everything from his famous rocking chair to the carved ivory or scrimshaw on his desk.

She asks probing questions of family friends who knew John Kennedy to tell her about him, everything from his pranks in prep school to the great events he helped shape. She has read many of the books written about him by historians and political analysts, and, in preparation for the life of public service she intends — at least for now — to follow, she has taken many courses in history, political science and international relations, and ecology.

Caroline was never very close to her late stepfather, Aristotle Onassis, but as the years passed she became increasingly fond of the rough-hewn billionaire. Onassis knew, according to his friends, that he could never assume the role of a real father to Caroline and John, but he was always unfailingly kind to them. Lemoyne K. Billings, a classmate of President Kennedy at Choate and a close family friend, told me: "Onassis made a big effort to be a good father."

Caroline spent many of her vacations on Skorpios, the private island the shipping tycoon owned off the coast of Greece, and saw him on his trips to New York. When Caroline's friends were visiting, he would come in, chat, make jokes.

In the end, Onassis succeeded in the difficult task of a stepfather: "I didn't see him that much," she confided to a classmate after her return from Onassis' funeral last Spring, "but I really did love him."

CAROLINE has always had a warm relationship with her mother, a tribute to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' determination to remain close to her children despite the incredible pressures of her own life. "I'm a woman above everything else," Mrs. Onassis once said in a rare moment of self-revelation. "I love children and I think that seeing one's children grow up is the most delightful thing any woman can think about." Throughout the years since the assassination, Jackie has fought hard to isolate and insulate her children from an intrusive world, to encourage their independence and at the same time to give them her presence and support. As far as it was possible under the extraordinary circumstances of their position, she wanted to give Caroline and John a normal childhood.

Her efforts have been largely successful. Caroline has weathered the difficult adolescent years with only minor squabbles over allowances and late hours. One family friend points out: "They have never had that love-hate relationship which exists so frequently among mothers and daughters." Declares Lem Billings:

"I've never seen any children so beautifully brought up. That's why I really admire Jacqueline. It's the greatest thing she has ever done — a woman with all her problems, to raise two such normal and attractive children. She's a wonderful mother."

There is, however, a difference in Caroline's attitude toward her parents, a difference one can readily understand and which Jackie doubtless realizes. A perceptive classmate who knows her well sums it up thusly: "She loves her mother, but she reveres her father."

Another measure of Jackie's success in raising her children in the face of fearful handicaps is that Caroline has grown up truly unspoiled. Though aware of her celebrity status, she comes across as unaffected, gacious and unfailingly polite. Because she is Caroline Kennedy, she gets awesome attention. Heads of state will often extend invitations to her when she visits their countries — last March, after Onassis died, she and John were invited to lunch with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing in Paris. (Giscard presented her aunt, Eunice Shriver, with the Legion of Honor medal for her work with handicapped children in France when her husband, Sargent Shriver, was U.S. ambassador.) She is impressed by these courtesies but will never expect or demand blue-ribbon handling from anyone, anywhere. She is more concerned about the opinions of her friends and classmates than any perquisites she may receive as a celebrity.

SHE IS, IN FACT, acutely sensitive to the attitudes of her peers. Thus her recurring bouts of despondence when she senses — or thinks she does — that her friends may consider her "arrogant." Juan Cameron says: "It means a lot to her not to be thought arrogant, and she really isn't. I've never seen any signs that people feel this way. I keep telling her but sometimes she doesn't believe me."

One recent incident underscored her vulnerability. After classes one day, in Brigham's ice cream shop on Main Street, she and several girl friends had finished their snacks and were deep in talk. Two boys from Middlesex came in and waited for a table in the crowded place. Finally one walked over to Caroline's group and said: "Come on girls, you're finished. Why don't you leave?" Caroline, engrossed in the conversation, replied over her shoulder: "We're talking. Please don't hurry us." The second boy whispered to his friend: "Hey, that's Caroline Kennedy." To this, the youth responded, using an obscenity: "I don't give a —— who she is. She doesn't have to be so arrogant."

Everyone in the vicinity heard and turned to look. Caroline flushed and her eyes filled with tears. She put her hands over her face, rose and quickly left the shop. She cried, not because of the four-letter word which she doubtless knew as well as any teenager, but because she had been accused publicly of being arrogant, the very thing she has tried so hard not to be.

But Caroline does not weep much or often. Most of the time she is eballient, with an off-beat sense of humor that delights her friends and would astonish people who still think of her as a sad and serious little girl. To her Concord classmates interviewed at the school and in the village she is "punchy" ... "impulsive" ... "notorious for her pranks" ... "outrageous in a fun-loving way." Incident upon incident bears out the assessment:

Once she poured bubble bath liquid into a fountain dispensing ice water. At Brigham's one afternoon she lost a dare game and had to pay a "penalty" — perform a Hawaiian hula in the middle of the floor and afterward kiss a strange boy. Uninhibitedly, she wiggled her hips in the aisle, kissed the youth and sat down to applause and laughter.

Early last spring, Caroline and a friend, Sarah Logan of Boothbay Harbor, Maine, managed to lock themselves out of their dormitory at 7 a.m. On a whim, they had gone outside. To their shock, the door clicked shut behind them. They shrugged and, in slippers and robes, began walking the short distance to the town center for breakfast. On the way a policeman in a squad car picked them up and returned them to school, arousing the occupants of the dorm. The law firmly told Caroline and friend not to go wandering around Concord in the future in nightclothes.

She played hide and seek — literally — with the Secret Service agents who guarded her night and day until she was 16. It can now be told: they lost her frequently or, rather, she lost them. Once she slipped away to Boston in a car to hear her uncle, Sen. Ted Kennedy speak. The agents, who thought she was in her dormitory, were amazed and chagrined to learn by radio that she was 17 miles away. Another time, she boarded a bus but left it at once through a rear door without being observed. The agents followed the bus while Caroline went her own way.

HER INTERESTS, ranging over a broad spectrum, peak and ebb as she grows and changes. Her newest artistic hobbies are painting, writing poetry and growing house plants which she would buy herself at the Concord Flower Shop on Walden Street. At 15, she became an eager photographer, reaching such a level of expertise that her mother planned an exhibition of her character studies and nature pictures in New York. It was quickly cancelled when the press heard about it and the show threatened to get out of hand. However, her $1,000 Leicaflex, one of the world's most expensive cameras, is used less these days as her enthusiasm roams elsewhere.

Her passion for horses, begun in childhood and flaming throughout much of her adolescence, has also dimmed. It was supplanted last year by a new excitement, unpublicized until now — flying.

Skiing and tennis have been favorite sports for years, but this year Caroline has taken to jogging in the countryside, field hockey and lacrosse. Last season, she was first-string defense for the Concord girls lacrosse team and performed credibly, though the team lost more games than it won.

What is she like in more personal terms as she nears 18? She is five feet, six inches tall, has a heavy sprinkling of freckles across the top of her nose and under her eyes and, like most teen-agers, is concerned about her weight. ("She always thinks she's too fat," Juan says, "so she eats a lot of yogurt and salads.") She resists temptation for days, then backslides with pizza, rich desserts and, occasionally, beer. When the little rolls of fat would accumulate around her middle, Juan would tease her about her "tires."

She is in perfect health. Except for a bout of acne at 16 and the usual colds and sore throats, she has never been ill, though at times she seems to court disaster. One freezing day, for example, she came in to H.S. Howe's jewelry store in Concord wearing only a sleeveless blouse. "Goodness, aren't you cold?" a clerk asked her. "Nope," Caroline replied. "I have a metabolism like a snake."

She wears her light brown hair in cascades down her back, a pony tail or, when the mood strikes her, one long braid. Her daily costume is teen-age modern — blue jeans and top, a down parka when the mercury really dips.

She is not a big spender. Recently in Concord she bought a pair of above-calf suede boots with crepe soles — "the cheapest ones we had," a clerk says — and paid for them with a crumpled check pulled from a dungaree pocket. Other purchases would usually be small — flowers for sick friends, silver earrings for pierced ears ($7.50), occasionally books and records — and bubble gum at Richardson's drug store! Jackie keeps both children on limited allowances. Once when she and her son John visited Caroline, the boy came down for breakfast early at the Colonial Inn and told manager Benoit: "I can't sit down. I don't have any money. My mother has all the money." They let him have breakfast anyway."

THREE STAGES IN life of Caroline Kennedy are pictured here: At left, she is 3 years old when her father, John F. Kennedy, was in the White House; center photo, she is a freckle-faced 9-year-old at horse show in New Vernon, N.J. in 1966, three years after her father's assassination, and at right, she is 10 on a camping trip. She is now nearing 18 and studying art appreciation at Sotheby's in London.

WITH JACQUELINE Onassis' guidance, she combines vacations with work. In the summer of 1973, she helped film a documentary about coal miners in Tennessee; last summer she worked as an intern in No. 431, Old Senate Office Building — her Uncle Ted's five-room office suite, where, surrounded by photographs of her father and uncles, she sorted mail, filed documents and ran errands.

Her most recent "job" was a non-salaried independent study project with NBC which took her on a 26,000-mile journey around Europe and the Middle East last February and most of March. At Concord, seniors are permitted to work on approved off-campus projects for academic credit. Caroline, who has taken many courses in film-making, with emphasis on documentaries, began work at NBC the first week in February.

HOW DO WE ASSESS Caroline at 18? She is mentally and physically healthy, active, spirited, bright — and the scars do not show.

She could have grown up far differently. Psychiatrists say that intense anxiety feelings can result when a child is violently separated from a person he loves and whose love he needs. Many children, hurt psychically in this way, have sought relief from mental pain by escaping as they grew older into drugs, alcohol or even breakdowns.

That Caroline has not done so is a tribute to her inner strength, both inborn and infused in her by Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Mrs. Kennedy doubtless knew that the crises could have a devastating impact upon her children, and there is not much question this is why she has worked so hard to blunt their effects.

Musical oldies still goodies

younger than spring. The musical does not pretend to be a history of Broadway music. It is, instead, a concert—type entertainment in which various periods of history are shown in the way they influenced the world musically.

From the American Frontier, the entire company rides to the footlights in a covered wagon chanting such endearing tunes as "Lorena" and "Skip to My Lou." The military gets into the act with a section of patriotic songs, the highlights of which include Patrice Munsel doing a rousing "Over Here" with dancing doughboys and valentine-faced Lillian Gish piercing the heart with "I Didn't Raise My Boy to be a Soldier." The waltzes of Lehar and Strauss, the early refrains of Friml and Romberg, and the star-spangled rhythms of George M. Cohan bring the first-act curtain to a rousing finale.

The second half of the evening is devoted to Cole Porter, Noel Coward, Dietz and Schwartz, and other Broadway legends. There's a section on jazz in which Patrice Munsel simply knocked me unconscious with her heartfelt "Why Was I Born," and the whole thing is worth the price of admission just to watch Tammy grimes make mincemeat out of "I'm Just Wild About Harry."

Audiences are flocking to this show, and I don't think it's because they are hungry for musicals. I think the world is ready once more for good taste, real music that sings in the heart and the head long after the final curtain, and a feeling of being uplifted and enriched the way only good music can perform the job. Even the kids are listening to better music than they were 10 years ago.

If nobody is willing to write anything this good today, then I strongly approve of dipping into the old piano bench and bringing back the taste we lost before body odor and the Rolling Stones took over. If it takes music to get people out of their doldrums, then I'm happy to announce that Broadway is doing its part in the war against mediocrity. New York might have its troubles, but we're doing our darnedest to hum them away.

The longest leap

Highest wagon jump ever made, according to Universal Studio, is this one for film "The Blarney Cock" on location at Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. Stunt men going over 85-foot cliff in wagon are Chuck Waters, dressed as woman; Jophrey Brown, arms above head; and Howard Curtis, right. —AP Wirephoto

'Tired of old junk'

Pointers make points

By CARL ARRINGTON
Knight News Service

The Pointer sisters, the gladrag dolls who rode in with the cultural tide of nostalgia, are back in sequins and ready for a smooth ride on the success express.

"Yeah, we got tired of all our old junk and gave it back to the Salvation Army," said Bonnie Pointer, "but we're going to keep our new stuff until it looks like our old stuff."

For several years the Pointers have been recycling old songs with their breathless energies and exact harmonies. The Pointers are now a trio instead of a quartet. Anita, 25, explains, "Baby June had to drop from the group permanetly because she got sick. We miss her but as they say the show must go on."

Even as a trio the Pointers deliver a fast-moving, entertaining show. The group now has an odd symmetry that still efectively delivers their hodgepodge of songs. And with three they are even closer in sound to classic harmonizers such as the Andrews sisters and Lambert, Hendricks and Ross.

"We just play what we know," said Anita. What they know includes a breakneck version of Dizzy Gillespie's "Salt Peanuts," a medley of Duke Ellington favorites, a steaming rendition of "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and a smattering of their own songs.

After working together for years since they began singing in their father's Oakland, Calif., church choir, the sisters harmonize perfectly.

Even though the Pointers are close musically, they are still looking for a new direction to take their music. After riding the crest of nostalgia, their tight, glossy act seems destined for television and Las Vegas where they can enjoy the fruits of their hectic schedule of the past three years.

Banning of director's last film protested

PARIS (AP) — Italian film directors and actors on Saturday attacked film censorship in Italy and specifically the banning of the last film made by the late director Pier Paolo Pasolini, "Salo or the 120 Days of Sodom."

The film is being premiered at the international film festival here and received a mixed reception at a press showing Saturday, drawing some adverse comments about the torture and sex scenes. The film is about Fascist northern Italy in 1944.

Among those attacking the ban were Bernardo Bertolucci, director of "Last Tango in Paris." He said he and the others would make no comment on individual scenes in "Salo" but simply condemn what he said were systematic attacks on Pasolini by the Italian establishment from the start of his career.

Pasolini, 53, was fatally injured when run over by a car Nov. 2 on a road near the beach of Ostia, southwest of Rome. A 17-year-old youth, Giuseppe Pelosi, was charged with the crime. Italian press reports said the two fought when Pelosi refused Pasolini's homosexual advances. Police have declined comment on the reports.

'Jaws' open wide

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — More happy news for MCA-Universal stockholders: "Jaws" will be released in more than 700 theaters in 44 countries at Christmas time. Already the No. 1 moneymaking film of all time, the shark saga will be given Universal's biggest release and exploitation campaign.

Earl Wilson

O'Brien not riding a lonely trail

NEW YORK — Having dinner with Hugh O'Brian, the Wyatt Earp of our TV heritage, was decidedly different. Settling down, he asked for a double martini, a tartar steak, and the way to the men's room. After five minutes, he returned from the men's room and went to a pay phone. It seemed to be a lengthy call, so the maitre d' picked up the double martini and took it to the phone.

Then the autographees descended. "What's your name? Where you from?" he asked them all.

One young woman said, "Jane." He said, "Jane what?" "Just plain Jane!" she said. "You haven't been plain since you were born," he smiled back. A husband came over to get an autograph for his wife. "My wife's not aggressive," he explained. "Send her over here!" Hugh O'Brian snapped. "She shouldn't send her husband to do the dirty work."

THE WOMAN came over and sat for a spell and Hugh seemed perfectly comfortable.

That's the way he works and continues so successfully in TV, and on the stage and in films. He was happy that not many people called him Wyatt Earp, or so he said. "It's hard to break an image," he added. "Remember, I did 'Hamlet' in Chicago before I ever got on a horse to do Earp. But I'm not complaining. That horse went to the bank with me every Friday."

HUGH O'BRIEN...'Hard to Break Image'

While the maitre d' mixed the tartar steak, Hugh said, "You know, I've got some of that so-called Go-to-Hell money, so I can be a little choosey."

He mentioned the ABC-TV film, "Murder on Flight 502," coming up, Nov. 21, three murders on one 747. "You're the pilot," I said. "No, Robert Stack's the pilot. I'm the New York City detective going to visit Scotland Yard, on an exchange course."

A man came to his table and said, "I saw that picture you made in Africa."

HUGH grinned. "That was the one where the actors made the mistake of standing in front of the scenery," he said.

O'Brian has been picked on by married journalists because he's a bachelor, and asked if he is still fond of Hugh Hefner, a fellow flirt. "He is genuinely one of America's greatest hosts," Hugh said. "We both come from Chicago, we have the same first name and we look something alike. Contrary to public opinion," Hugh said emphatically, "God help the man visiting Hugh Hefner, who touches one of those Bunnies!"

Why hasn't O'Brien married?

He hasn't found the right one. He frankly added, "A couple of people haven't wanted me either. I would hope that one day I would find one to share what I have worked so hard for. Meanwhile, I keep visiting the library."

"You mean looking over the crop of new girls?

"If you say so. I sure as hell spend a lot of time browsing."

Hugh O'Brian coined a classic Hollywood story about actors' fame. He tells the five stages of an actor.

"FIRST stage: A producer who is asked to hire Hugh O'Brian says, 'Who's Hugh O'Brian? Second stage: Producer says, 'Get me Hugh O'Brian!' Third stage: Producer says, 'Get me a Hugh O'Brian type!, Fourth Stage: Producer says, 'Get me a young Hugh O'Brian!' Fifth stage: Producer says, 'Who's Hugh O'Brian?"

It'll be a long time before anybody says, "Who's Hugh O'Brian?" — just because of those "Wyatt Earps" — 39 a year for six years for a total of 234. And when he plays theaters, he does a 15-minute afterpiece, bringing members of the audience on stage. "If you did that on Broadway you'd get clobbered, but they love it out of town."

Casino owner under fire

Associated Press

Allen Glick, owner of four major Las Vegas casinos, has been charged with failure to report loans totaling $1.6 million and other violations of Nevada gaming laws, it was reported Saturday.

The report said Glick, who faces a public hearing and recommended fines of $170,000, was served with a complaint in Las Vegas on Friday. Glick owns the Stardust, Fremont and Hacienda hotel-casinos and the Marina Casino.

The complaint indicated the loans were needed by Glick to repay personal debts and construction and other costs for his financial empire. Glick, who has been underwritten with $100 million in loans from the Teamster (Central State) Pension Fund, was a co-owner of the San Diego-based Saratoga Development Corp., now in bankruptcy proceedings.

At its Thursday meeting, the Nevada Gaming Commission said "probable grounds" had been established for disciplinary action against Glick. The commission later ordered the state Gaming Control Board, the investigative arm of the commission, to serve the complaint on Glick.

The Los Angeles Times said Glick has hired Shannon Bybee, a former member of the Control Board now in private law practice, to represent him.

Feliciano at D'land

Vocalist Jose Feliciano will be offering his distinctive style to Disneyland guests during the park's Thanksgiving holiday salute this Friday and Saturday. Hours for the celebration have been extended to 9 a.m. to midnight. Feliciano will appear on Tomorrowland Stage at 6, 8 and 1 p.m. along with special guest singer Carrie McDowell.

EARL'S PEARLS

Today's Best Laugh: "Remember," warns George Gobel, "it takes only one drink to make you drunk. With me it's the fourth one."

Wish I'd Said That: Phil Foster described a friend's unhappy married life: "Nowadays, when he laughs, it's from memory."

Remembered Quote: "Too many speeches are like the horns on a steer — a point here, a point there, and a lot of bull in between."

Earl's Pearls: There's been a survey of all the political polls, reports John Raudonis, and it shows that 90 per cent of those questioned think the country is being run by the "Don't Knows."

President Ford's decided to economize, says Lou Brecker: "For instance, he'll fire his gagwriter and get his jokes from old magazines in his dentist's office." That's earl, brother.

Puerto Vallarta — where livin' is easy

By JACK BALDWIN
Staff Writer

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico — As the 60-foot trimaran pulled away from the dock, bikini-clad cuties were swabbing themselves with lotion. It was only shortly after nine in the morning but already the sun was bearing down through a smog-free, cloudless sky.

About 45 of us "turistas" were off on a day-long cruise down the coast from this picturesque fishing village with its hand-made cobblestone streets to a remote isolated sand-covered cove. Although there was no wind, the captain of our boat, the Bora Bora, hoisted the mainsail as shade for those among us sun shy.

It was somewhat of a surprise to learn that our fare for the trip ($14 per person) included free cocktails — all day!

During the smooth leisurely cruise southward, our skipper stopped near a rugged mini-sized rock of Gibraltar. A young crewman, Phillipe, swam to the rock and slowly made his way up to the top of the 60-foot high rock island. As cameras clicked Phillipe made a graceful arching swan dive into the ocean. His derring-do was warmly lauded by the Bora Bora passengers as he climbed back aboard.

Upon reaching the cove the boat was maneuvered close to shore and anchored. The shout went up, "Everybody in the water!" The water was unbelievably warm and as clear as a bottle of Sparkletts. Wading ashore we explored the cove which boasted a small clear stream cascading down the steep mountain side and into several cool pools at the back of the cove.

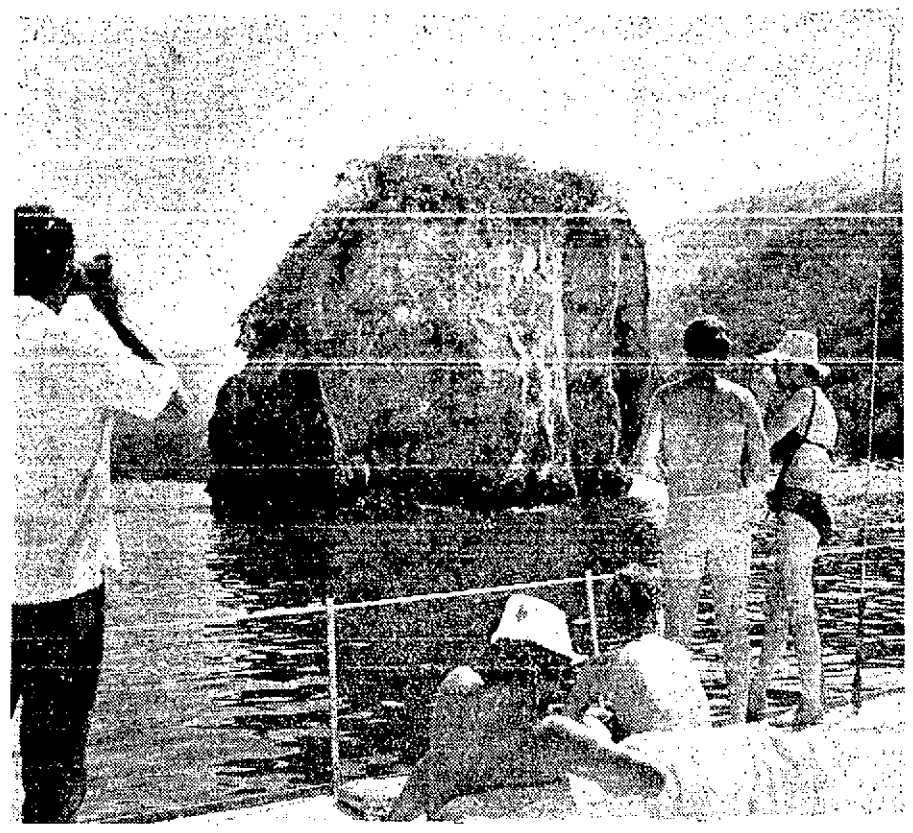

GETTING BACK to the boat was no problem even for those who couldn't swim. The non-swimmers were put onto inflated air mattresses and floated back to the boat.

It was lunchtime. The buffet lunch consisted of fried chicken, cheeses, hard rolls, watermelon, papaya, bananas and cold beer. We ate and drank in the shade of a light canvas tarp rigged by the crew which extended from gunwale-to-gunwale of the boat's 28-foot-wide cockpit area.

Our trip to our own secluded cove near Mismoloya (where Richard Burton and Ava Gardner starred in the movie "Night of the Iguana") about 15 miles south of Puerto Vallarta was on the second day of a four-day trip arranged by Aeromexico, the national airline of Mexico.

The airline has flights leaving Los Angeles Monday, Wednesday and Friday for the 3½ hour flight which includes a brief stopover at Tijuana's new modern airport. Round trip fare is $196 plus a $3 departure fee. The planes are a stretched version of the Long Beach-built McDonnell-Douglas 115-passenger DC-9's. Catering to passenger's needs, and comfort is a team of friendly, bilingual, pretty dark-eyed hostesses.

We spent three nights in the newly-opened (two days before) modern, nine-story, 234-room Holiday Inn located between the downtown section and the new steamer dock north of the city. The nights at the inn seemed short. That's because much of the late evening hours were spent in the hotel's huge meandering pool, so large there is an island complete with palm trees in the center of the fresh water pool.

CRUISE PARTY VISITS MEXICO'S MINI-GIBRALTAR

NEAR THE SHALLOW end where the water is thigh-high deep, bathers can wade up to a cocktail bar and sitting on stools in the water may order such exotic drinks as a Coco-Loco served in a freshly-opened coconut. Money is not needed at the bar. Guests sign their tabs according to their room number.

Room rates at the Holiday Inn vary from $28 for a single to $32 for a double occupancy modern air-conditioned room.

At this time of the year in Puerto Vallarta the rainy season is over. The weather is warm. The attire is informal. There is no need for sport jackets nor evening dresses for the ladies. Only need for taking a jacket or coat is in case the weather is chilly when leaving or arriving at the airport in Los Angeles.

U.S. citizens are required to have a Mexican Tourist Card prior to entering Mexico. These may be obtained from the Mexican Consulate or at the Aeromexico ticket counter before departure. Returning U. S. citizens must have in their possession proof of citizenship, which may be a birth certificate, passport or voter registration receipt.

GAL-IVANTING

Finding adventure in Philippines

Many of us in middle age have grown into ruts — lifestyle ruts, place ruts, people ruts. We tell ourselves that we are terrified of primitive environments, or that we can't stand Latin countries when actually, we have never even experienced the thing we can't stand.

Then we complain that life is passing us by; that one day isn't any different from the next.

What we need, when we feel like that, is an adventure in our lives. We need to experience something that we've never known before.

On a Philippines Airlines flight recently, I sat

choral pepper

from Chicago who planned to stop over in Manila for a few days where her son would meet her to escort her on to Japan.

We both stayed at the Hilton. On the following beside an attractive widow morning while I was arranging a tour to run the Pagsanjan Rapids, we met in the lobby. She was distraught because her son's arrival was delayed and she was hesitant about wandering around Manila alone.

On impulse, I invited her to join me. Two other people had signed up for the Pagsanjan trip and our limousine would carry one more.

"I'VE ALWAYS hated camping or anything like that," she speculated. However, in lieu of an alternative, she bought a swim suit at a nearby shop and joined us.

To reach the cataracts, we motored through the flat lands of Laguna Province where turbanned Moslem farmers guided water buffalo over long miles of rice paddies. In country villages, sarong-clad women spread golden grain to dry on mats along the road while their naked kids waved to us from open doorways of thatched-roofed, stilted huts. It presented a heady scene for a lady who had never traveled beyond the Middle West.

Gradually the highway began to ascend into coconut and sugar plantations, and then suddenly we no longer could see the hazy rice paddies below. We had arrived in a dense, dark jungle that covered the rim of the canyon from which Pagsanjan River thundered down some 300 feet into a lagoon we later would reach by water.

We had arranged to launch our expedition from the Pagsanjan Rapids Hotel on the river. Awaiting us when we arrived were four crude wooden barcas — long, scooped-out logs — with a pair of sinuous brown oarsmen assigned to each one.

Cartegena boasts rich heritage

travel

PALM trees are reminders of Cartagena's tropical location. This Colombian port city is becoming cruise ship stopover on South American coast.

Cartagena, Colombia

Coming down from Bogota's 8,700 feet to Cartagena on the emerald coast is something like stepping into a steam room. This is a tropical port whose cannon fired on the sails of Sir Henry Morgan and Admiral Vernon.

It took 200 years of slave labor to build the massive forts. The picture postcards you buy in the old walled city mention "El Pirate Draque."

Slaves left their blood lines here. Two of every three people on the narrow streets have skin from milk chocolate to black coffee.

The walled city is pierced by a Moorish gate. Sidewalks are one person wide.

(When I first came here — 20 years ago — they told me it was law that ordinary folk step into the street to clear the sidewalk for approaching Catholic priests and nuns. It may still be. Colombia is the most Spanish country in the Americas.)

CARTAGENA HAS changed, spilling over from the walled city into high rise condominiums. The flashing blue sea is topped by instant diamonds under an Inca gold sun.

The growing cruise ship lines bargain for docking space with coffee freighters. Powder magazines in the old forts are now used for boutiques. And your hotel arranges a "pirate's tour" through the harbor's Boca Grande (big mouth) and the Boca Chica (little mouth).

Condominiums go for $64,000 U.S. Presently there's the old Hotel Caribe on the beach. The new high rise Hotel Velas gets most of the tourists. Hilton, the Hyatts and Holiday Inns are looking into Cartagena.

City has the best seafood I've found in the Caribbean. Try Club de Pesca in an old fort. La Fragata in an old colonial home in the walled city.

In Cartagena, galleons loaded gold and emeralds for the convoys to Spain. Such rich plunder drew rugged types from all the New World.

When Sir Henry Morgan attacked the town, a hundred nuns at the Augustine monastery jumped over the cliff. Sir Henry had found a sure fire way to make war: When he attacked Portobelo, he prodded captive priests and nuns first up the scaling ladders.

England was grateful to him and he died Lieutenant Governor of Jamaica, a bottle of Jamaica rum in his fist.

CALIFORNIA IS being flooded with an offer few people can afford to refuse. For an incredibly low price you go to Las Vegas where you get: $340 worth of gambling chips; $60 in nickels; two nights in a hotel and $71.25 worth of food; a rented Impala free for one day.

How it works: Your motel-hotel is quite a distance from the glittering Strip. You get your nickels and your chips by cashing coupons at the counter. BUT only every hour. Each hour you can get a paper cupful of $5 in nickels for example. After that you wait for the clock to turn over another hour.

The chips can also be played into the house slot machines. Woman told me: "I put $200 at one sitting into those slots and never got ONE hit. Not even a pair of cherries."

You pay your own air fare to Las Vegas. The tour operators work out of Chicago. They're not using a high roller mailing list. Seems to be directed to working women — hence the come on of $60 in nickels. Women are slots players.

White Sands isn't sandy

White Sands, covering 300 square miles in southeastern New Mexico, is one of the strangest deserts in the world, according to Continental Airlines, which serves nearby El Paso, Tex.

The surface is not sand at all, but 95 per cent pure gypsum. Light and shadow play weird roles in the glittering white basin.

One of the oddest characteristics of White Sands are red lakes which ussually appear in the autumn. Later they turn milky, then clear. Nobody yet has come up with an explanation of this quirk of nature.

Roller-coaster rides over the steep dunes in sand buggies are operated by the National Park Service.

SITMAR GIVES YOU THE MOST FOR YOUR MONEY TO MEXICO.

Sitmar's 10 and 11-day cruises give you the most entertainment, the most time in the best ports, and the largest, most spacious ship sailing the Mexican Riviera.

Sitmar's elegant T.S.S. Fairsea, of Liberian registry, is the largest cruise ship sailing the Mexican Riviera. Twenty-five thousand tons!

That means we can give you more crew to serve you, roomier cabins, more spacious decks, more fun facilities: Like a 330-seat movie theater, five pubs, two lounges, two nightclubs, two dining rooms and much, much more! There's even room for three swimming pools, one especially for children.

The entertainment is the finest on any cruise. There are even three cruises devoted to the Big Band sound of the '40s.

SITMAR 10 AND 11-DAY CRUISES. MORE CRUISE FOR YOUR MONEY.

Compare our 10 and 11-day cruise fares with any other. You'll find they're the biggest cruise bargains going. Another advantage of 10 and 11-day cruises—they're long enough to visit the best ports on the Mexican Riviera, short enough to fit within a two-week vacation and still give you a few extra days to get back to reality after all that unbelievable Sitmar luxury.

SITMAR. THE MOST WANTED PORTS, MOST TIME ASHORE.

And 10 and 11-day cruises allow you more time ashore to explore Mexico's most exotic and exciting ports. On the 10-day you visit Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlán and cruise Cabo San Lucas Bay. On the 11-day you visit delightfully old-world Manzanillo, too!

SITMAR. MORE ATTENTIVE SERVICE, MORE LAVISH CUISINE.

Sitmar's 500-man Italian crew is famous for its enthusiastic, attentive, European-style service. And our continental cuisine. Lavish! Extravagant! Incomparable! Our 54 chefs are European-born, European-trained, European-proud.

MORE TRAVEL AGENTS RATE SITMAR NO. 1.

But don't choose a cruise from an ad. See your professional travel agent, who knows which cruise line offers the best value. But don't be surprised if she recommends Sitmar. Recent independent surveys show that more travel agents rate Sitmar a better value than any other cruise line. They rate us best in:

- cuisine
- public rooms
- service
- entertainment
- luxury
- on-board activities
- spaciousness
- ports of call

And experienced cruise passengers know it. That's why travel agents say Sitmar is the most frequently asked-for cruise line on the West Coast.

Ask your travel agent to tell you about a Sitmar 10 or 11-day Mexican Riviera cruise. Sitmar. More cruise; more memories for your money!

CHEF OF THE WEEK

He's in tune with chicken

His disposition, his talents, and his knowledge blend in the personality of today's chef of the week, Elwin "Bud" Ekstrand, manager of the Lakewood Branch, Bank of America. Few people know his real first name. Everyone calls him "Bud"!

To explain our opening remarks, we quote a friend who knows him well. "One thing that I think makes Bud so popular is his easygoing, small town friendship attitude, which is contagious, really. This has carried over into the bank where all the employes seem to have copied his attitude. He joins an organization only if he can help the group. I do not believe I have ever heard Bud speak ill of anyone, and have never heard him utter a profanity."

In addition to his banking knowledge, which is why the Bank of America management brought him

from the Midwest to California in 1941, Ekstrand's talents include both sports and music.

Born on a farm in Burt County, Neb., (in the northeast corner of the state — closest town is Oakland), Ekstrand has five sisters. He attended rural school until the eighth grade, then enrolled at Oakland High School. He lettered in both basketball and football, played trumpet in the school band, the city band, and was a member of a small local dance band.

As a versatile tenor he did vocals, too, and sang as a fourth member with a sister trio group on a local radio station. He planned at one time to pursue the musical field. In fact, he even went so far as to go to a Yankton, S.D., radio station to audition for the Lawrence Welk Orchestra.

Ekstrand's next stop was the School of Commerce in Lincoln where he became the Number One fan of the University of Nebraska football team, the Cornhuskers.

FOLLOWING GRADUATION, Ekstrand decided to make banking his vocation and music his avocation, so he joined a small Midwest family bank. The Bank of America management was in search of a new manager for its branch in Whittier, Calif. The searchers were so impressed by Ekstrand's accomplishments that they brought him West. He has been with them for 34 years, and has been manager of the Lakewood Branch since 1969.

He and his wife, Phyliss, whom he met at a moonlight dance, have been married 38 years. They recently attended the 40th anniversary of their high school graduating class. They have two married daughters, Lynda and Cyndy. There also are two grandsons, Raoul, II, and Robb, 8.

ELWIN "BUD" EKSTRAND

He is a member of the Christian Business Men Committee, an international organization, and is a former vice president of the Lakewood Pan American Festival Committee. Ekstrand also served as president of the Greater Lakewood Chamber of Commerce, and still serves on the board. A member of the Lakewood Rotary Club, and the Lakewood Center Merchants Association, he's also very active on the Lakewood YMCA board.

Ekstrand is a collector of antiques and is a rock hound. As for sports, he has his eyes glued to the television, an ear plug transmitting the radio game, and a sports magazine in his hands to complete the sports news.

Phyliss says, "Yes, he can cook, but only in an emergency." We guarantee this Chicken Casserole will be mighty good anytime — not just in an emergency.

CHICKEN RICE CASSEROLE

1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can cream of celery soup
1 soup can of milk
1 cup uncooked rice
4 chicken breasts
Salt
Pepper
1 package dried onion soup mix

Mix mushroom and celery soups, milk and rice. Place in greased casserole.

Season chicken to taste with salt and pepper. Place chicken on top of rice mix. Sprinkle with onion soup mix. Cover tightly with aluminum foil, or tight-fitting lid. Bake at 325 degrees for 2 hours. Serves 4.

DEAR ABBY

A not so happy trio

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him "Bud") and I have been married for three years and were thinking about starting a family until this came up. (I'm 26 and Bud is 28).

Five months ago, my sister, who just got divorced, moved in with us until she could get

herself together. She's 29 and the "beauty" of the family, but she's always after somebody's man.

Bud never paid her any attention in front of me, so I wasn't worried. Then this terrible thing happened. Sis called me at work and told me Bud tried to rape her! I was so stunned I nearly fainted.

I got home as soon as possible, and all Bud could say was, "I thought that's what she wanted the way she always paraded around in a see-through nightgown." Sis said she didn't even own one, but I knew she was lying because I'd seen it when I did the laundry.

Sis said that was the second time he tried it, but she didn't tell me because she didn't want to make trouble.

Abby, explain the difference between "rape" and "molest." Sis told the family it was "rape," but Bud didn't tear her clothes off or even touch her. All he did was proposition her. Also, wasn't it partly her fault for enticing him? I still love my husband, but I don't trust him.

Whose fault was all this? Shouldn't my sis move? Answer Soon. — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: There was no rape involved. Apparently, your sister tantalized your husband and he propositioned her, and that's all there was to it. Yes, your sis should move. Buy her a flannel nightgown as a farewell present and get yourself a see-through nightie.

DEAR ABBY: We have been married for 38 years. My husband has been reading very dirty pocketbooks and magazines that dirty men he works with give him. He's been reading them for many years.

I have always claimed that this excessive arousal would make him impotent. He never believed me.

Now at age 60, he no longer gets aroused from these dirty pictures — or even from me! He has gone completely impotent.

Please tell me, Abby, can a man become impotent from looking at too many dirty pictures over the years?

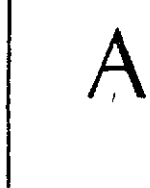

If he can, please write a whole column on it so men won't be so dumb. — CHICAGO TRIB. READER

DEAR READER: It won't require a whole column to advise you that a man cannot become impotent from looking at too many "dirty" pictures. He may become bored with them, but impotent — no way!

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: Thinking about Thanksgiving? If you are planning a holiday dinner, why not make it a true time of giving thanks and share it with someone who might otherwise be forgotten?

Is there an elderly person down the block who lives alone? Why not call the nursing home nearest you and ask them to select a resident who would enjoy Thanksgiving with a family. Then provide transportation.

I promise you, your own Thanksgiving will be enriched. And think of the joy you will be giving a lonely, elderly person!

$400,000 Recreational Center ready today at Laguna Village

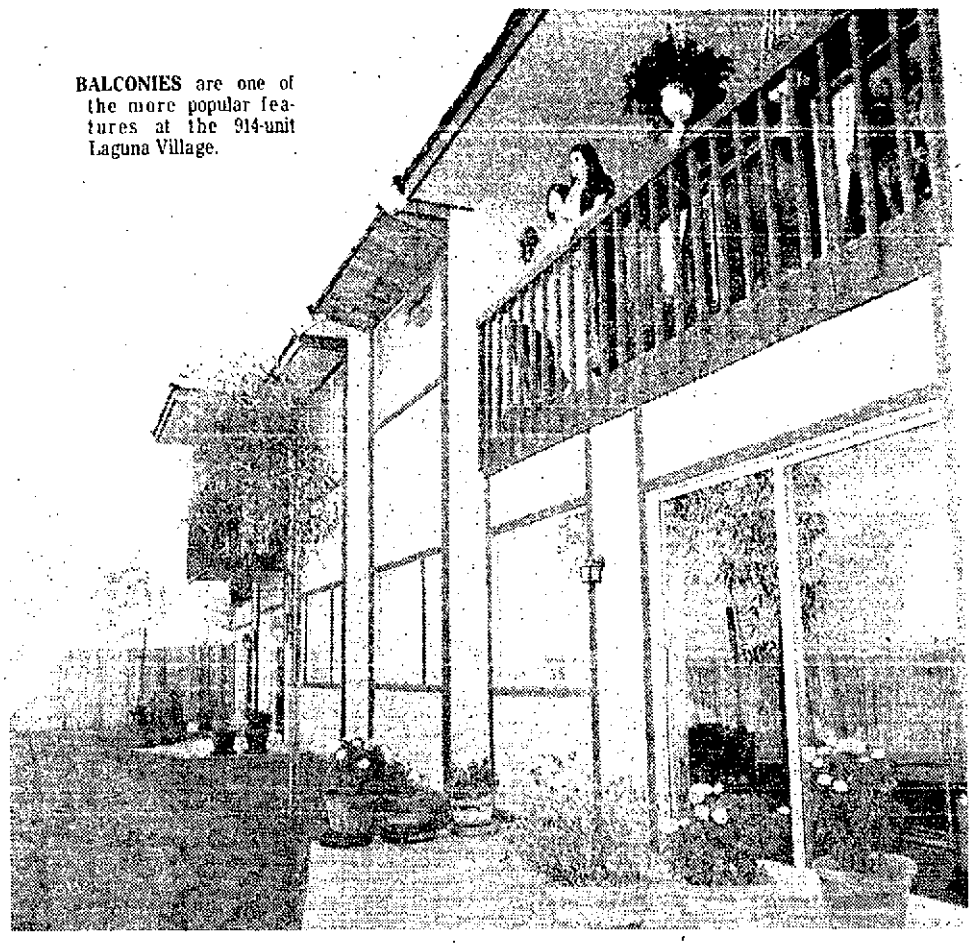

The vast $400,000 recreational center at Laguna Village, a 914 unit townhome condominium community opens today, west of the San Diego Freeway on Canada Road in Laguna Hills.

Designed over a 4.5 acre area, the center boasts of 5,500 square foot clubhouse and recreational complex, with large main lounge, wet bar, fireplace, card room, kitchen and activity rooms, billiard room and men's and women's saunas.

ALSO, there are three pools at the $45 million townhome condominium development, including a therapy pool, two regulation-sized double tennis courts, children's play area, lawn bowling field and a sandlot volleyball court.

Laguna Village, which offers residences priced from $43,500 to $48,900 has two-story townhomes available in five floor plans and two special bonus room options. The townhomes vary from 1,350 to 1,665 square feet of living areas, with two to three bedrooms and two baths.

According to Bruce Hill, president, Pacific Coast Realty, exclusive sales agent, the developer has more than 20 years experience in building and designing recreation centers.

"BOB KREIS, president of Laguna Village, Inc., has been building these fun centers since 1954. He developed San Carlos, a 5,000 acre community in San Diego, and he has been perfecting facilities involving recreational activities ever since," said Hill. "He believes that this recreational complex is the culmination of everything he has studied in this field."

Though the clubhouse has been designed to easily accommodate large gatherings in its many rooms, it

SPACIOUS FAMILY room adjoins informal eating nook and kitchen of the Plan 2, one of four models now offered at WoodWalk in Lake Forest.

WoodWalk's Phase 2 opens in Lake Forest

WoodWalk, the $7 million single-family home community in Lake Forest which held its grand opening just last month, today opens sales in the second phase of the project.

Sixty homes, containing three and four bedrooms, are included in Phase 2, according to Michael T. Murray, marketing manager for First Management Corporation, at prices ranging from $60,500 to $78,000.

THE SECOND PHASE is being opened some two months ahead of the original schedule because 42 of the 48 homes in the first unit already have been sold.

In the new segment, the emphasis is being placed on the larger homes, although there will be a good selection of all four models.

"Included in the 60 homes now under construction are 20 Plan Four models with bonus rooms, which were the fastest selling units in the first phase," said Murray.

The Plan Four with bonus room contains 2,795 square feet.

DESIGNED by Architect Frank Leslie Spangler, AIA, Newport Beach, all WoodWalk homes have open floor plans which add volume to their already spacious interiors.

On the exteriors, Architect Spangler combined suteco with wood trim and heavy shake roofs to give the homes distinctive appearances.

Each WoodWalk home has at least one fireplace, with one model having three. All kitchens have built-in ranges, double self-cleaning ovens, dishwashers, disposers, ceramic tile counter tops, pantries and luminous ceilings.

The single-story Plan One has a two-car garage, the other three, all two-story homes have three-car garages. All garage interiors are finished with drywall.

WITHIN A short walk from their homes, WoodWalk residents have a $1 million recreation facility for their use. The Sun and Sail Club, whose membership is limited to Lake Forest residents, has a 36-acre lake for boating and fishing, a 13,000-square foot clubhouse.

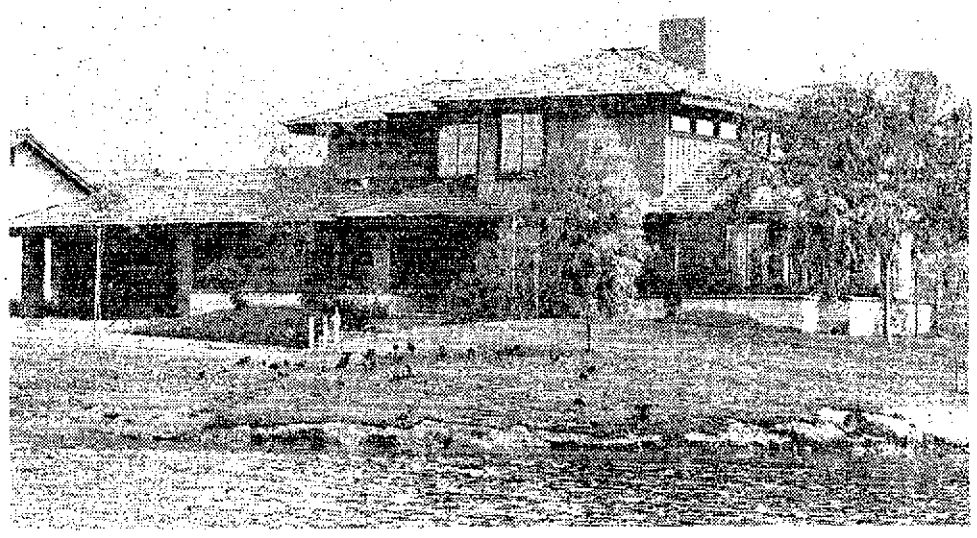

Four models, furnished and decorated by Louise Klotz of Habitational Design, Inc., are open daily for inspection from 10 a.m. to dusk.

TO REACH WOODWALK, take the San Diego Freeway to the El Toro off-ramp, which runs into Avenida de Carlotta.

Go south to El Toro Road, turn left (east) and proceed to Muirlands Boulevard, then left to Ridge Route Drive.

Go right on Ridge Route Drive to Chaparral and the sales and information center.

Luxury homes open in Lake Forest

LAKE STREAMS PROVIDE RESTFUL LIVING ATMOSPHERE

Lake-front living in the master-planned community of Lake Forest is offered at Lake Terrace, according to W. Scott Biddle, president of Biddle Development, Inc., builder of the $2-million community that opens today.

Located about a mile from the San Diego Freeway in El Toro, Lake Terrace offers 24 one-and two-level homes, priced from $55,000 to $85,000.

MANY feature dramatic views of the lake and streams cascading over a series of water falls that border the development.

'Early bird' reservations open today at Shadow Run

Temporary sales facilities have been set up for "early bird" reservations this weekend at the new Shadow Run development of single family homes in Buena Park. First reservations will be taken starting at 10 a.m. today.

The Warmington Development, Inc., homes are under construction at Larkspur Drive and Stanton Avenue, just north of La Palma Avenue in Buena Park.

Pre-sale prices begin at $44,000 with excellent conventional financing and just 36 homes are being presented in the new Shadow Run series.

Four distinctive floor plans are being offered in one and two story designs with two, three and four bedrooms and two baths. Individually detailed exteriors feature shake roofs and enclosed double garages.

Luxury appointments of the new homes include large convenience-center kitchens, elegant master suites, vaulted ceilings, fireplaces in some plans, carpeting, gas forced air heating, designer light fixtures and service porches in some homes.

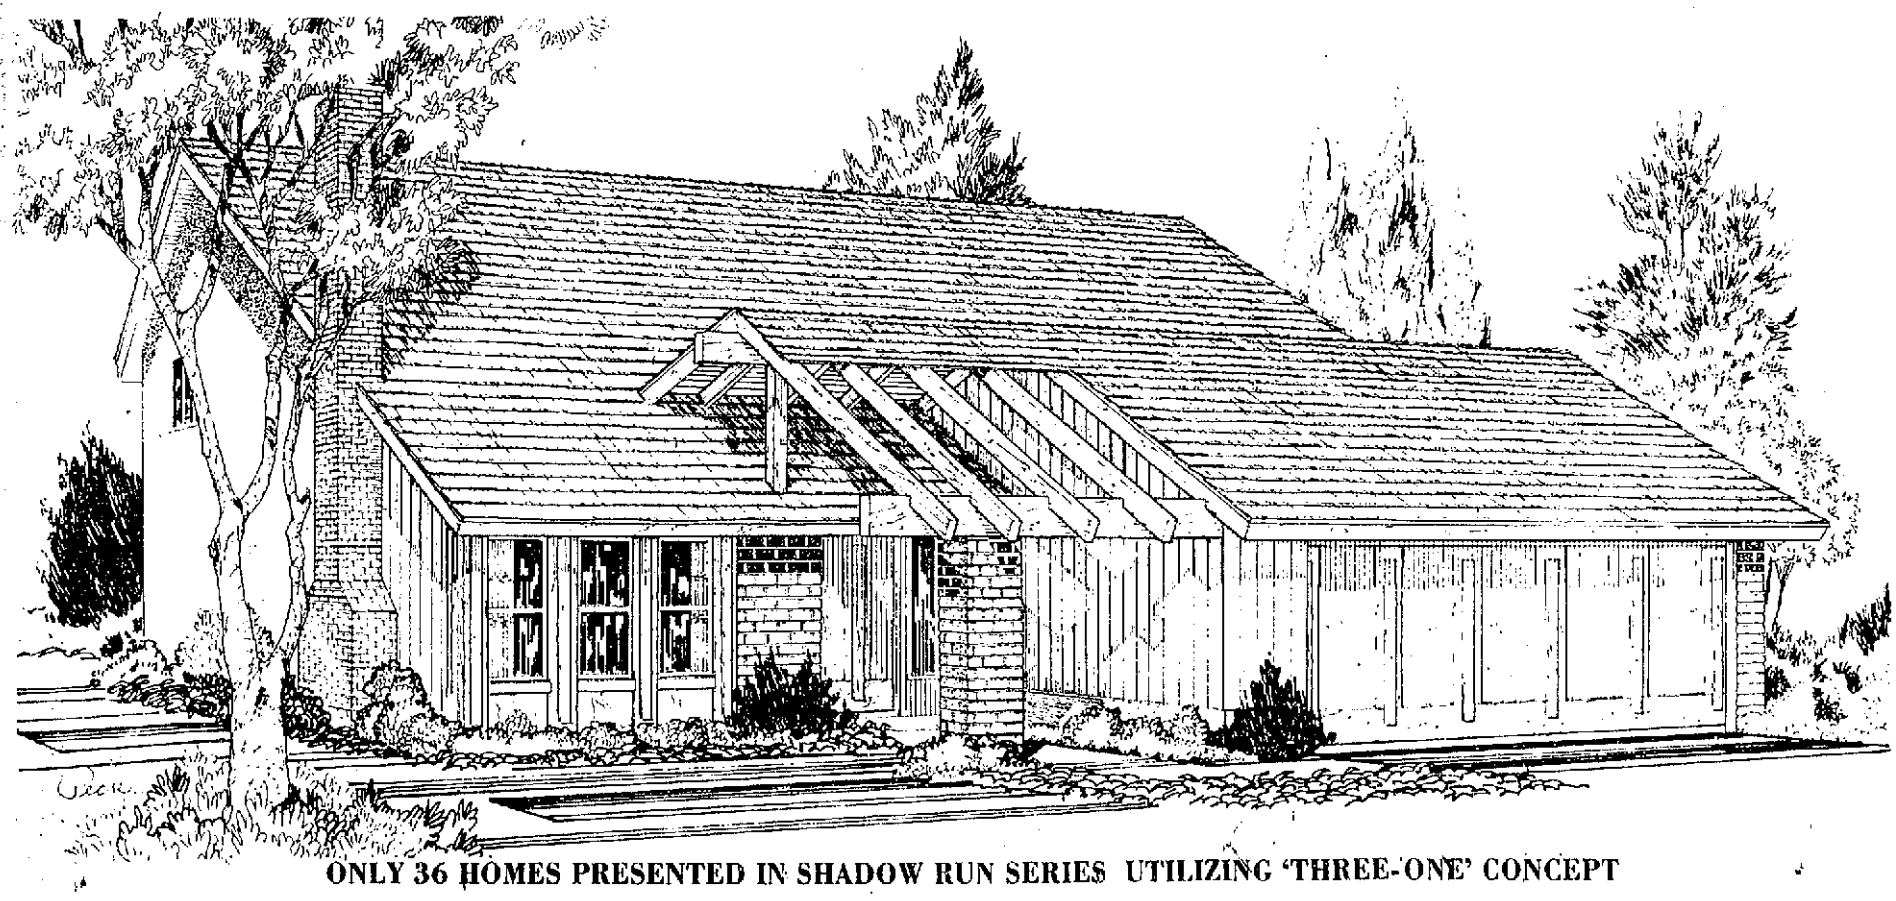

The Warmington homes are brand new versions of the progressive "Three-Homes-In-One" concept that has made the Shadow Run series so successful, according to the builder.

Each home is designed in three distinct sectors: Family, formal and private. Kitchen/family areas are the center of family activity, with living rooms designed for formal occasions. Bedrooms are secluded, offering private retreats.

The homes are in a convenient, private neighborhood of quiet cul-de-sac streets, near schools, shopping and three major freeways. Within minutes are Knott's Berry Farm, Disneyland, Angel Stadium and other southland attractions.

The sales facility will be open daily from 10 a.m. for pre-opening reservations at 7681 Larkspur Drive in Buena Park.

Shadow Run may be easily reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway or Artesia Freeway to the Beach Boulevard exit, then south on Beach to La Palma and left (east) on La Palma to Stanton and left again to the development of single family homes.

Boardwalk buyers go for carefree lifestyle, poll says

What are the most popular features of planned condominium communities?

Does condominium ownership have advantages over owning a single-family, detached home? Over renting?

Certainly these answers vary — depending upon the character of the specific development — but a recent survey of buyers at The Boardwalk in Cerritos provides what may be typical answers.

A 104-UNIT planned community of two and three bedroom condominium homes, located at Artesia Avenue and Palo Verde Street, The Boardwalk is 62.5 per cent sold out, with 65 buyers to date.

The units are priced from $33,800 to $39,800 and excellent conventional financing is available, with annual interest rates as low as 8 per cent and as little as 5 per cent required as a down payment.

Al Quaglietta, Vice President of Long Beach Construction Co., Boardwalk developer, reported survey findings of interest to both families in the housing market and to the housing industry itself.

"Not surprisingly," Quaglietta said, "85 per cent of our buyers at Boardwalk stated that freedom was the primary attraction — freedom from yardwork, house and pool maintenance and the like — for buying in a condominium development."

"THE CAREFREE lifestyle offered in condominium ownership was important to 38 per cent who previously had owned homes but it also was the primary influence with 68 per cent who had been renters and preferred not to assume the chores of ordinary home ownership," Quaglietta said.

Also reflective of Boardwalk's buyer profile, Quaglietta pointed out, was the fact that 35 per cent of the buyers were unmarried and among the 65 percent of buyers who were married there was an average of only one child per family, less than half of the national average.

"Clearly," Quaglietta pointed out "condominium ownership appeals to the socially mobile families of today who remain small in number by choice, who enjoy the built in recreation, security and maintenance of planned communities in preference to ownership of traditional homes."

Plans offer wide choices

Six distinctive elevations, accented by brick, stumpstone and wood detail, provide each new Lake Terrace ownerwith a near-custom home.

According to Biddle, terms are very advantageous. As low as 7.5 per cent financing or families may buy with as little as 10 per cent down.

Amenities include wet bars, oversize master baths, cathedral ceilings and large, walk-in closets.

A sunken living room with vaulted ceiling and fireplace is featured in the three-bedroom, two-bath Plan 1. The master suite has sliding glass doors to the rear yard and a vaulted ceiling. The adjoining master bath features a step-up Roman tub and double cultered marble pullmans' with uni-lav basins. The patio-view kitchen is convenient to the dining room and has direct access to the garage for laundry convenience.

THE LIVING ROOM in Lake Terrace's Plan 2 features a massive brick fireplace and a 20-foot ceiling. The upper level in this two-story home is alloted to the master suite which includes a large bath, a bedroom with adjoining step-down retreat and fireplace and a spacious balcony overlooking a stream. Two auxiliary bedrooms, a family room and formal dining room complete this 2,100-square-foot home.

Fully appointed kitchens include O'Keefe and Merritt gas ranges with double continuous cleaning ovens, automatic dishwashers, trash compactors, disposals and luminous ceilings. Kitchens also feature pass-through windows with exterior serving bars, pantries, furniture-finished wood cabinets, and ceramic tile counters.

OTHER FEATURES in Lake Terrace's comprehensive amenities package include air conditioning preparation, smoke detection system, deluxe carpeting in living and bedroom areas, and gas log lighters.

Exterior features include wood shake or Monray tile roofs, fully insulated walls and ceilings, perimeter and sideyard fencing, front yard landscaping and sprinkler system, concrete driveways and underground utilities.

Lake Terrace owners automatically become members of the Lake Forest Community Association which provides maintenance of one's front yard and of all common areas and recreation facilities.

Owners have full voting privileges in the Lake Forest Beach and Tennis Club.

LAKE TERRACE'S ideal south Orange County location is away from city congestion, and yet close to major employment areas in the Newport Financial Center and the Irvine Industrial Complex. Shopping is convenient at the new Laguna Hills Mall and at Fashion Island.

Lake Terrace model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. until dusk. London Line Realty of El Toro is exclusive sales agent for the community.

To reach the development, take the San Diego or Santa Ana freeway to the Canada Road offramp and drive easy. Turn right at Overlake Drive to Lake Terrace. Lake Terrace is located at 24302 Lakeview Lane, El Toro.

All homes view-oriented

also allows for partitioning between certain areas as well.

"In designing this specious facility, it was important to make sure it would serve the needs of many and of few at the same time," said Hill, "without the various groups or persons getting in the way of the others."

OVER 40 per cent of Laguna Village will be devoted to open space. There are greenbelts and patios, and the developer has also dedicated a 12 acre parcel to the County of Orange which will eventually design the site as a park.

"We have maintenance-free living available here," said Hill. "Residents will soon discover an increase in their leisure time and a new retaxation from the responsibilities of routine property management."

Laguna Village is a heavily landscaped community which has view-oriented living and dining rooms and some master bedrooms with panoramas as well.

Many of the townhomes have optional floor plans. The Monterrey, for example, has four bedrooms or can be obtained with two bedrooms and a 16 by 17 foot rumpus room or den. The second bedroom of the model is als extended to measure 11 by 14 feet, and can be used as a guest bedroom, libriary, private study or den.

"THE DEMAND for this style of townhome at Laguna Village has been staggering," noted Hill. "In addition to all of this space, we have included an unfinished bonus storage area in the Monterrey measuring 1,400 cubic feet, and a regular storage room of 230 cubic feet."

Additional features include that each townhome condominium has its own washer-dryer area within the residence. Most have skylighted entryways.

Laguna Village, which features a 3,000 square foot design center called the Homestead Store, has models open from 10 a.m. to dusk daily. Each townhome has a private auto terrace which serves as a private patio and one car garage, if desired, or attached two car facility.

Plus open space is provided conveniently close by for one additional parking space per resident.

LOCATED on gentle rolling hills, Laguna Village has 104 units in its first and second phases. A third phase, with 95 units, is also open now.

Homeowners pay a $50 monthly fee to cover all maintenance of the recreational amenities, townhome exteriors, greenbelts, personal water bill, fire insurance and a master TV cable system.

Conventional financing is available with 10 per cent down.

Ravenspur grand opening

Today is the grand opening of a new residential development, Ravenspur Condominium Homes, at 5718 Ravenspur Drive, located just off Hawthorne Boulevard, above Peninsula Center on the beautiful Palos Verdes Peninsula in Rancho Palos Verdes.

The new development offers 21 large two bedroom with two bath condominiums with prices ranging from $48,950 to $59,950. Construction and landscaping are completed and immediate move-in is possible.

According to Michael L. Keele, a principal of Argonaut Enterprises, owner of Ravenspur, "In addition to a prime Palos Verdes location near excellent shopping, fine schools and outstanding recreation, these new homes are of high quality construction. A HIGHLIGHT of the building is the enclosed central courtyard with heated swimming pool, hydrotherapy pool and poolside recreation building. All maintenance is handled by the homeowner's association, and the monthly fee will be under $50.

Parking is provided in a security subterranean garage. An elevator serves all three floors and the parking garage. The main entrance to the building is also secured with intercom to each unit.

Architect of the contemporary Spanish style building with verandas and mission tile roof is Stanley Wacht, A.I.A.

Whittier Monterey sales steady

Steady sales continue at Whittier Monterey, the collection of elegant townhomes built by Showcase Homes along the view hillside in Whittier. Privacy clusters of split-level and tri-level townhomes contain two and three bedrooms with two or 2½ baths in four different floor plans priced from $43,950.

A variety of financing is offered with interest rates from 7¾ percent to 9 percent available depending upon the size of the down payment.

"VIEW, location and value are the elements cited by new homebuyers when describing their reasons for purchasing a Whittier Monterey townhome," Kurth stated. "Spectacular vistas of the basin stretch to the Palos Verdes Peninsula, encompass the skyscraper silhouettes of downtown Los Angeles and take in the San Gabriel Mountains."

The terraced grounds of the residential community include two recreation centers, each with a swimming pool and therapy pool. An owner's clubhouse is situated with easy access for all residents, and maintenance of the landscaped gardens, exteriors of townhomes and recreation facilities is under the direction of the Whittier Monterey Homeowners Association.

Interiors are complete with wall-to-wall carpeting through the living room, dining room, hall, stairs and bedrooms with cushioned vinyl tile in the kitchen and baths. All windows and sliding glass doors are fully draped. Some plans have vaulted wood ceilings and private balconies, and all have convenient storage space situated throughout.

Showcase Homes distinctive work-saver kitchens have built-in appliances at Whittier Monterey which includes a range, eye-level double oven (continuous cleaning), dishwasher and disposer under luminous ceilings. Custom-finished cabinetry and wide countertops surround the appliances.

EACH townhome has an attached double garage with automatic door openers. Outlets for laundry appliances are located in the garage. Direct access to the interior of the home from the garage is an additional built-in security feature. Garages open to concrete driveways which lead to gently curving streets engineered for safety and noise reduction.

The multi-level townhomes are situated less than 15 minutes from downtown Los Angeles. Shopping facilities, schools and parks are nearby with excellent access to major transportation routes.

Furnished models, prepared by Vicki Welsh of Modern Interiors, are maintained at Whittier Monterey to display the varied floorplans and features. The sales office at 10620 Sierra Morena is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

To reach the dramatic hillside community, take the San Gabriel Freeway (605) and exit at Beverly Boulevard. Drive east on Beverly to Workman Mill Road and turn left on Workman Mill Road to Sierra Morena. Drive one block east to the new Whittier Monterey townhomes in Whittier.

With 'apologies to Iroquois'

"Psst! Wanna buy Manhattan? Or a piece of it?" Sound like the latest of Mayor Beame's schemes to eliminate the city's budget deficit?

What will be up for sale is a three-dimensional, multi-media model of Manhattan built by the Ruckus Construction Co., which, according to the Times, is finishing work on the downtown section that includes a 30-foot-high World Trade Center.

Once the midtown and uptown sections are completed, interested buyers can haggle over the price of the entire island or just a section of it when it goes on display at a midtown gallery.

Sweet move-in at Landing

Kendall Development Co., Inc. is presenting every new home owner at its new Huntington Beach community, The Landing, a 12-pound box of Knott's Berry Farm Jellies and Jams.

"It's our way of welcoming families into their new homes," said Ida Mazur, director of consumer services for the Newport Beach-based home-building firm.

THE GIFT is accompanied by a card that is personally signed by all Kendall Development employes. "New home owners are particularly pleased with the card," noted Mrs. Mazur. "Several people have mentioned that the gift typifies the extra attention Kendall gives to each owner."

Most of the families who have purchased homes in the first three increments will be living at The Landing by Christmas, according to the developer.

At the present time all Landing homes are sold. However, additional homes will be available beginning January, 1976.

MEANWHILE furnished models may be viewed Saturday through Monday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the sales office, located at the corner of Talbert Avenue and Springdale Street in Huntington Beach.

Beginning in January, the models will again be open on a daily basis.

See-through doors add dimension

Another dimension is added to a family room when it has sliding patio doors. The view becomes a visual extension of the family room.

Energy conservation is also achieved when the sliding patio doors have wood frames, double-pane insulating glass and factory-applied weatherstripping to reduce fuel costs.

Design for Living

You're a brick lover now

By EMILY MALINO

Brick is unbeatable. A single brick wall in any room can give it all the character it needs, and often in spite of the furnishings.

Brick has texture, it has atmosphere and it has its own marvelous ruddy, warm color.

Even whitewashed brick is handsome. It can give the same texture to a room, but can lighten it and make it adapt to a darker exposure.

Whether brick is left in its natural rust or tan or painted white, it is a very strong element in any room and must be treated with care. It has a gutsy feeling that is reminiscent of the early days of this country, like hand-hewn beams and log cabins and oil lamps.

On the other hand, we are living in the 20th century and we have to learn how to mix brick with the things we like.

BRICK GOES with a great many different styles of furniture, with furniture, in fact, that comes from places where no one ever saw a brick, much less lived in a brick room.

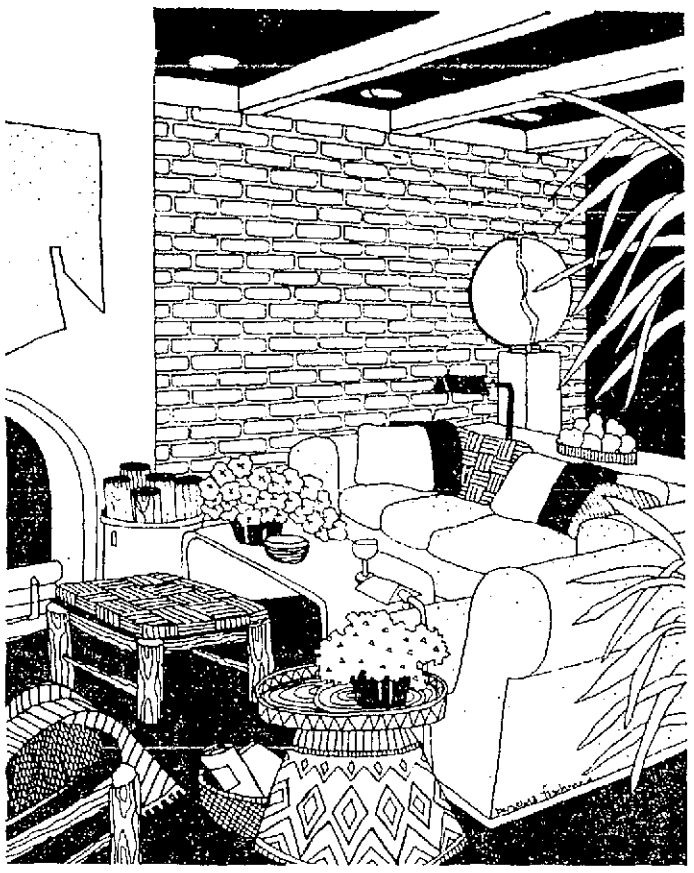

One kind of furniture brick definitely doesn't go with is fine French. Somehow, an elegant curved fauteuil (which your dictionary will tell you is an open arm chair) just looks wrong against brick. Even Sheraton or Chippendale chairs or tables look wrong.

Some woods look wrong; mahogany, for example, looks strange with brick because it is such a fine, closely grained wood that it seems out of place with this very robust material.

What works with brick? I can see a good case for pine furniture, the simpler Early American kind, ladder-back or Windsor chairs, trestle tables and pewter accessories.

I can see country French, those marvelous, heavy old tables, settees and chairs that are still available and if you can't find the real thing, you can buy good reproductions.

CONTEMPORARY furniture works with brick as well, but not the sleek chrome and glass we're used to thinking about. I like simple modern sofas and tables made of white laminate, chairs that are more Scandinavian in feeling than American modern.

BRICK WALLS do not automatically make a room. You have to choose your styles with care.

I worked on a family room with one brick wall; choosing sturdy but attractive furnishings to go with the brick was our problem; the only keepable was an old, faintly Art Deco sofa, a gift from the couple's parents who had bought it when it was considered "modern."

I covered it in a sturdy tan and white herringbone tweed and found a white Parsons table to fit behind it, a perfect place for an extra reading lamp and handy for a bar or glasses or a bowl of fruit.

A similar white laminated table, with Deco curves, is the coffee table and around it are a trip of footstools made of heavy, rustic logs, and an indoor version of the old log picnic furniture, with cushions covered in brown batik and rough brown handwoven Haitian cotton. Two lounge chairs in the same rustic style face the sofa.

BASKETS, a copper vat to hold logs at the fireplace, plants and modern sculptures and paintings work happily with the natural rust brick, and the whole assemblage is placed on a dark chocolate brown shag-plush carpet that conceals a multitude of sins as well as wear and tear and cookies and pizza.

The room was dark because the windows, which were at one end where a big game and dining table was placed, faced north, so we painted the brick a warm white, keeping the adjacent walls the same beige as the color in the tweed of the sofa.

Recessed wall-washer lighting in the ceiling lights the face and texture of the brick wall, which lighter than the rest of the room and the dark ceiling, easily becomes the focal point of this practical room for family pleasure and relaxation.

Low income housing plans due airing

What's Your Problem?

Base your down payments on workable mortgage level

By DON CAMPBELL

How much is "enough?"

If we're talking about a down payment, then we're talking about the amount of money that the seller is willing to accept. If we're talking about "enough" repayment of money owed to a loan shark, then we're talking about a sum that will persuade him not to have our arms broken.

But when we're a potential buyer, with plenty of money at our disposal, then WE decide how much is "enough."

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

Do you think it is wise for me to make a very large down payment when I purchase a house?

I am 52 years old, retired military, with an annual pension of $10,500. I have $32,000 in cash and about $8,000 in stocks, mutual funds and E bonds. The family is just my wife and I. When I get employment, I expect to make a yearly salary of about $8,000. At present I am just looking the situation over here while renting a small apartment. Mr. C.J.B. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: Different situations, and different problems. The average family, that is, starts house-hunting with two questions that have to be resolved: How much can we afford to pay as a down payment; and how much is it going to cost us per month?

Your case is different because you have enough ready cash to buy virtually any house that suits your fancy — and that is the danger. There's going to be a temptation here to over-buy and take on a house that you really can't afford to maintain on your relatively fixed income.

So, start a little bit backwards and try to determine how much per month you can afford to pay and what size mortgage fits into this scheme of things. Once you've determined this, then you'll know how much of a down payment is going to be required to leave a mortgage that you can handle.

According to the "Rule of 60," your monthly payments (principal, interest, taxes, insurance and maintenance) shouldn't exceed 1/60th of your annual income — or, in your case, about $300 a month. To be on the safe side, we should think in terms of a house with a $24,000 mortgage because, at this level, approximately $200 a month is required to amortize it, including principal and interest. That leaves a cushion of $100 a month to handle taxes, insurance and maintenance.

This means that if a $40,000 home catches your eye, you are going to have to pay about $16,000 down to keep the mortgage at the $24,000 level. If you buy a $30,000 home you should pay at least $6,000 down ... and so it goes. (Figures are based on a 20 year, 8 per cent mortgage).

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

My question is about selling a house in the over-65 capital gain situation. You inferred that the deed must be under joint ownership to derive this tax benefit.

What if the wife (who is younger) is the sole owner of the house and the husband (who is several years older and will reach 65 first) cannot prove that he is, in fact, in joint ownership of the house, because his name is not legally present on the deed? As you may know, quite a few marriages were set up this way to protect the wife if something happened to the husband.

One other point. In the case of inheriting a home (no cash consideration, just "love and affection"), what value would be placed on this home so that the gain, or loss, could be computed after the purchase of a second home at $40,000? Mr. W.H. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: If the husband's name isn't on the deed as joint owner, then, as far as the law is concerned, he's not a joint owner no matter how much he may be so in reality. That means that, in order to capitalize on the over-65, once-in-a-lifetime capital gains treatment on the sale of your home, you're either going to have to wait until you, yourself, are 65 or, preferably, change the papers now to joint ownership.

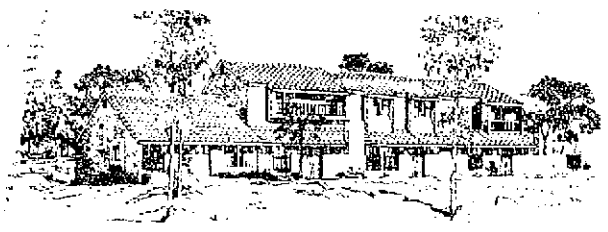

What about a gift house? The value put on it is the "fair market value" at the time the inheritance was made.

Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only representative questions of general interest. Write him in care of the I,PT, Box 230, Long Beach, 90844.

Why do stores start Christmas before Thanksgiving?

The pumpkins are still fresh from Halloween, Thanksgiving is not yet here, and already merchants have begun their Christmas shopping promotions! Many people may wonder what's the hurry. But suppose merchants didn't start Christmas early? It would not only pose many problems for them, but for YOU, the customer.

Remember how crowded our stores are the final two or three weeks before Christmas? Now imagine how difficult it would be to select that gift for a far-off friend and get it mailed on time.

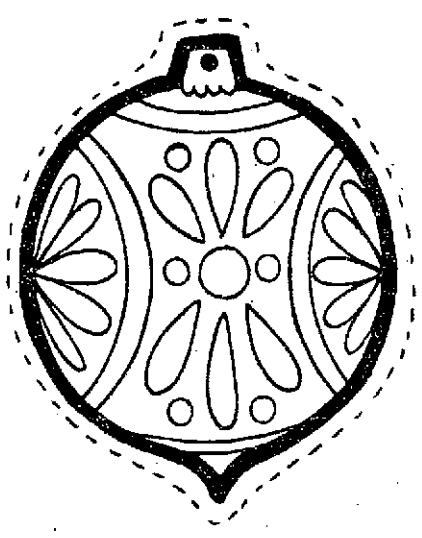

Any business has a responsibility to all its customers, and many people prefer to do their Christmas shopping in the pre-Thanksgiving period when stores aren't quite so crowded.

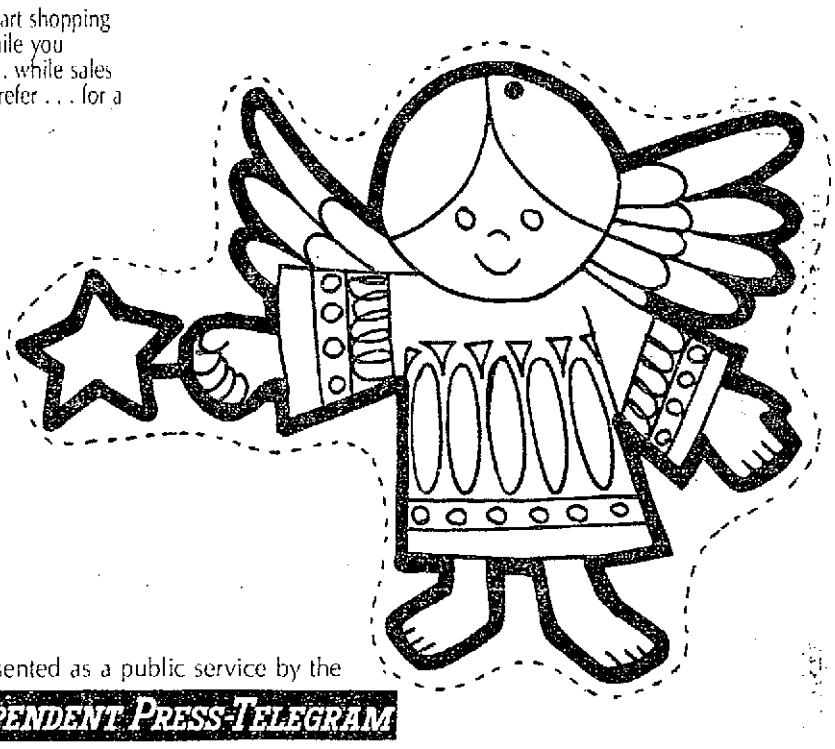

And what about the children? Thousands of kids look forward to their annual visit with Santa Claus. If they had to wait till after Thanksgiving many hundreds would be unable to see jolly St. Nick.

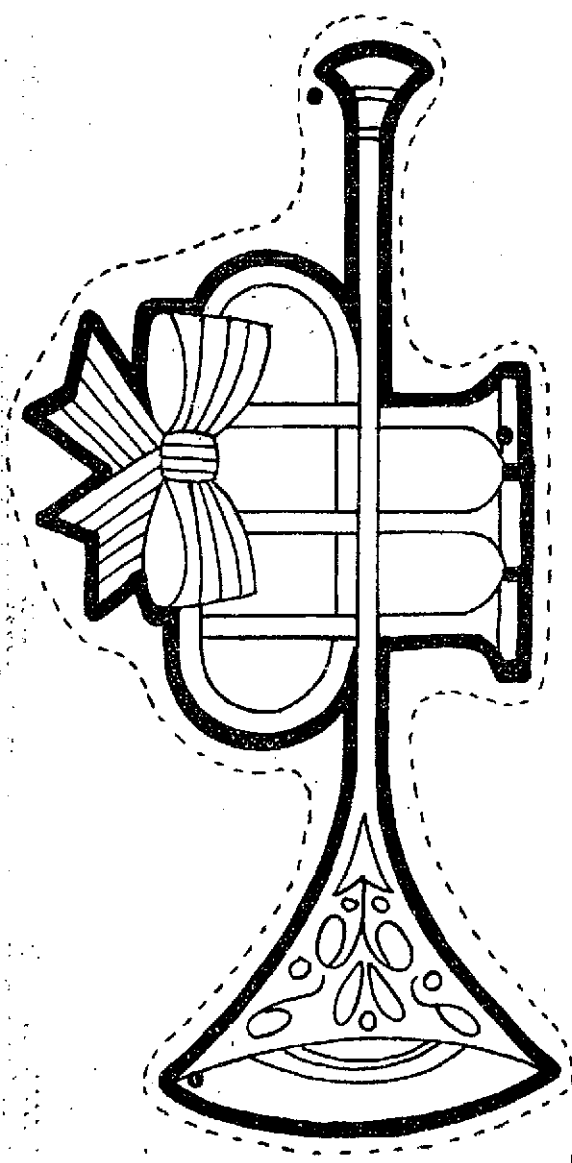

Early promotion of Christmas also makes it easier for the merchants to stock and display the goods you'll be buying. It makes it easier, too, for his employees to provide the type of service you need during this peak season.

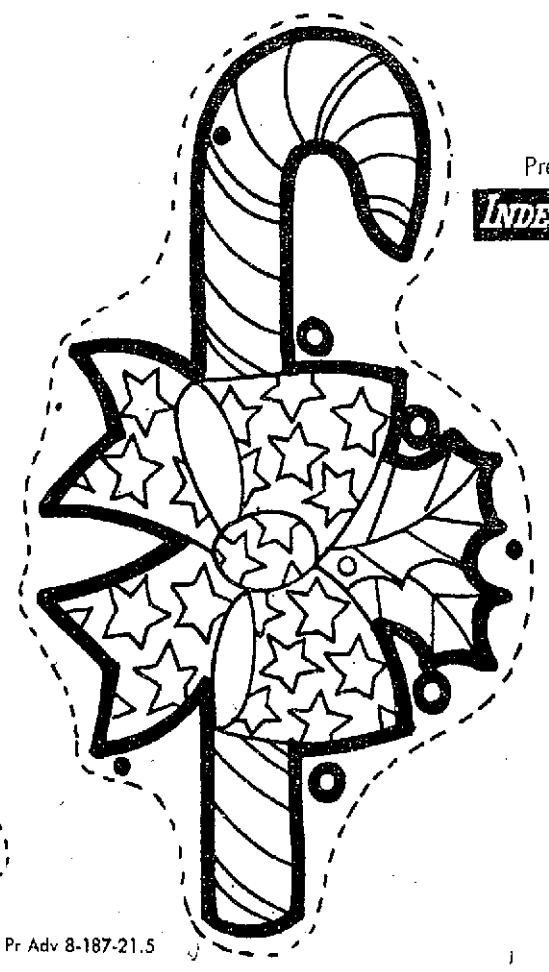

The reason then that merchants start Christmas before Thanksgiving can really be summed up in two words: "PUBLIC SERVICE" — the kind that adds to the cheer of the holiday season.

So do yourself and your favorite stores a favor. Start shopping now . . . while selections are at their best . . . while you have plenty of time to compare before buying . . . while sales personnel can give you the kind of service you prefer . . . for a Merrier Christmas Season.

Adams gets smart, offers something new in TV comedy

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

DON ADAMS . . . with Connie Stevens in 'Screen Test'

When Don Adams was a boy growing up in New York City, he was crazy about movies and dreamed of becoming a film star himself.

"I spent as much time in the movie theaters as I did in school," he told me the other day at lunch in the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel. "The truant officers knew where to look for me.

"I used to dream that maybe someday I'd get to make a screen test and would become another Errol Flynn or somebody like that."

Adams rose to fame in television rather than the movies — he is best known for his portrayal of the bumbling Agent 86, Maxwell Smart, in the "Get Smart" series for five years — but he remains a movie nut.

And he has parlayed his love of films and his TV comedic talents into a new television series this fall, "Don Adams Screen Test."

ON THE SHOW, which is meant to be funny but also has a serious purpose, Adams provides amateur acting hopefuls the opportunity to win a role in the movies or on another TV show.

The series, taped at Universal Studios, is a nationally syndicated show — rather than a network offering. In the Los Angeles-Long Beach area, it airs on KNBC (Channel 4) on Saturdays from 7:30 to 8 p.m. In other cities, it might be telecast on a different day and in a different time period.

"In New York, we've been No. 1 in our time period for five weeks," Don told me. He admitted it hasn't been doing that well in Los Angeles, where it is up against "Space: 1999," "Wild, Wild World of Animals," "Lawrence Welk Show" and "Let's Make a Deal," among other things. The show is being preempted this week, incidentally, by a special on Channel 4.

At least it's not up against "Get Smart," a former Emmy-winning comedy series that still is being carried twice a day on Channel 13 in syndicated reruns.

ADAMS, WHO got his own first big show business break in 1954 by auditioning on the "Arthur Godfrey Talent Scout Show," offers novices the chance to do a screen test with a famous performer in re-creating a famous scene from a movie.

The series was Don's idea, and he is the executive producer, host and on-camera "director." He talked noted director Marty Pasetta into taking over the job of producer-director.

"I got the idea from the out-takes that all TV shows have," he said. Out-takes, he explained, are the goofs and flubs that occur during the taping of a show but are never seen on the air.

"These out-takes are often funnier than anything on the show," he pointed out. "They're funny because they're not written, they're not contrived.

"It's human comedy. It's people without their masks on—goofing up."

The three-time Emmy Award winner said "Screen Test" lends itself well to out-takes because there are no rehearsals.

"The performers do it cold turkey," said Don. "They have cue cards, but don't even have to use them. I direct them on camera, shooting a show within a show. It can be pretty hilarious — and lots of fun."

DON LOOKS upon the show as "sort of a combination of the old Sid Caesar movie routine, 'Candid Camera' and 'Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts'" all rolled into one.

He ran newspaper ads last April asking: "Do you want to be a movie star?," with forms for contestants to fill out and mail in. From more than 5,000 responses, about 2,200 unknowns were invited to the Universal Studios back lot one Saturday in May to be interviewed by 20 casting directors. After studying reports by the casting directors, Adams and Pasetta winnowed the list to 400 semifinalists, who were given follow-up auditions and interviews.

Then in May and June and early July, the first year's 24 shows were taped before audiences at Universal. Six of the amateur thespians were notified to be in the audience for each show as finalists, and the two chosen to perform on each show—working separately with a different celebrity—didn't know they would be picked until their names were called out.

After being introduced to his or her professional costar, the novice then viewed a three-minute film clip from an old movie before being asked to re-create the scene.

AFTER EACH of the two amateurs selected to compete on a particular show has performed, a prominent director selects one as the winner—and that person gets a role in a movie or TV show. Both the winner and the loser get a tape casette of his or her screen test, plus movie equipment.

Stars taking part in the shows—two to a show—are Zsa Zsa Gabor and George Kennedy, Phyllis Diller and Peter Lawford, Jackie Cooper and Sheeky Greene, Danny Thomas and Doug McClure, Ernest Borgnine and Barry Newman, Lyle Waggoner and Barbara Feldon (Adams' spy partner on "Get Smart"), Shirley Jones and Bob Newhart, Totie Fields and Edward Asner, Jack Cassidy and Jan Murray, Mel Brooks and Loretta Swit, Don Rickles and William Shatner, Steve Lawrence and Carol Wayne.

Also, Ruth Buzzi and Dick Gautier, Sally Struthers and Milton Berle, Leslie Nielsen and Ross Martin, Jane Russell and Robert Wagner, Miss Struthers and Bobby Morse, Jo Ann Pflug and Martin Milner, Debbie Reynolds and Dick Martin, Darren McGavin and Lucie Arnaz, Buddy Hackett and Ricardo Montalban, Red Buttons and Frank Gorshin, Jim Brown and Lee Meriwether, Greg Morris and Robert Conrad.

In the 60-minute pilot, the guest stars were James Caan, Connie Stevens, Jason Miller and Patty Duke Astin.

"Did you have any trouble getting the stars to participate?" I inquired.

"No, not much," replied Don. "Peter Lawford just wanted to know if he could compete for the part in the movie."

ADAMS, WHO contributed two famous catch-phrases to the American language as Maxwell Smart—"Would you believe?" and "Sorry about that, chief"—is hopeful but not yet sure that the series will go into a second season. And would you believe there's a possibility it may return next season not only as a weekly evening show but also as a five-times-a-week daytime program?

If "Don Adams Screen Test" does continue as an evening show next fall, auditions will be held in various cities across the country, the producer-host said. And if it becomes a daytime series, he added, the amateur participants for those shows would be chosen from the audience, without auditions.

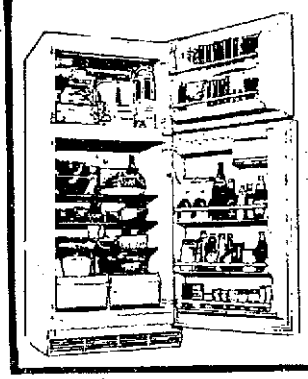

See you in the movies.

"NBC SUNDAY MYSTERY MOVIE" sleuths have their own mode of operation in solving cases. Peter Falk, as "Columbo," gets to the bottom of things even if it means getting on his hands and knees to look for clues. "McCloud" star Dennis Weaver often goes undercover with a pretty lady like Angel Tompkins. Rock Hudson and Susan St. James put their heads together in "McMillan and Wife." And Tony Curtis, in "McCoy," cons the unscrupulous con artists.

"Hee Haw" getting the last laugh

Archie: "You know, I believe this country's always been crowded."

Grandpa: "How's that?"

Archie: "Why, even in the olden days, the Indians had to have reservations."

By GARY DEEB
Chicago Tribune

The name of the program is "Hee Haw." For seven seasons, would-be intellectuals have called it everything from "barnyard prattle" to "the scourge of national dignity."

But "Hee Haw" has persevered — first on CBS, now in nationwide syndication as a fabulously profitable show with an enormous, loyal audience.

What "Hee Haw" offers the non-silk stocking crowd is a pair of fundamentals currently in great demand: (1) lots of fine country music, which is rapidly becoming America's favorite sound, and (2) an unpretentious, admittedly corny brand of humor, skillfully performed by an experienced cast of funnymen.

IT MAY BE heresy to say it, but "Hee Haw" comics like Archie Campbell, Gordie Tapp and Grandpa Jones boast the same show business tradition and split-second timing that have made legends of Johnny Carson, George Burns and Groucho Marx.

But Campbell, Tapp and Jones are rural folks, not city slickers, and so their considerable talents have been derided for years by pseudo-sophisticates.

Which means the urbanites who call "Hee Haw" a hillbilly show are going to be more than a little shocked when John Henry Faulk joins the program in January.

That's right. John Henry Faulk — the witty folklorist, all-purpose raconteur, and self-styled "kamikaze liberal" who was blacklisted 10 years ago by right-wing witch hunters — is the newest addition to the "Hee Haw" cast.

I PHONED Faulk down in Madisonville, Tex., and asked him how things were going.

"Well, a lotta people have called me and said, 'You're not really goin' on that bucolic 'Hee Haw', are you? So I told these folks: 'If you all knew the mystique of 'Hee Haw', then you'd know why I'm on it.

"And you'd also know why George Wallace keeps winning bigger majorities all the time. Because Madison Avenue and Washington and Hollywood just don't know where the people are.'"

WHAT ABOUT this "mystique" of "Hee Haw"?

"People say the show is stupid and backward and all that. But 'Hee Haw' is really what America's about. The stars and producers and writers know what makes folks in Spokane, Wash., and St. Petersburg, Fla., tick. It touches people in the heart, and this is what the boys on Madison Avenue don't understand."

Nevertheless, some of the down-home, good-ol'-boy tales that John Henry will weave on "Hee Haw" will sport a heavy sociopolitical flavor — an area the program never has ventured into.

For instance, in one segment already taped in Nashville, Faulk tells about his Texas buddy, Peavine Jeffries, who says: "Y'know, Lyndon Johnson lied 'bout Jerry Ford when he said that Ol' Jerry played too much football without a helmet. Jerry wore a helmet, all right. It's just that he played center, y'see — and he got used to lookin' at the world upside-down, between his legs, backwards."

PRETTY GIRLS, combined with country music and bucolic humor, attract viewers to the nationally syndicated "Hee Haw" TV series. And here are three of the girls: Barbi Benton, Lisa Todd and Marianne Gordon. The show airs Saturdays from 8 to 9 p.m. on Ch. 11.

Do sports need television more than TV needs sports?

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press

Could television survive if it never carried another sports event? Easily.

But it isn't at all certain that the sports establishment would exist if television coverage suddenly evaporated — not in its present form, anyway.

"Television money is so important," says ABC sports czar Roone Arledge, "that if it were withdrawn, the whole structure would fall apart."

That isn't network hyperbole. The fees paid by television for the right to place cameras at sports events provide millions of dollars to sports.

"There isn't a single NFL team that could operate in the black without TV income," states Jim Kensil, executive director of the National Football League. Commissioner Pete Rozelle has said each of the 25 NFL teams receives more than $2 million a year from the league's sale of TV rights.

Executives in other sports sing a similar tune. A national television contract often can spell the difference between success and failure for a new organization — not only because of the financial implications but also because of the fan interest generated through mass exposure of the game.

NBC, for example, is generally credited as the savior of the old American Football League. Back when the AFL was floundering in 1964, NBC paid $42 million for a five-year contract.

That money — five times more that what ABC had been paying for AFL television rights — helped make it possible for AFL clubs to lure top college draft choices from the rival NFL. It kept them functioning until the NFL finally gave up in 1969 and agreed to a merger.

When the World Football League blasted off last year, NBC, CBS and ABC already were glutted with professional and college football, and the financially pressed league could only attract a $12 million national contract. This year it didn't get any, and WFL officials said the lack of that kind of insurance definitely contributed to the league's collapse on Oct. 22.

E. M. (Bud) Erickson, executive director of the Ladies Professional Golf Association, says the occasions they've had national TV coverage have made noticeable differences.

Besides providing extra cash to boost the prize purse, Erickson reports, it focuses new attention on the women — from people who decide to attend the next LPGA event in their area, from groups that offer to sponsor a new LPGA tournament now that they've seen the caliber of play, and from advertisers who realize the potential in tying in with the lady golfers.

That's how dependent the sports world has grown on television. And for its part, the television industry, while it could survive without sports, isn't about to try. Sports events generated an estimated $284 million in advertising sales last year at ABC, NBC and CBS alone. And there were millions more for local TV stations.

So the relationship is rather complex and delicate. From the outside it might be said that television is subsidizing many of the sports it covers, but on the inside it is accepted by both TV and sports executives as simply the way their businesses operate.

Carl Lindemann Jr., head of NBC's sports department, says the approach isn't much different than that of the networks' entertainment divisions, which pay the studios and independent producers to make dramatic and comedy programs for them.

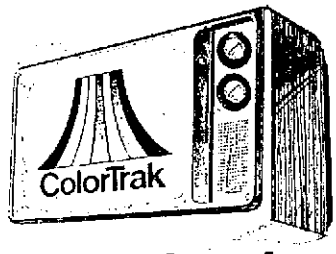

The NFL's Kinsil says: "If you say 'subsidize,' you're putting the cart before the horse. Football didn't get where it is because of television. It got where it is because it's a quality product.

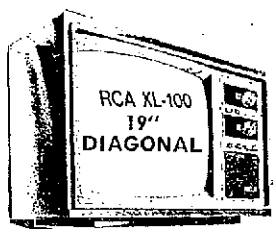

"But because of rising costs and the increased success, that income becomes a necessary item ... It becomes vital for the sport if it wants to continue to operate at the level it does now."

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

PREMILLENNIALISM NO. 7

In our last article we found that Isaiah prophesied in Isaiah 2 that the kingdom was to be established in Jerusalem.

Also, in Daniel 2 we read where Daniel prophesied that the kingdom would be established during the days of the Roman kings. So, we have the where (Jerusalem) and the when (during the days of the Roman kings.)

JOEL SHOWS "WHAT"

Just as Isaiah prophesied where and Daniel prophesied when, so Joel 2 tells us what was to take place. Peter quotes from Joel in Acts chapter 2. Christ said after his resurrection, "Wait in Jerusalem until the power comes" (Acts 1:8). When the Holy Spirit came and the power thus came, Peter says that what they were seeing and hearing was a fulfillment of Joel 2. But, do you remember what Christ said would happen when the power came?

Why, he said the Kingdom would be there, for it was to come with power. Thus, all three of the prophesies mentioned above were fulfilled in Acts the second chapter. They were in Jerusalem during the days of the Roman Kings and they began (under the direction of the Spirit) to speak in different languages and prophesy just as Joel said they would. The inescapable conclusion is that according to the prophesies of the prophets and according to the prophesy of Jesus in Mark 9:1, the kingdom come with power on the first pentecost after the resurrection of Christ.

DANIEL TELLS US "WHEN"

In Daniel 7:13-14 we read where One like the Son of Man came to the Ancient of Days and presented before Him. And there was given to Him dominion, glory, and a Kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and men of every language might serve Him. When we compare what Daniel saw in his vision with Acts 1:9 we see when Christ received His kingdom. Not when he come to earth, but when he came to the Ancient of Days — which was what happened in Acts 1:9.

Q. Is it a fact that a general named Alexander Haig was once acting President of these United States? If so, what sort of President was he?—L. T., Carbondale, Ill.

A. In the final year of the Nixon Presidency, 1973-74, Gen. Alexander Haig, Nixon's chief of staff, pretty much ran the office. As Henry Kissinger revealed, Nixon "barely governed" during that period. Nixon was so unnerved by the Watergate scandal that he found it difficult to function completely on any project except the containment of Watergate. He became distraught, indecisive, neurotic, anxious, worried and, finally, in a desperate effort to save himself, dishonest and deceitful. Haig thereupon administered the Presidency. Haig was an excellent administrator but he was shortsighted, gullible, and in the judgment of many, more obsessively loyal to Nixon than to the country. Haig's role, for example, in executing Nixon's firing of Archibald Cox as Watergate prosecutor in October, 1973, was an example of a political general in action at his very worst. History's assessment of Alexander Haig as Nixon's chief of staff will be tinged with doubt.

Q. In your opinion which Republican U.S. Senator and which Democratic U.S. Senator have the best minds?—Nancy Dunne, El Paso, Tex.

A. Sen. Charles Mathias Jr. (R., Md.) and Sen. Philip Hart (D., Mich.) have first-rate minds.

PETER WOLF AND FAYE DUNAWAY

Q. Is the Faye Dunaway-Peter Wolf marriage finished?—Henrietta Weinberg, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Not at this point. Faye recently gave her husband a $25,000 Maserati, also had New York clothes designer Dimitri style a $750 black Cabretta car coat and matching black leather beret to coordinate with his black goatee and black shades.

MR. AND MRS. BOB HOPE

Q. Bob Hope recently said that he was politically nonpartisan, that he got along well with all U.S. Presidents. My understanding is that Bob Hope is a rock-ribbed Republican who contributed large sums of money to the Nixon, Agnew, and Ronald Reagan campaigns. Am I right?—Sam Handler, Los Angeles.

A. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hope contributed $16,000 to the Nixon-Agnew campaign in 1968. The Hopes contributed $25,000 to Ronald Reagan's 1970 California gubernatorial program. The Hopes contributed $60,000 to Nixon-Agnew in 1972. Although he is an activist Republican, comedian Hope gets on well with politicians of both parties; no entertainer has contributed more time to various charities and benefits than Bob.

Q. What is the origin of the feud between writer Gore Vidal and Jackie Kennedy Onassis, whose mothers in turn married stockbroker Hugh Auchincloss? I understand they have not seen or talked to each other for 12 years.—Mrs. Robert K., Farmingdale, N.Y.

A. Jackie Onassis and Gore Vidal some weeks ago occupied the same elevator in the Ritz Hotel in London. They smiled politely at each other, said nothing. Their feud started in 1963 when Vidal, a fast man with a quip, described the Kennedys as "The Holy Family," predicted that Bobby Kennedy was being groomed for the Presidency, and later said of Teddy Kennedy: "Nature designed Edward Kennedy for a humbler job—he would have made a good bartender." The Kennedys apparently regarded that as the last straw, decided to drum Vidal out of the family corps.

Q. The late Maurice Chevalier—was he really the tightest man in the history of show business?—Danielle Lapin, New York City.

A. Chevalier was one of the tightest. In "Musical Stages, an Autobiography," composer Richard Rodgers writes of Chevalier: "In fact, he was the only man I've ever met who would accept a cigarette and put it in his pocket."

Q. I would appreciate some word on the health of that great actor, Laurence Olivier. Is he dying of cancer?—B. F. D., Cambridge, Mass.

A. Lord Olivier, 68, has recovered from a bout with cancer, has been passed by insurance companies to star in The Marathon Man with Dustin Hoffman. In the film Olivier plays an assassin.

Q. Alexander Andreadis who married Christina Onassis—hasn't he quietly bought his way out of the Greek army?—Ken Andropoulis, Bridgeport, Conn.

A. Some weeks ago the Greek government passed a law permitting draftees to buy their way out of military service. Alexander Andreadis, 30, heir to the Greek banking and shipping family, promptly bought his way out for 7000 drachmas, about $205. He had served for more than six months on the Greek-Turkish border. Four months ago Andreadis married Christina Onassis and now would like to do a little dallying with her.

GLEN CAMPBELL AND WIFE BILLIE JEAN

Q. Singer Glen Campbell and his wife, Billie Jean—have they split?—M. Meany, Little Rock, Ark.

A. Campbell, 38, after 16 years of marriage and three children, has been sued for divorce by wife Billie Jean.

"How can anything so mild be so flavorful?"

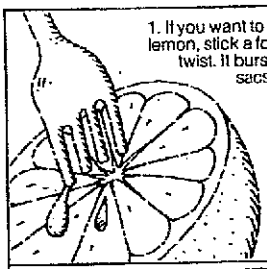

The Sunkist Lemon

Sunkist is a trademark of Sunkist Growers, Inc.® 14130 Riverside Dr., Sherman Oaks, Calif. ©1975

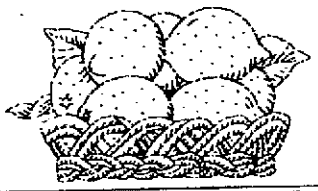

Pick your favorite lemon idea.

There are lots of wonderful things you can do with a Sunkist Yellow Sweepstakes. Just choose the one you'd like best. And

1. If you want to juice half a lemon, stick a fork in it and twist. It bursts the juice sacs and helps the juice to flow.

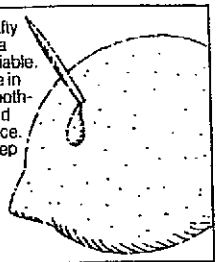

2. Whole lemons have a fantastic scent and look beautiful. Put bowls of them in the kitchen, dining area – even the bathroom.

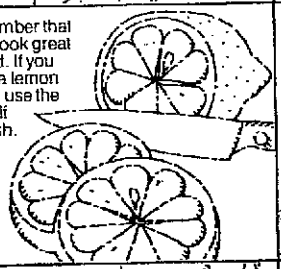

3. You'll get more juice out of a lemon if it's at room temperature. And if you roll it on the counter top before cutting.

4. And here's a nifty lemon trick. Roll a lemon until it's pliable. Then poke a hole in one end with a toothpick. Squeeze and out comes the juice. Replace pick. Keep in fridge.

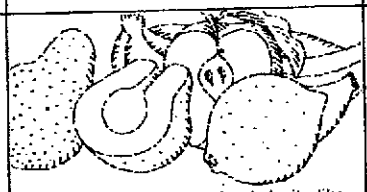

5. Remember that lemons look great with food. If you use half a lemon for juice, use the other half to garnish.

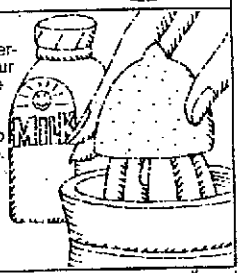

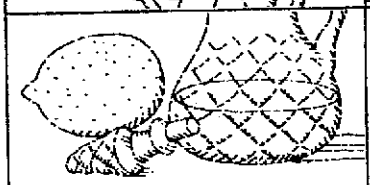

6. Lemon juice is so fresh that a squeeze or two into canned, packaged or frozen foods can make them taste fresh again.

7. Lemon juice keeps fresh fruits like bananas, apples, avocados, etc. from turning dark. Just dip them in. They'll stay pretty for hours.

8. Got a recipe calling for buttermilk? Make your own. Combine 1 tbs. lemon juice with enough milk to make one cup. Let stand for 5 minutes.

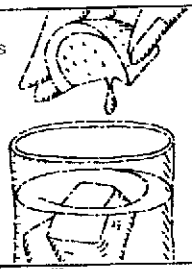

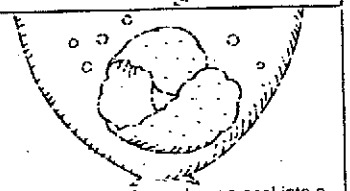

9. Substitute lemon juice for vinegar in many recipes. It's fresher, more flavorful.

10. Lemon peel sprinkled over cakes, puddings, sauces, not only perks up the taste, but improves the looks.

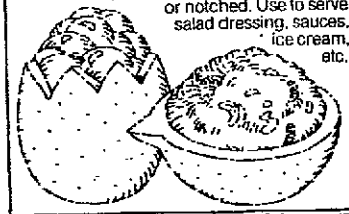

11. A squeeze of lemon into a glass of water makes it more refreshing and is a quick pick-me-up.

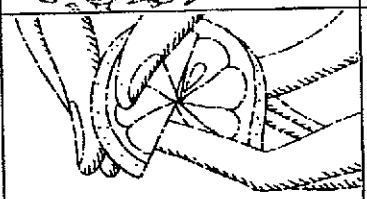

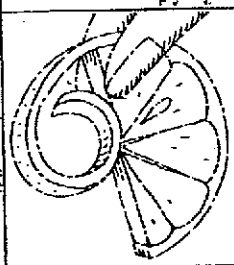

12. When you drop a lemon peel into a drink, be sure to twist the peel. A bit of lemon oil gets into your drink and adds to the flavor.

13. To make lemon shells, cut lemon in half. Juice. Scrape clean. Edge may be left plain, or notched. Use to serve salad dressing, sauces, ice cream, etc.

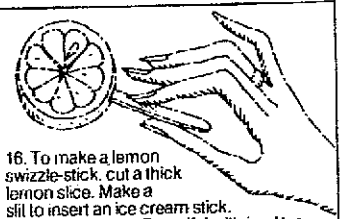

14. To make cartwheel twists, cut lemon slice just to center, and twist.

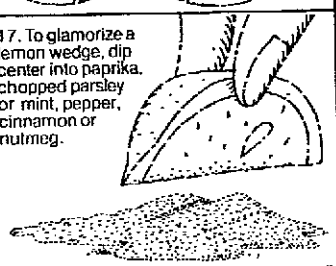

15. To make lemon curls, cut half of fruit from slice leaving entire peel. Curl peel to center.

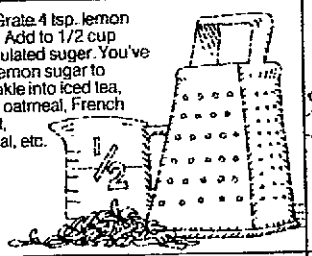

16. To make a lemon swizzle-stick, cut a thick lemon slice. Make a slit to insert an ice cream stick. Freeze, if you like. Beautiful with iced tea, lemonade, etc.

17. To glamorize a lemon wedge, dip center into paprika, chopped parsley or mint, pepper, cinnamon or nutmeg.

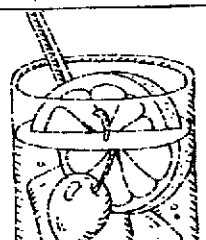

18. Grate 4 tsp. lemon peel. Add to 1/2 cup granulated suger. You've got lemon sugar to sprinkle into iced tea, over oatmeal, French toast, cereal, etc.

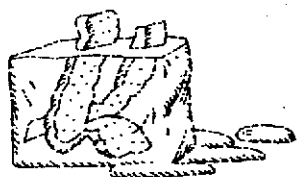

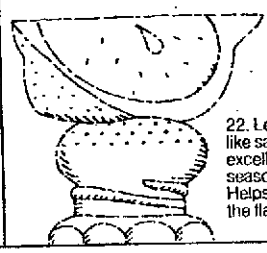

19. Grated lemon peel sprinkled over a salad perks up the flavor, makes it taste even fresher.

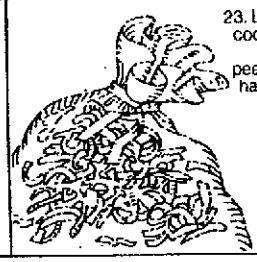

20. And don't forget how lemon improves the taste and looks of most any alcoholic beverage.

21. Try freezing little strips of lemon peel into ice cubes. It's pretty. And adds to the drink.

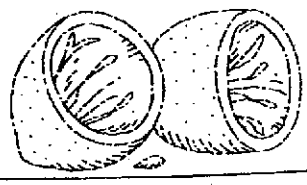

22. Lemon juice, like salt, is an excellent seasoning. Helps bring out the flavor, too.

23. Lots of good cooks grate up extra lemon peel to keep on hand in plastic bags in the freezer.

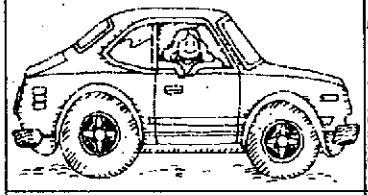

24. Toss used lemons into your garbage disposal to help keep it clean and fresh-smelling.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

INDIRA GANDHI WITH SON SANJAY

INDIA'S NEXT LEADER?

One of the most controversial figures in contemporary India is Sanjay Gandhi, 29-year-old son of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

It is said in many quarters that Sanjay dominates his mother with an iron hand, that he is waiting in the wings to take over as the third Nehru generation of power in India.

Sanjay is indisputably his mother's most important adviser. It was he who prevented her from resigning this past summer when the Supreme Court of India was ruling on Indira Gandhi's conviction for illegal campaign practices. It was he who rallied public support for his mother. It is he who insists that his mother stonewall all charges and steamroll all opposition.

Even before Indira Gandhi proclaimed a state of emergency, son Sanjay was involved in a plethora of scandals related to corruption, blackmail and sex. Yet his official record reveals only minor charges of disorderly conduct and financial finagling.

Sanjay who was educated in India and England was sent to the Rolls-Royce factory in Derby, England, where he took a 15-month course in mechanics, a course which allows him to call himself an engineer. His mother placed him in charge of producing the Maruti, the so-called people's car, and he badly bungled the entire project.

He lives with his mother in New Delhi and according to those Indian journalists who are not afraid to talk, it is he who rules the roost.

DRUG LEADERS

Worldwide pharmaceutical sales will reach $40 billion this year, of which 16% will have been spent in the U.S.

Japan has the second-largest pharmaceutical market, followed by West Germany, France, Italy, Spain, England, Brazil; Mexico, Argentina, Canada, and India.

Only recently has South America emerged as an increasingly important drug market.

PAPER CONTRACEPTIVE

Paper contraceptive pills were first developed in the Peoples Republic of China. Now British scientists are beginning to produce them for their own people and for export to underdeveloped countries. The contraceptive is made of edible paper which has been saturated with the extract contained in the normal pill. Advantages of the paper pill are that it is cheaper to produce, pack, ship, store, and carry.

RAW FISH DANGERS

Raw fish delicacies such as sashimi, herring, ceviche and gravlax have become increasingly popular with Americans. Such popularity could produce a health problem, according to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Many raw fish caught off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts contain anisakian larvae. The parasite, says the weekly "Morbidity and Mortality Report" of the Center for Disease and Control, can survive brief periods of refrigeration and smoking at low temperatures. Only by cooking at normal temperatures is the parasite quickly killed.

The center warns Americans that "eating fresh raw marine fish should be recognized as a potential health hazard."

BLACK TV

The first black-owned television station in the United States began operating last month. Channel 62 in Detroit is owned by the International Free and Accepted Modern Masons, a black fraternal organization. The station is currently operating on a 7 a.m. to 1 a.m. schedule. WGPR-TV expects to expand to a 24-hour schedule within a year.

FOR THE RICH REDS

"Deluxe service" is a concept which has been essentially ignored in the Soviet Union until recently. But now, if you can afford it, you can purchase it from a firm called "Red Morning Light." Originally started in Kiev, it now has 1400 academicians, workers, psychologists, housewives and students in its employ. These people provide every imaginable kind of service from grocery shopping to marriage counseling. They will organize a wedding--provide the wedding gown, flowers, orchestra, getaway car and plan the post-ceremony party. To prevent it from degenerating into a drinking orgy, they will even order the exact amount of alcohol based on age and constitution of all the guests.

This state service agency controls its own finances and even advertises in newspapers and on television and radio. The demands for its services are so great that it now employs retired persons for some of its jobs. According to Soviet law, any pensioner who works in a menial job can get his full pension in addition to his wages.

WORKING WOMEN

More women between the ages of 15 and 64 work in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe than in the Western World. The following table shows the percentages of working women in 21 countries:

RUSSIA, 82%	JAPAN, 56%
EAST GERMANY, 80%	ENGLAND, 52%
BULGARIA, 74%	SWITZERLAND, 51%
HUNGARY, 73%	AUSTRIA, 50%
ROMANIA, 73%	UNITED STATES, 49%
POLAND, 63%	WEST GERMANY, 49%
FINLAND, 62%	AUSTRALIA, 45%

FAME DRAIN Over the years Great Britain has produced countless men of fame -- scientists, artists, entertainers of every stripe.

Now it is in danger of losing its current crop of star achievers.

The income tax rates are largely to blame. They range up to 83 per cent on earned income and up to 98 per cent on investment income. After a certain point such rates become confiscatory.

As a result the Bay City Rollers, the No. 1 pop group, will probably leave Britain and join the growing number of tax exiles seeking refuge in the United States, France, Switzerland, and other countries.

Mick Jagger and the Rolling Stones left England in 1971. "If the maximum tax was reduced to 50 per cent," says Jagger, "which is what it is in America, it's more than likely that the Rolling Stones would return to England."

Former Beatle Ringo Starr, living in California, says, "I'd love to live in Britain again. But it seems terribly unfair that so much of what we earn should be taken away from us in taxes."

Another recent tax exile, singer Rod Stewart, also living in California, joins in with, "Let the government reduce that awful tax rate, and I'll be back in London in the morning."

Richard Burton, David Niven, Rex Harrison, Elizabeth Taylor, Charlotte Rampling -- the cream of the British entertainment world -- have all escaped from the oppression of British taxes by living abroad. Nor are tax exiles limited to entertainers. The loss of eminent scientists and highly qualified doctors is now arousing governmental concern. An estimated 1500 physicians are reportedly leaving Great Britain each year, largely because no senior doctor or surgeon on the National Health Service earning $20,000 or more a year is allowed an increase in salary.

DYSENTERY CURE Dysentery is a common problem among people who like to visit far-off lands and eat the native food. The thought of suffering from a fever, headache, abdominal pain, diarrhea and vomiting keeps many would-be travelers closer to home. But now a chemist with the Sandoz Pharmaceuticals house in Switzerland has isolated entertoxin, the problematical toxin.

Dr. Friedrick Dorner says a substance can be made from it which stimulates the body to produce the necessary antibodies. It is expected that within two years there will be a vaccine to guard against dysentery.

ABIGAIL AND JOHN Historians of the feminist movement in this country usually start their accounts with mid-19th-century figures like Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony. However, a far-earlier spokesperson for women's rights is now beginning to get her due. She's Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, one of the Founding Fathers and the second President of the United States. Thanks to a WNET public television series, "The Adams Chronicles," which starts next January, and to "The Book of Abigail and John," a selection of family letters just published by Harvard University Press, Abigail is taking her place as a spunky, outspoken feminist far ahead of her times.

Although her husband left her at home with the children in Braintree, Mass., while he was in Philadelphia from 1774 to 1778 with the Continental Congress, Abigail kept reminding him to "Remember the Ladies" as she pressed her demands for laws to protect and educate women.

"Remember all Men would be tyrants if they could," she wrote him, then added half-seriously: "If particular care and attention is not paid to the Ladies we are determined to foment a Rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, or Representation." In another letter she complained: "I can not say I think you very generous to the Ladies, for whilst you are proclaiming peace and good will to Men, Emancipating all Nations, you insist upon retaining an absolute power over Wives."

John Adams replied to his wife in a bantering tone: "As to your extraordinary Code of Laws, I cannot but laugh...Depend on it, we know better than to repeal our Masculine systems." Despite Abigail, the Continental Congress didn't do much to affirm the right of women. But presumably Mrs. Adams would be very pleased at what her descendants are accomplishing nowadays.

QUITTING ISRAEL Three years ago more than 50,000 immigrants settled in Israel. Last year only 22,000 settled there. This year the estimate is only 15,000.

Worse yet, of the thousands of Jews who were permitted to leave the Soviet Union for Israel last year more than 35% decided when they reached Vienna not to go to Israel.

Not only is the inflow to Israel drying up but the outflow is increasing. Last year 21,000 Israelis left their country. This year a similar number will depart.

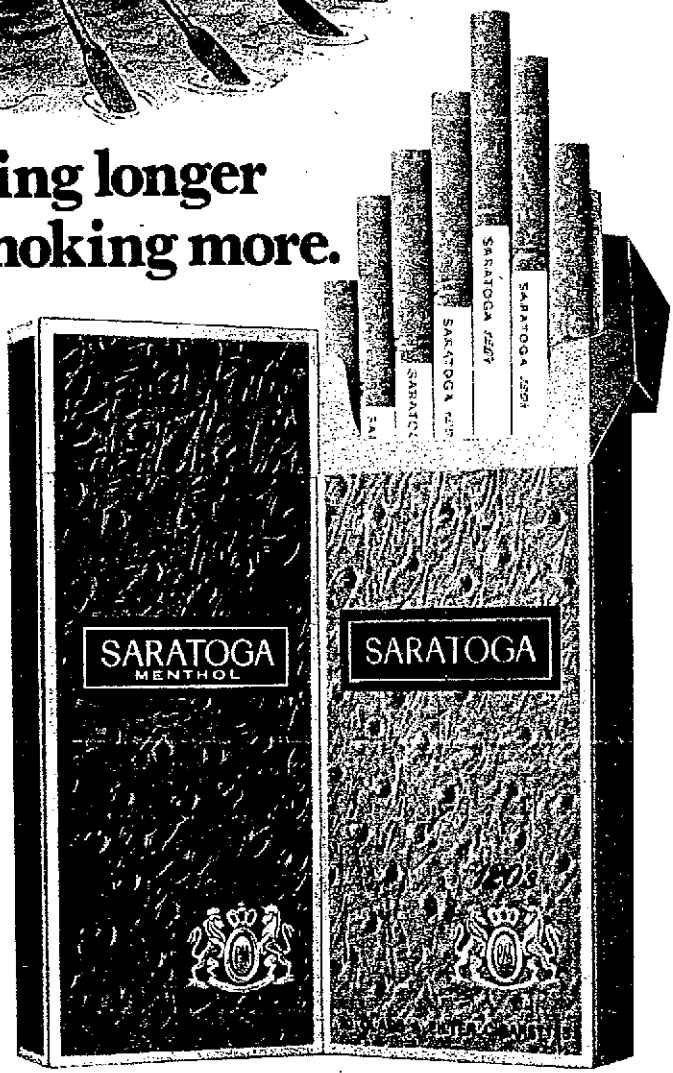

The reasons: rising prices, constant devaluation of the currency, heavy taxation, the omnipresent fear of war, long tours of compulsory military duty, and a highly doubtful national future.

ADULT LEARNERS Education should not stop after high school or college. Data released recently from federal records show that one in eight adults is currently involved in some adult education program. In 1957, only one in 13 eligible adults were participating in adult education.

AFTER THE FEAST

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

This is the week of the great American feast, and the center of attraction is the plump, glossy golden-brown turkey. And after the feast there is usually some turkey left over.

First remove any stuffing and store it covered in the refrigerator. Leftover meat can be sliced for sandwiches, but be sure to save enough to make this beautiful, colorful molded salad—too delicious to be considered a mere "leftover."

Begin the meal with cream of mushroom soup. Follow with the salad and little hot rolls. Wind up with a luscious layer cake, made quickly with a mix and ready-to-use frosting in your favorite flavor.

TURKEY SALAD IN A MOLD

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup cold water
- 1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed chicken broth
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 2½ cups diced cooked turkey
- ½ cup thinly sliced celery
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup chopped pitted ripe olives
- ¼ cup finely diced pimiento

"I want a coffee that gives me good rich flavor, cup after cup... a coffee I can depend on for freshness everytime I brew it. That's why I switched to MJB. It's not just another coffee."

MJB...Specially Blended for the Richest Flavor.

Former Democratic national chairman James A. Farley stands in his New York City office amid the mementos of a political career starting as town clerk in 1911, reaching its peak in the alliance with President Roosevelt in the 1930's.

Thirty-nine years after his defeat by Roosevelt, Alfred M. Landon can sit on veranda at Topeka and reflect, ride his horse and speak out bluntly; he urged détente in 1955 with China and Russia if "we're not foolish about it."

Two Elder Statesmen With Young Ideas

by L. H. Whittemore

TOPEKA, KAN. & NEW YORK CITY

In the American history books, Alf M. Landon and James A. Farley are already indelible fixtures as characters in the political drama of this century. But Alf Landon and Jim Farley, 88 and 87, are also involved in today's world. They are as active, keen and cheerful as ever.

Both men will regard next summer's national conventions as occasions for nostalgia. The upcoming Presidential campaigns will mark the 40th anniversary of the race between Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, the Republican, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, running for his second term in the White House. Managing FDR's strategy that year, 1936, was Postmaster General Jim Farley.

Landon and his wife still live in Topeka, Kan., the state capital. Their home is a stately white mansion with eight massive columns in front, set back from a country road. Most every morning, he is out early in a turtleneck shirt, riding pants and black knee-high boots. A short, slight figure of a man, he covers several miles on horseback. He rides past cornfields and alongside a river, stopping to chat with farmers along the way.

To them he is a familiar figure, smiling from behind black-rimmed spectacles and puffing on his ever-present pipe. In style and outlook, Alf Landon is "just folks" the way he always was, preferring to dress casually and eat lunch at a place called Tommy's, where both the food and the people are down-to-earth like himself.

Keeping at it

At home and at a small office in downtown Topeka, Landon plunges into a day filled with telephoning, answering mail and studying. He talks with workingmen, scholars and public figures, gaining their views on current problems. And he's always working on some new speech that might take up pressing issues of our age.

If Alf Landon is the country squire, then Jim Farley is the urban gentleman, living in the heart of Manhattan in New York City. In his 12th-floor suite at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, he wakes religiously at 6 a.m. to catch the latest radio news. By 7 he is showering and then watching TV while he dresses in his business suit.

At 8 a.m. the tall, affable Irishman is downstairs in the hotel for breakfast, at his usual table. And after a quick shave in the barbershop, he is off on his walk to a nearby building on Madison Avenue. Up on the 18th floor, he puts in a full day behind his desk at the Coca-Cola Export Corp., where he is honorary chairman of the board.

Farley's office, like Landon's, is filled with photographs of Presidents and other public leaders whom he has known intimately through the years. The former Democratic national chairman is still in frequent contact with a dazzling array of prominent friends who seek his opinions and predictions. At the moment, too, he is completing a book of recollections.

"It will cover all my political activities," he says, "from the beginning in Stony Point, N.Y., when I was elected town clerk in 1911." By any standard, it was an incredible journey through the labyrinth of American politics.

But the high point was probably that 1936 election. The Republicans that year had great hopes for Alf Landon. As leader of the liberal GOP faction in Kansas, he had won election twice as Governor despite national Democratic sweeps. At the convention, delegates answered Roosevelt's "New Deal" with a "sound, sensible, friendly" candidate, a "Kansas Coolidge" who was both thrifty and progressive in outlook.

"Frugal Alf" toured the country from the back of a campaign train. The papers played up his Methodist background, his Midwest twang, his love for home, family and squash pie. They printed stories about his folksy ways, such as betting nickels on baseball games and wearing his clothes until they wore out.

Balanced budgets

A tireless and active speaker, Landon explained how he'd balanced his state budgets by declaring, "Don't spend what you haven't got!" An influential poll even had him winning.

Meanwhile, Jim Farley was managing President Roosevelt's reelection campaign with typical optimism and flair. When the poll showed Landon ahead, Farley pointed solemnly to the fact that it had been taken by telephone. "So it has to be wrong," he said with a grin, "because the Democrats who are going to vote for Roosevelt by the millions don't even have any phones."

Then, five days before the election, Farley outdid his own reputation as a prophet. He forecast not just a Democratic landslide, but that Landon would carry only two states, Maine and Vermont. When the votes were counted, the prediction proved right. "As Maine goes," the old saying went, "so goes the nation." With impish glee, Farley turned the phrase around and quipped "As Maine goes, so goes Vermont."

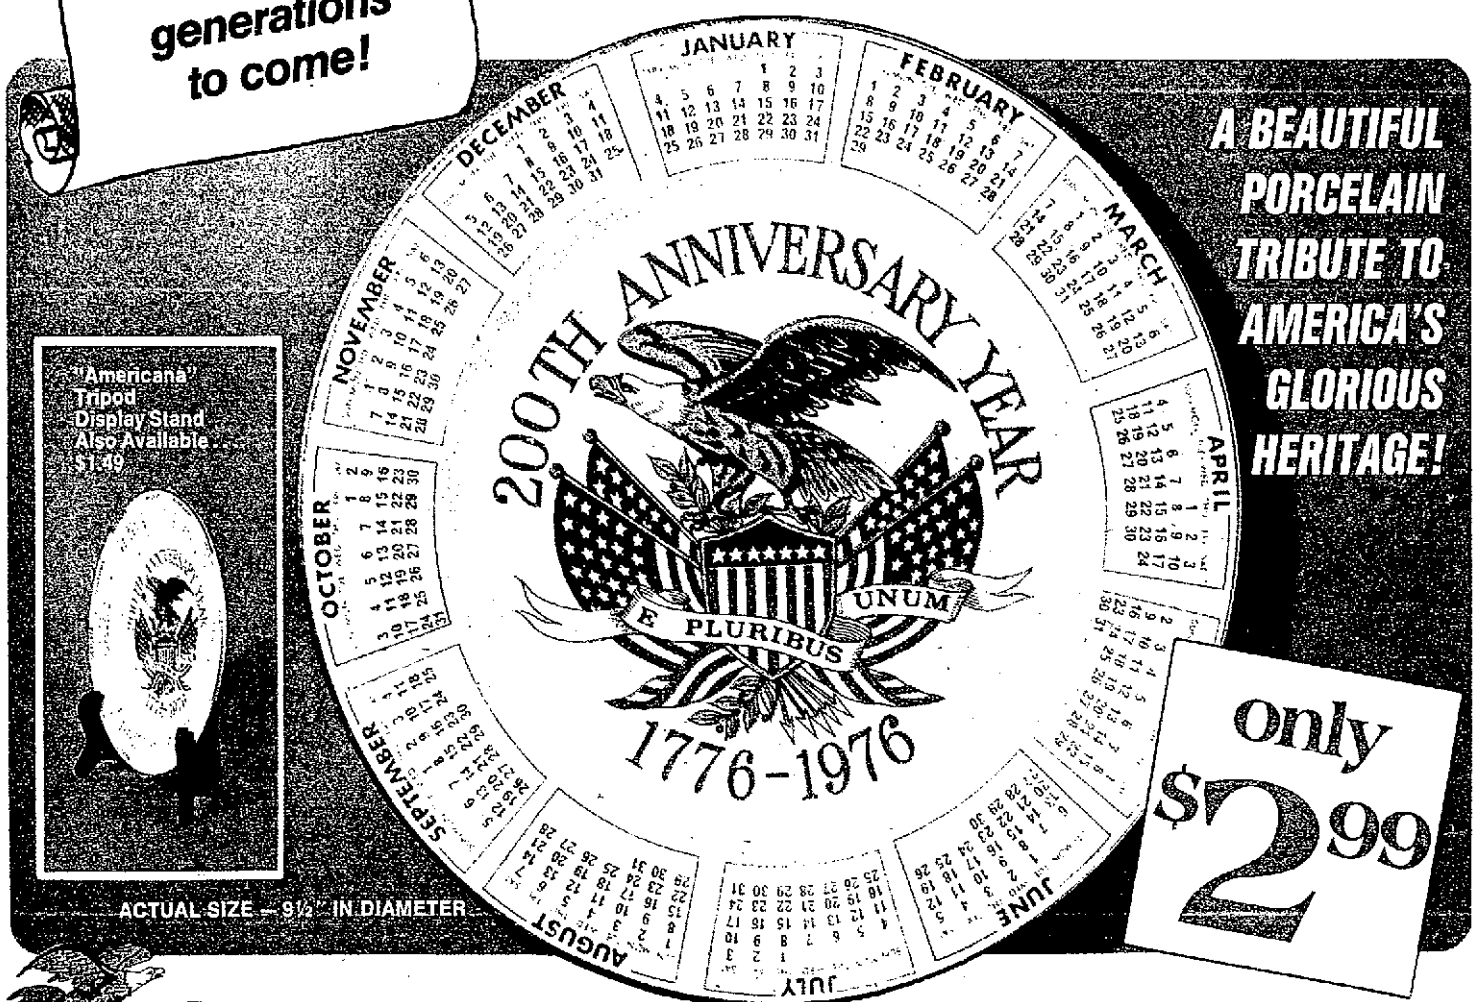

Landon and Farley provide a study in similarities and contrasts. Both had the "feel" for politics, a common touch, enabling them to get along with people in all walks of life. At the same time, Farley was the practical politician, the eternal Democrat and loyal party man, while Landon was uncomfortable with any restrictions on his independence.

"I always loved politics," Landon says, "but I never liked being tied down to party positions that I didn't agree with. The words 'liberal' and 'conservative' don't mean much to me. I take different stands on different issues."

When he left the Governor's office shortly after his Presidential campaign, Landon remained in Topeka but retired to private life, attending to his business as an independent oil producer. But since then he has continued to speak out, especially on foreign policy, and over the years his views have been singularly his own.

As early as 1955, Landon urged détente with Russia and China "so long as we're not foolish about it." He has been critical of the United Nations for having been "oversold at the start" and for raising false expectations. In the 1960's, he supported inquiries into the commitments that the United States was making on behalf of Vietnam and the rest of Asia.

Opposed Ike

He has also proved an independent when it comes to supporting Republican candidates. "My record for party regularity hasn't been too good," he observes.

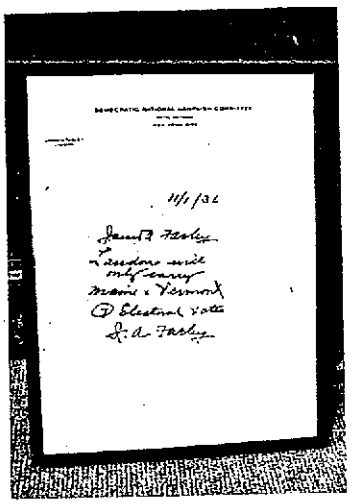

In 1952, for example, he was against Eisenhower's nomination because "I didn't think his military background fitted the demands of a President." A strict moralist, Landon was also wary of Nixon's alleged use of campaign funds for personal expenses. After listening to Nixon's "Checkers" defense speech that year, Landon turned to his wife and said, "Well, it's corny, but maybe he got away with it."

"I wasn't for Nixon in '60 or '68, either," Landon recalls. "I didn't support Goldwater's nomination, for that matter. I felt better about Nixon when he moved toward détente, but then came Watergate. That was a shocking and terrible disaster, not because of Mr. Nixon personally at all, but because we're at such a crucial stage of world affairs in this nuclear age. For the President to resign, it's bound to raise the question of just how stable our government is, from the viewpoint of other nations."

Wary of Nikita

At the moment, Landon's attention is focused on the shaky settlement in the Middle East and our delicate relations with the Soviet Union. Written promises, he says, are not enough.

"When Premier Khrushchev came to the United States," he explains, "I said I was willing to sleep in the same bedroom with him, but not leave my wallet in my pants hanging over the back of a chair."

Farley's note calls the shot in 1936: "As Maine goes, so goes Vermont," he chortled over stunning Landon defeat.

What is needed, Landon says, is a peace agreement based on "good trade relations." "The Soviet Union needs and must have imports of food and grain from us, and we need their influence for stability in the Middle East."

. . . A wheat-for-oil trade with Russia could, Landon believes, not only boost our economy but help in other areas such as limitation of arms. "It could provide a real basis for the strongest kind of agreements," he goes on.

In New York, meanwhile, Jim Farley is certain that what this country needs is a good Democrat in the White House. He considers Lyndon Johnson our last great President, joining the ranks of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Wilson, FDR and Truman.

"A President needs good advisers," he says. "The trouble is that few people like to take an opposite point of view. I remember Cabinet meetings with Roosevelt, where very rarely would members disagree with him. I guess they were afraid of losing his favor. I always spoke up. I wasn't always right, but I'd tell the truth as I saw it."

In 1940, Farley spoke up a bit too loudly. He opposed Roosevelt's running for a third term and, at the Democratic convention that summer, he even permitted his own name to be put up as a Presidential candidate. (His wife Elizabeth, who died in 1955, never forgave FDR for having "misled" her husband into thinking he would not run for another term in the White House.) After Roosevelt's renomination, Farley resigned both as party leader and as Postmaster General, positions he had held concurrently for nearly eight years.

There has never been a national chairman like him, in either party. Farley's influence over patronage was monumental, with literally thousands of government jobs flowing out of his office. "I've always believed in the two-party system," he explains. "And to the victor belongs the spoils. After all, members of a President's own party are inclined to be more loyal and helpful to him." No one, however, accused Jim Farley of possessing anything less than total honesty and integrity.

Find the jobs

Such a reputation has stood him well over the years. He has traveled all over the world, as a kind of American ambassador, and serious Democratic candidates still come to him for advice.

"I tell them we can win on the issue of unemployment," he says. "There are at least eight million out of work, undoubtedly more. It's the paramount problem. We have to get building construction moving again. If that industry is busy, you have the others, too, like carpenters and road builders and electricians and so forth. The automobile business, too, has to improve."

What about the political system itself? Has the state of the art declined? Is government corrupt? Both Farley and Landon look on the bright side.

Farley: "Politics starts down in the election districts, at the grassroots. Even if you take the money out of it, you won't stop people from going to the polls. And the independent vote can always sway elections."

Landon: "There can still be a grassroots movement, and that's the dominant saving grace in America. I always appreciated the men and women who got out and worked in their precincts more than I cared for the fat cats who gave the money."

Few are corrupt

Farley: "Corruption exists as a small percentage. Out of the thousands of men and women I recommended for public office, all politically, none ever betrayed my trust."

Landon: "On the one hand, you have the love of power and control. It's a factor that has to be recognized. But there's also a genuine spirit of public service, a sense of responsibility, at every level. You don't have to be a candidate or hold public office in order to serve. And that spirit is what makes our unique American system work."

Alf Landon says he will not attend the Republican Convention next summer, even though it will be held in nearby Kansas City. "It gets awful hectic," he says, "and I try to take good care of myself." He did, however, send a note to President Ford, saying that in 1977 he would like to celebrate "your first full term in office and my 90th birthday."

Jim Farley does hope to attend the Democratic Convention in New York City as a delegate-at-large. "I've been at every one since 1924 up until the last, in 1972," he says. "The McGovern crowd kept me out and, besides, I had a heart attack that year. I'm glad this one will be here in Manhattan and not Los Angeles, but I would've gone out there anyhow."

A word for 'Scoop'

Does Farley know which Democrat will be nominated to run for President? "Certainly not, but I hope it won't be Ted Kennedy. He says he won't run, and he shouldn't. And I've told 'Scoop' Jackson that he just isn't lighting a fire."

In Topeka, Kan., Alf Landon sits down and writes a letter to a friend in the news media, saying that he still believes "that the basic weakness of our foreign policies since our infancy as a republic is trying to reform the world en masse in our own image." In New York City, Jim Farley tells fellow Democrats that they had better avoid the bitterness of recent years and get behind a candidate who can win, "because the Democratic party has always shown the ability to handle the problems of this country well." At 88 and 87, their moments in the limelight have come and gone; but they remain two splendid examples of elder statesmen in our midst.

On his 88th birthday the Governor pays a visit to Topeka's Landon Junior High where students turn out with the Kansas sunflower, his campaign symbol.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

YUL BRYNNER AND YOUTHFUL REPORTERS

The Anchorkids

You've heard of eyewitness news and action news. Now there's "kid news." In an unusual educational project in the San Francisco Bay area, sixth-graders are putting together news broadcasts which are aired weekly over three cable and commercial TV stations: KEMO-TV, General Electric Cablevision and Moraga Cablevision.

Four anchorkids appear on each of the programs, which run from 20 to 30 minutes. Using a format similar to adult news broadcasts, the anchorkids present international, national and state news along with entertainment, sports and school events. Other children appear on the show holding props, such as photos of President Ford or trophies won in athletic meets.

The TV project, known as Newsroom 6, kicked off its season this fall with a celebrity interview with Yul Brynner. Eleven- and 12-year-old reporters fired questions at the actor about his bald head. Brynner, who once sported long brown locks, told the kids he first shaved his head for the leading role in "The King and I" at the suggestion of his costume designer. He revealed that poodle clippers were used to crop his hair.

Newsroom 6 is the brainchild of Elizabeth Frandsen, a former advertising account executive and mother of two boys from Walnut Creek, Cal., who produces the shows for four school districts. Once a week, students go to a cable TV station where in two hours they rehearse and tape the final program. Each sixth-grade class takes a turn preparing a show, and Mrs. Frandsen estimates that by the end of the school year more than 2400 children will have appeared on TV.

Who's footing the bill for Newsroom 6? Mrs. Frandsen drummed up financial support from several local sponsors who are given plugs during commercial breaks. "We want kids to know how TV works," she says.

Shy Men And Dates

Two Indiana University associate psychology professors have found so many undergraduate males intimidated by females that they've offered two free courses to help them: "Getting Along Better With Members of the Opposite Sex," and "Increasing Self-Confidence and Assertion."

Associate professors John Gottman and Robert Levenson have enrolled approximately 75 students in each course.

"It's not a fear of the other person, but a fear of your own inadequacy," explains Gottman to his students, "that contributes to your shyness."

Gottman believes that a male's desire "to score sexual points" on a date harms a relationship with women. "Guys who have problems with women usually have their eyes on the prize."

The communications gap between men and women is stressed heavily in the courses. Gottman points out that at youth parties the music is loud, the lights are dim, drugs are widely used, all of which serve to impede communications between the sexes.

Another Casualty

Add another casualty to the famous father syndrome. Caspar Fleming, 22-year-old son of the late Ian Fleming, creator of James Bond, took his life last month with a massive dose of barbiturates in his mother's flat in London.

Caspar Fleming inherited $800,000 when his father died in 1964. Later he worked as salesman of antiques.

"I think he felt very strongly that he had not got a proper place in life," says Dr. William Knapman, who treated Caspar. "He always had great difficulty sleeping and began taking barbiturates when he was 16. Over the years the dosage increased along with trips to the hospital to cure depression."

Bob Dylan's New Band

Bob Dylan recently completed a new album which won't be released until early next year. His new group features on bass the talented Rob Stoner, who used to accompany Don McLean of "American Pie" fame, Howard Wyeth on drums, and Donna Shea on fiddle.

Some of Dylan's new songs are "Hurricane," an old-style Dylan number that protests the sentencing for murder of boxer Rubin "Hurricane" Carter, and "Oh Sister," which deals with romantic troubles.

The sound of Dylan's new band recalls his "John Wesley Harding" period.

Dylan recently began a 20-city tour of small nightclubs. Like many artists he has an aversion to performing in large indoor halls before large crowds.

Important Help

For the 1975-76 school year it will cost students or their parents an average of $2600 to attend a four-year public college, from $4000 to $6000 to attend a private college.

To help people who are floored by those figures, the Office of Education has developed a program called the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants.

Under that program an eligible student may receive from $200 to $1400 a year to help pay for educational expenses. These include tuition for college, vocational programs, business schools, nursing schools and various other forms of post-high school training.

Eligibility is based on financial need which is determined by a formula reviewed each year by Congress.

The application deadline is March 15, 1976, for the 1975-76 academic year. To learn how to qualify for a grant, students should contact their high school guidance counselors or they should write to Basic Grants, P.O. Box 84, Washington, D.C. 20044.

A gentle revolutionary changing many Americans' views of childbirth, Dr. Frederick Leboyer says he has delivered over 1000 "smiling" babies—including the one pictured here—using the new method outlined in his book "Birth Without Violence."

Born With a Smile Instead of a Slap

The Struggle for Acceptance of a New Birth Technique

by Jonathan Braun

They are known as "Leboyer babies," and perhaps as many as 400 of them have been born in this country in the past six months—400 children who have spent their first moments on earth smiling, instead of being slapped into a scream.

And because of it, they may grow up to be different from the rest of us.

That, at least, is the claim of Dr. Frederick Leboyer, a 57-year-old French obstetrician and author of the international best seller, Birth Without Violence. It is his dramatic—and controversial—new method of child delivery which has captured the imagination of many Americans.

"The Leboyer method is really terrific," says Mrs. Carol Case of Carson City, Nev., one of a growing number of women who have had Leboyer-style deliveries. "It's very natural and peaceful—a very rewarding thing to go through. And it's especially nice for the baby."

"Leboyer," says Dr. DeWitt Baldwin in nearby Reno, "believes that birth should be as gentle a process as possible. I happen to support that."

Essentially, Leboyer's method is designed to ease the baby's transition into the new world.

"Yes, hell exists . . ." he states in characteristic poetic style in Birth Without Violence. "This hell is not at the end of life. It is here. At the beginning."

After delivering more than 9000 babies in the conventional manner, Leboyer says he found himself less and less able to accept either as normal or inevitable the cries and screams and generally pained and even tormented expressions of the newborn infant. Why, he began asking himself, must the new human being, emerging from the darkness and silence of the womb, be brought out in a blaze of blinding lights and loud voices?

Other questions followed: Why must we insist on making the infant's first breath traumatic when nature has supplied the means for a far gentler initiation into life? Why, when the spine is curved in the fetal position, do we hold the newcomer upside down and jerk its back straight? Why is the baby—"after the terrifying ordeal of being separated from the womb"—then immediately separated from the mother? In short, why do we treat the infant not as a human being—but as an object?

We do it, Leboyer says, not out of a sense of cruelty, but because we never really thought about the infant, never recognized that the infant is a person.

"It took me years to see this simple truth," the veteran obstetrician told PARADE during a recent visit to the United States. "The newborn is a sensitive, feeling human being, and in the first few moments after birth, he should be treated that way. We must introduce a baby to the world gradually."

The method

So, about four years ago, Leboyer developed his method—involving the following basic steps:

- The ordinarily intense, bright lighting of the delivery room is considerably dimmed—and no one speaks above a whisper.
- The infant, as soon as it is out, is placed stomach down on its mother's warm abdomen to retain the pre-birth curved position of the spine.
- Waiting up to six minutes before the umbilical cord is cut, doctor and mother gently massage the baby.
- After the cord is cut, the baby is bathed in water similar in temperature

'These babies are so different...'

to its familiar environment inside the mother.

"A lot of tender loving care—and some plain old common sense—that's what Leboyer is all about," says Dr. David Kliot of the Brookdale Hospital Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y.

But not everyone agrees. Reaction from the U.S. medical community to Leboyer—and, in turn, to his "disciples"—has ranged all the way from mild interest to amusement to, in some cases, open hostility. At best, say some critics, Leboyer's techniques are unnecessary; at worst, they are downright dangerous.

Many doctors, for instance, object to the darkened delivery room, arguing that a well-lit environment is essential to check the color of the baby and to make sure that he's not sluggish. They contend too, that babies are held upside down to make sure fluids aren't clogging their breathing tracts. As one physician put it: "Perhaps none of these things are very nice to look at—or even maybe to experience—but safety and precaution must take precedence over both appearance and psychology."

'They ridicule me'

Leboyer's response is pointed. "They ridicule me," he says of his skeptical colleagues, "by misrepresenting my method and pushing it to extremes. But there should be no misunderstanding about what I'm saying. Whenever there is reason to believe that breathing is not all right, or there is difficulty in oxygenation, I say, 'Go ahead! Turn up the lights and do whatever you want—use suction, give oxygen.' I am not denying the progress of obstetrics. I am only saying that birth is a physical and an emotional affair—and you cannot deny this second aspect.

"You know, I get more questions about the business of the slap than anything else. Somehow, people have a feeling that you must initiate breathing in the child. It is because they are so conditioned by their cars, which they turn on with a key. But the baby is not a machine. The moment the head of the child is out the breathing is there. You can see it yourself in a film I've made. So there is no necessity to do anything —at least not with the vast majority of normal, healthy babies. But modern man feels he must help nature—that nature is waiting for him to help it. It is sheer arrogance."

Born to cry

"In modern obstetrics," Dr. Kliot explains, "we've come to feel that a baby born crying is a healthy baby—and, so, we tend to feel that we must stimulate him to cry."

Before retiring nearly two years ago, Leboyer had delivered over 1000 babies with his new method. He still performs a delivery now and then; but, he points out, the important fact to note is that other physicians are picking up where he left off. In New York, Nevada, Illinois, California, Florida and other states, Leboyer-style deliveries have taken place—perhaps as many as 400 in all—a small, but nevertheless, significant number, given the resistance and opposition of many conservative hospital administrators.

Because of this opposition, most of the physicians performing Leboyer-style deliveries have, until now, been reluctant to discuss them openly.

"There's another factor, too," says Dr. Kliot, who has performed over 50 Leboyer-style deliveries. "You must understand that the wrong kind of publicity — sensationalist publicity — could set this concept back 10 years—or even kill it altogether."

Adds his partner in the deliveries, Dr. Max Lilling, who directs a special high-risk newborn unit at Brookdale Hospital: "We were brought a technique by our patients. What Dr. Leboyer had to say appealed to them, and they wanted very much to give it a try. And though we were somewhat skeptical at first, we went along with their desire; and I have to say I've been impressed with what I've seen so far."

"It was fantastic," says Joyce Merendino of Brooklyn. "When Dr. Kliot put my baby on my stomach I stroked her back and she picked up her head and looked around. She's a very alert baby."

"Before," says another mother, whose first child was delivered in the traditional manner, "it seemed I heard my little girl crying all night. This time, my little boy was quiet as can be."

"I've been absolutely amazed by the results," says Dr. Henry Davis, a family practitioner who delivers babies at the Carson Tahoe Hospital in Carson City. "I've delivered at least 35 babies with the Leboyer method in the last five months—and I just can't say enough about it. These babies are so different from the others, so graceful in their movements. They seem to be reaching out instead of protecting themselves.

"My wife and I recently had our 10th child with the Leboyer method—a colleague of mine did the delivery. All I can say is that our son Michael seems to believe that everybody in the world loves him. He's so calm . . . he didn't even cry when he had to have an injection—only four hours after birth! I'm convinced that the Leboyer method results in a better child."

Whether or not that's true is, of course, the critical question. Leboyer believes that the way an infant is treated during roughly the first 10 minutes after birth sets the pattern for the rest of his life.

"As adults," he said in slightly accented but flawless English, "we are constantly re-experiencing what we have experienced as a baby. The infant whose birth is violent, frustrating and difficult will not have an easy life."

The scientific approach

However, his message is not so easily accepted by the scientific community. Says Dr. Lilling: "There is nothing we can really comment on in an accurate, scientific manner; and until we can—until there is some solid research to back up what we think we know and understand the medical establishment will probably not be persuaded."

But what of the 1000-or-so children Leboyer has delivered in his native France—who now range in age from 8 months to 4 years—might not they provide us with the answer? One hundred and four of the children are being studied at the Sorbonne in Paris; and while the child psychologists in charge of the study are unwilling to share their findings with the public before publication of an official report sometime within the next two years, this much has already leaked out: Leboyer children are noticeably different—in their overall attitude and behavior, and, more specifically, their unusually avid interest in the world around them.

Growing interest

Meanwhile, the interest in Leboyer—despite official caution and even opposition—continues to grow: "We've been inundated with phone calls ever since Birth Without Violence first appeared," says publicist Maria Temechko of Alfred A. Knopf Inc., Leboyer's publisher. "Most of the calls have been from pregnant women—some quite frantic—demanding that we put them in touch with an obstetrician who will agree to a Leboyer delivery."

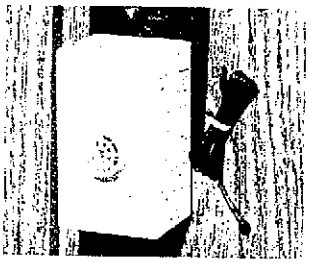

"I've had calls from around the country," says Dr. Davis, "from women willing to fly out here to Nevada so they could have a Leboyer delivery. But I couldn't permit that kind of thing because it would be ethically questionable and obviously hazardous from a medical point of view . . . It's a shame more doctors aren't doing Leboyer deliveries, though, because I know that if they ever tried it—just once—they'd never go back to the old way."

"Our son believes everybody loves him," says Dr. Henry Davis, a Carson City, Nev., family practitioner, of his 10th child, Michael—a Leboyer baby. Dr. Davis has performed about 35 Leboyer deliveries since the spring.

Crockery Cooking

There's a new kind of cooking catching on around the land—or rather, it's an old kind of cooking made new again. Called "Crockery Cooking" or "Slow Pot Cooking," it goes from soup to dessert, adding variety and nourishment to your family menu—and saving you lots of money at the same time.

This method of preparing food is described in succulent detail by Jacqueline Hériteau in a book called Clear and Simple Crockery Cooking, which is being made available to PARADE readers at the bargain price of $1.50 plus 25 cents postage and handling. You'll find in it not only an easy-to-follow description of crockery cooking, but page after page of simple-to-prepare recipes for every course of a meal.

Slow-pot cooking enables you to widen your culinary style tremendously. Because it works without constant supervision or attention, it can cut in half the amount of time you spend in the kitchen.

A modern electric crockery cooker is the closest thing in existence to the old-fashioned Dutch oven—that time-honored device that has never been beaten for sheer excellence of the dishes it produces. Crockery cooking can give you perfect pot roasts, great casseroles, rich and nourishing stews, fine breakfast cereal dishes, a tempting array of desserts, and even some unusual homemade breads.

It can also cut down substantially on the costs of feeding a family, because it makes use of low heat and because it works so well with thrift cuts of meat and even leftovers. The secret is the slow and thorough cooking that goes on even when you're not around. It's the way your grandmother used to cook —but with all the ease and economy of modern methods.

Clear and Simple Crockery Cooking can change your whole approach to the culinary art. At its bargain price, it's an investment that will pay off many times in less work for you and better living for your family.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "Clear and Simple Crockery Cooking" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. GG, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery.

The Rose Bowl Court: Many beauty contests have included scholarships, some donated by universities, among their prizes. Now, federal anti-discrimination rules bar colleges from giving tuition aid to participants in competitions limited to one sex. However, two Republican Congressmen from Alabama have introduced an amendment that would again allow colleges to give such scholarships.

Are Collegiate Beauty Contests Doomed?

by Charles Peterson

Coeds at North Texas State U. where beauty contest winners, including two recent Misses America, abound. With colleges no longer offering scholarships based on such contests, lack of money may shut many young women off from going to college.

Approximately $10 million in scholarships are awarded to beauty contest winners every year. Many of these beauty contests are university-sponsored or related.

According to Title 9 of the Educational Amendments Act of 1972, the specifics of which became law only last summer, any federally funded university, college, or junior college which gives scholarships at functions which limit participation to one sex is in violation of the law. Such is the case with many beauty contests.

Two Republican Congressmen from Alabama, John Buchanan and Jack Edwards, are up in arms over Title 9. They've introduced amendment HR9308, which would permit any college to give scholarships to beauty contest winners.

At present, women who enter university-sponsored beauty contests in which only females participate are legally prevented from cashing in on their scholarships.

What kind of women will enter collegiate-sponsored beauty contests if scholarships or tuition credit is not available?

"If scholarships aren't offered, only those women who want to break into dance or movies will enter these university beauty contests," predicts Jean Stein, America's 1962 Junior Miss winner. "I think these contests will become talent shows. You know, kind of like Ted Mack's Amateur Hour."

To date the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has not prevented any collegiate beauty queen from using her scholarship funds.

However, Title 9 has prevented universities from giving scholarships to participants in beauty contests like the Miss America Pageant. For instance, Janice Walker of the Birmingham News, who runs the Miss Alabama contest, says that about 80 per cent of the $150,000 worth of scholarships that were once available to contestants in that state has now dried up.

Abides by the law

The University of Alabama ended its scholarship support as soon as the law was passed, says university official Cathy Randall, adding that even the winner of the Miss University of Alabama title receives no tuition help.

Similarly, universities may not now offer scholarships to twirlers and majorettes.

And the government appears to be sticking by its guns. "If any federally assisted university sponsors or is associated with the promotion of a beauty contest and we believe there was discrimination against any participant, we'll take action," explains Dale Pullen of HEW's Civil Rights Division. "The question is to what extent the university in question was involved in a beauty contest."

When was the last time you attended a beauty contest for both sexes on your local college campus?

by MAX MORATH

EDITOR'S NOTE: Max Morath has been called "the man who almost single-handedly kept ragtime alive during the dark years," and his new one-man show, The Ragtime Years, has been a hit across the country. Aside from the piano music, Morath's show consists of turn-of-the-century vaudeville humor.

Comparing the ragtime era and ours, Morath says, "People in those days needed a mate for the same reason we do today. We know that sooner or later something will happen we can't blame on the government."

Morath's newest Vanguard album, "Ragtime," has just been released. His current LP's are: "The Best of Scott Joplin," "The World of Scott Joplin," and "Irving Berlin-The Ragtime Years."

From Dec. 18 to Jan. 18 Morath will bring his ragtime and humor to the New Sombrero Playhouse in Phoenix, Ariz.

Here are samples of that humor:

How about the gent who went into a restaurant, ordered extract of beef, and was served a glass of milk.

Did you hear about the hen that ate a box of tacks and the next morning laid a carpet?

Moe: Yes.

Joe: Well, he's out of danger.

Moe: That's good.

Joe: He died this morning.

Fortune-teller: No, boarding house.

First Man: How would you classify a telephone girl? Is that a profession or a business?

Second Man: Neither. It's a calling.

I recently went for a visit to New York City. After I got on the train, the conductor came along and said, "You'll have to take that grip off that seat." I said, "I will not," and he said, "If you don't take that grip off that seat, I'll throw it out the window." I wasn't afraid much. And by gosh if he didn't throw the grip out the window. Then he said to me, "I told you I'd do it." And I said to him, "That's all right. It didn't belong to me."

During the ragtime years most people still got around in the horse and buggy—the automobile was considered a plaything of the rich. History plays funny tricks. Today everybody's got an automobile, and when you get rich you move out in the country and buy a horse.

Schlesinger raps Ford

Hints he was sacked for budget objection

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — James R. Schlesinger said he considered President Ford's planned defense budget inadequate and indicated Ford fired him as secretary of defense after he objected.

In his first interview since being fired three weeks ago, Schlesinger said the defense budget being prepared for next fiscal year "was an important issue" in events leading to his ouster.

At the same time, Schlesinger jabbed at Ford's pledge to maintain a defense second to none.

"The military establishment cannot live on rhetoric and sentiment," Schlesinger said in the interview Friday.

"And the real question that we will face is not whether we will have tributes to the concept of America's strength but whether we are going to avoid cutting military strength and defense purchasing power further by additional budget cuts."

Schlesinger said Ford asked him to prepare a fiscal 1977 budget about $10 billion less than Ford originally projected for next year.

Although Ford's new proposal of $107 billion would represent a small dollar increase over the administration request for this year, Schlesinger contended it would turn out to be a net shrinkage of 5 or 6 per cent in actual defense buying power because of inflation.

Schlesinger denied reports that he had reached the point of deciding to quit in protest. But, he added, "there was a question in my mind whether I would be prepared to carry a defense budget to the Hill which I regarded as inadequate."

Apart from strong indications that he and Ford differed on next year's budget, Schlesinger declined to discuss what motivated Ford to fire him.

"As far as I'm concerned, that's all water over the dam," he said. But he sidestepped taking a position on whether he would support Ford for election next year, saying "it's premature for me to get into any political issues."

Schlesinger also said "I would not care to speculate" on reports that he was a victim of intrigue by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger or a power play by Donald Rumsfeld, whom Ford named to replace Schlesinger.

However, Schlesinger acknowledged major differences between

Reagan plans tax alterations

Also eyes change in aid programs

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan plans extensive changes in the nation's taxing system if he is elected president.

Reagan in an interview in Los Angeles also fleshed out his plans to shift responsibility for most of the nation's social programs from the federal government to the states.

However, Reagan was careful to list his ideas as "tentative" and if he puts them into effect it will be done gradually so as to ease the shock.

IN ADDITION Reagan plans to meet with experts in the field of economics and social problems to get their advice on how to implement his ideas.

But the former governor is determined to change the taxing system both to make it more equitable and to spur the development of industry and jobs.

First, Reagan believes that everyone should be able to make a flat minimum without paying any income tax. As an example, a tax-free salary of $10,000 was mentioned.

Then, Reagan thinks that there should be no deductions for the taxes on money made above the ceiling.

In other words a flat percentage tax would be charged and the taxpayer could easily compute that charge. The percentage would be lower than current percentages with deductions.

"It would be like the Lord's way — tithing," he said.

"Finally, Reagan favors a limit on the percentage of tax that could be charged, no matter how high the income.

"This may prove impractical," he said indicating an open mind on the subject.

But he did make it clear that he wants major changes in the tax structure.

HE ALSO attacked business taxes coupled with taxes on those living off stock dividends and being taxed "twice."

Reagan also disliked capital gains taxes, noting that in the early 1940s the AFL called for their abolishment in order to "provide capital for new industries and new jobs."

Reagan feels that if such major social programs as welfare, health, education, and urban affairs are shifted to state and local governments, then the federal tax needs will be reduced. As a result state and local governments can then raise taxes, including income taxes, in order to fund their new responsibilities.

During the next month Reagan will be refining his ideas and proposals with the help of experts in the field.

The experts, however, will be telling Reagan how he can carry out his goals, not setting those goals, the former governor said.

Freedom vowed by Carlos I

By JAMES YUENGER
Knight News Service

MADRID—Prince Juan Carlos was sworn in as king of Spain Saturday and immediately pledged to be a "moderator" leading the way toward long-awaited freedoms in his divided and troubles country.

The 37-year-old monarch, trained since boyhood to assume the crown and promised it by Generalissimo Francisco Franco six years ago, was sworn in shortly after noon before a joint session of the Cortes (parliament). Speaking in a firm baritone voice, Juan Carlos—who had been acting chief of state since Oct. 30—then delivered an initial address that contained repeated calls for national unity and for change.

Saturday's was the first enthronement of a king in Spain since 1902, when Juan Carlos' gradfather, Alfonso XIII, became king. He abdicated in 1931 in favor of the Second Republic, which in turn was destroyed by Franco in the civil

1 dead, others feared lost

GAETA, Italy (AP) — The U.S. aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy and the cruiser Belknap collided and caught fire Saturday night in the Mediterranean 70 miles east of Sicily.

Navy officials said one man aboard the carrier was known dead and indicated there were other casualties. There are 4,500 crewmen aboard the Kennedy and 350 aboard the Belknap, a missile-carrying ship designed for antisubmarine and antiaircraft warfare.

The two U.S. 6th Fleet warships collided during night flight operations and both caught fire, according to the Pentagon in Washington and a London-based spokesman for the U.S. naval forces in Europe.

THE FIRE on the flight deck of the Kennedy was put out in about 10 minutes but it took about 2½ hours to bring the flames on the Belknap under control.

All fires were completely extinguished, a Pentagon spokesman said just before 7:35 p.m. PST.

"The full extent of casualties is unknown," the Pentagon said. "One man from the John F. Kennedy is known dead. Fires which occurred aboard the Belknap make additional casualties likely."

"Some men were rescued from the water, and the John F. Kennedy and five accompanying U.S. destroyers assisted in search and rescue assistance," said Lt. Cmdr. John Hoshko, a Navy spokesman in London.

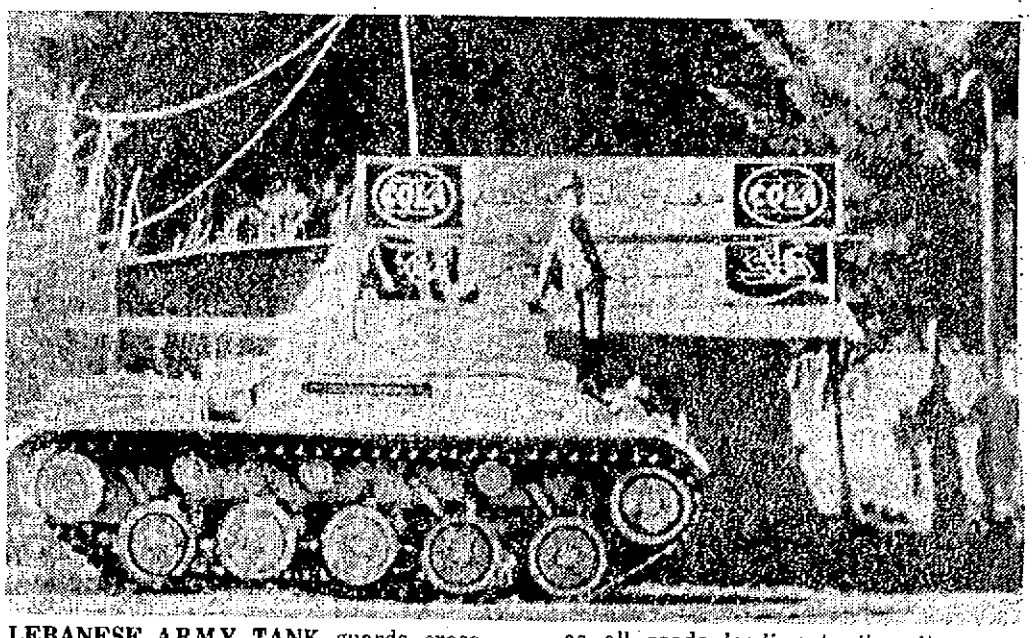

Navy officials said casualties were first taken to the Kennedy and then to the U.S. naval hospital at Sigonella, Sicily. Gaeta is the headquarters for the 6th Fleet.

The U.S. naval hospital at Naples can also help, if needed, the Pentagon said.

The Pentagon said the giant, conventionally powered aircraft carrier "is capable of conducting flight operations."

JFK probe reopening requested

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A senior member of the Warren Commission staff called Saturday for Congress to reopen the inquiry into President John F. Kennedy's death in the face of new questions posed by the findings on United States' involvement in foreign assassination plots.

David W. Belin, who served on both the Warren Commission and the Central Intelligence Agency hearings, said he was confident that a new inquiry would not disturb the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald had killed Kennedy and J.D. Tippit, a Dallas police officer.

"The primary reason for this request is that I believe it would greatly contribute toward a rebirth of confidence and trust in government," he said in a prepared statement. Belin issued his announcement on the 12th

Fighting rages in Beirut; 36 dead

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fierce street fighting between Moslem and Christian gunmen raked Beirut on Saturday, leaving at least 36 persons dead, 76 wounded and 150 kidnaped.

The government, after a series of desperate negotiations with rival militia leaders, announced a new cease-fire — the 13th since civil warfare erupted last April. Gunfire and rocket explosions continued to rattle through the deserted streets after the cease-fire was announced.

Premier Rashid Karami warned that his bitterly divided country "is on the brink of total collapse." Karami, a Moslem, told the cease-fire committee that Lebanon faced famine, bankruptcy and massive unemployment.

"If Islam allows murder, then I don't want to be a Moslem," he said. "If Christianity allows killing, then I am against Christianity. We have reached zero level and even slipped below it in every aspect of life."

The renewed fighting that erupted three days ago blistered two-thirds of Beirut.

Gunmen placed an explosive charge in the American University's experimental farm at Mount Lebnon, causing heavy damage and fires, police reported.

"Fighting is getting more vicious and citizens have been advised to move to shelters to avoid rocket fire," a police spokesman said. He added that fire brigades were unable to enter many districts "because gunmen are deliberately harassing them with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades."

Bands of armed civilians were reported moving through the hotel district near the U.S. Embassy compound, checking identification cards of motorists and pedestrians. Two men led away as prisoners.

In one suburb, police shot and wounded two youths who were in a gang looting deserted shops and homes.

$2,000 reward in robbery-slaying

John Miner, 57, of 1121 E. Third St., was accosted by a masked bandit as he returned to his apartment at 2:20 a.m. on Oct. 19. The man pushed Miner inside and struck him on the head with a heavy instrument.

Leaving Miner unconscious on the floor, the robber fled with an undetermined amount of money.

Miner was hospitalized with extensive head injuries, and died Nov. 13 as a result of the attack. Before his death, however, he described his attacker as a white man 20 to 25 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, of thin build, and wearing dark clothes and gloves.

Soviet newsman blasts Sakharov

Combined News Services

The Kremlin stepped up its campaign against Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov Saturday, with its top TV commentator telling viewers he had received dozens of letters condemning the Nobel laureate's Western supporters.

Addressing himself to those supporters, Yuri Zhukov asked rhetorically: "Do you realize that your hullabaloo on awarding the Nobel Prize to such a person as Sakharov, who openly comes out against detente...discredits your campaign?"

Zhukov's attack, made on his monthly television program, was the latest salvo in the Kremlin's campaign against the dissident physicist, who won the Nobel prize for his championship of human rights.

Holding up a stack of letters, Zhukov read one that said: "Sakharov constantly appeals to the imperialists to interfere in our internal affairs. Such a person is given a peace prize, and the bourgeois propaganda exalts him to the heavens as a democrat and fighter for human rights. Monstrous!"

Zhukov added: "In the West, they are trying to find so-called dissidents in the Soviet Union and extol them in their propaganda, depicting these renegades as the only carriers of our public opinion and even as victims of our system.

"They are trying to preach to us endlessly and depict us in the worst light and blacken our realities. They do not stop at the utmost slander of our country."

Boning up

President Ford got ready Saturday for next week's planned trip to China by reading two thick background volumes sent to the White House by the State Department.

Ford leaves next Saturday, stopping first in Alaska to survey the oil pipeline. He'll be in China Dec. 1 to 5 and will stop in Indonesia, the Philippines and Hawaii on the way home.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ford attended a performance Saturday night of the Moscow State Symphony at the Kennedy Center. Soviet pianist Vladimir Viardo, winner of the 1973 Van Cliburn international piano competition, was the featured performer.

Mrs. Ford joined the Soviet Ambassador and Mrs. Anatoly Dobrynin, Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry A. Kissinger, Van Cliburn and his mother, Mrs. Rildia Cliburn.

Herrema

Dutch industrialist Tiede Herrema, who endured a five-week kidnaping by Irish guerrillas, is to be feted and made an honorary Irish citizen when he returns to work in Ireland next month.

Herrema is due back Dec. 5 as head of the Dutch-owned Ferenka steel plant at Limerick after a recovery vacation in the Bahamas. He and his wife are to be the second and third foreigners so honored.

Dublin also plans a civic reception for the Herremas.

Amin offer

Ugandan President Idi Amin has offered to mediate in the Rhodesian constitutional crisis in his capacity as current chairman of the 46-nation Organization of African Unity, Uganda radio said Saturday.

The state-run radio in a broadcast monitored in Nairobi, Kenya, said Amin made the offer at a meeting in Kampala with Britain's acting high commissioner in Uganda.

Amin said he was ready to prepare the groundwork for a meeting between Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and leaders of the country's African nationalist movements, the radio said. Amin proposed that such a meeting be held in London.

Garbage

A priest who last month asked his parishioners for offerings of handguns is now asking for their garbage. Rev. Richard Engle, pastor of St. Philip the Apostle Catholic church in Columbus, Ohio, said he made the request to dramatize the concept of "Christ the garbage collector."

The garbage offerings, to be made this evening, are meant to symbolize the "garbage" people carry with them in the form of grudges or bitterness toward others.

Last month, Father Engle asked for offerings of handguns, which were melted into crosses for distribuited to legislators and political leaders to show support for gun control.

Dream realized

Comedian Danny Thomas saw another installment of his 35-year-old pledge to St. Jude fulfilled last week when a $10.5-million addition to the children's hospital he helped found was formally opened in Memphis, Tenn.

The seven-story addition to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital doubles the space available for treatment of victims of diseases that once amounted to an early death sentence.

Although thousands of individuals have contributed to the establishment and growth of St. Jude, the hospital and Thomas have become almost a single identity because of the entertainer's support of the institution.

Thomas spearheaded establishment of the hospital 14 years ago to fulfill a 1940 pledge, made at a low point in his career, that if St. Jude helped him, he would establish a children's hospital.

Christie

The first corporate executive trainee at Playboy Enterprises, Inc., a staunch feminist, has a familiar name. At 23, Christie Hefner is starting out near the top of the Playboy empire. Her official title is special assistant to the president— her father, Hugh, who suggested the job to her several months ago.

One task will be to cut costs, with an eye on preventing another nosedive in company profits. Before taxes in fiscal year 1975, Playboy profits plummeted from $10.8 million to $2 million, and the company has been having problems for the past three years.

Even though Ms. Hefner has never taken a business course, she said she has "a remarkable faculty for analyzing problems." She said she has no problem reconciling her feminist orientation with the Playboy philosophy, which some women label as chauvinistic.

Playboy "has been a positive force in opening people's minds," she said. "And Playboy came out against repressive sex laws a long time ago and supports freedom of choice in abortion."

Heroin probe

Fugitive financier Robert Vesco and his personal aide Donald Nixon Jr., nephew of the former president, are among the subjects of a federal grand jury investigation in Detroit into a heroin-smuggling operation, according to a subpoena.

The grand jury is involved in a "very delicate, quite explosive and very encompassing" probe of alleged narcotics smuggling," said Alwyn L. "Ike" Eisenhauer, 48, former personal pilot for Vesco who received the subpoena.

Vesco lives in Costa Rica where he sought refuge after being charged by the Security and Exchange Commission with milking Investors Overseas Services of $224 million. At last report, Nixon was also living in Costa Rica.

Resign

President Ford has accepted the resignation of Federal Power Commissioner William L. Springer, who said he is leaving because of health reasons.

Springer said his doctor told him several months ago to ease up on his daily workload, but he had decided to stay on until three commission three vacancies were filled. The third was filled earlier this month, and Springer asked that his resignation be effective Dec. 1.

Kissinger 'reassures' S. Korean

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Korean Foreign Minister Kim Dong-Jo met with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger Saturday and reported afterward that he had been given a reaffirmation of strong U.S. support for his country in the United Nations.

Earlier this week the U.N. General Assembly adopted two conflicting resolutions on South Korea's future. Both would dissolve the U.N. Command set up in 1950 to repel North Korea.

The U.S.-backed resolution called for negotiations among the United States, China, South Korea and North Korea to find alternate arrangements for preserving the Korean armistice. The second, backed by China, the Soviet bloc and the so-called Third World called for negotiations between the United States and North Korea.

Moynihan 'talk of the world'

New York Times Service

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The office of U.S. delegate Daniel P. Moynihan received many telephone calls and messages from individuals and groups Saturday urging him to stay in office and praising his outspoken stand on international issues.

But delegates from other nations said privately that Moynihan's credibility and usefulness as the U.S. representative had been sapped by controversy over his unconventional style of diplomacy.

Reports that Moynihan had been on the verge of resigning Friday and had been summoned to Washington by President Ford were eagerly discussed by diplomats at U.N. headquarters and around the world.

In Washington, the spokesman for the State Department, Robert Anderson, said that, after consultation with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, he was in a position to dismiss as "utterly preposterous" an allegation that U.S. and British officials colluded in public criticism of Moynihan.

A veritable whispering campaign about Moynihan's methods came into the open last Monday when Britain's delegate, Ivor Richard, in an address to the directors of the United Nations Association, condemned diplomatic posturing in the way of a Wyatt Earp (the lawman-gunfighter of Wild West lore). The target of the jibe was clearly Moynihan.

Richard, in a statement Saturday, described as "nonsense" the suggestion that he had given his speech on Monday "with prior American approval." Richard said his address was a restatement of well-known British attitudes toward the U.N. "and in no way should be construed as a personal attack" on Moynihan.

The statement added that the British ambassador wished "to maintain the closest working relationship" with his U.S. counterpart, and that, if there had been differences in approaches toward the United Nations, "these are differences of tactics, not of aims."

A West European ambassador who did not want to be identified said Saturday that Moynihan's role had been discussed in a meeting of Western delegates last week. There was nearly general criticism of the American's "cowboy fashion," the delegate reported.

"Those most critical of Mr. Moynihan are the Nine," the delegate said, by which he meant the nine-country European Economic Community.

"The Nine say his strategies aren't getting results, and at the United Nations we need results. We are convinced that things can be done, even occasionally through confrontational strategy if it is well coordinated."

The West European delegate said there had been complaints in his group, which was more than willing to collaborate with the United States, that it was not being consulted by Moynihan.

Arab and African delegates expressed their relief Saturday at the prospect that Moynihan might quit his post.

The Arab group at the United Nations generally charges him with having "automatically and uncritically" sided with Israel and with having introduced highly charged and emotional language in his fight against the resolution branding Zionism as "a form of racism and racial discrimination." The resolution was introduced by the delegates of radical Arab governments and Cuba.

African diplomats say Moynihan made an unjustified attack on the Organization of African Unity in a speech in San Francisco on Oct. 3, reproaching it for having elected President Idi Amin of Uganda as chairman of the regional group. In the San Francisco speech, Moynihan also endorsed a description of Uganda's president as a "racist murderer."

Teen-ager reads up storm in wink of eye

Knight News Service

SKOKIE, Ill. — Fourteen-year-old Beth Jaffee of Skokie has reading problems you wouldn't believe.

In school, for instance, her English teacher told the class to read a play. He turned away for a few minutes and, when he looked back, Beth was just sitting there with her hands folded while the other students were straining over the dialogue.

"Beth! Do your work!" he ordered. Poor Beth. She had already done the entire reading assignment in slightly under five minutes and was awaiting further instructions.

A superior speed reader, Beth has a cruising speed of about 5,000 words a minute, with gusts of up to 13,000 words a minute. To put that in perspective, a typical college graduate reads at the rate of 300 words a minute.

A slightly built, dark-haired girl going through the typical adolescent trauma of wearing braces on her teeth, Beth can whiz through and fully comprehend a novel like "Jaws" in about 45 minutes.

SHE IS BOTH a pride and a problem to her family. "We don't buy books for Beth anymore," said her mother, Mrs. Phyllis Jaffe. "At the rate she goes through them, we couldn't afford to. Instead, Beth and I visit the Skokie Public Library both loaded with shopping bags. We pick out a couple of shopping bags worth of books, and then lug them home. That keeps her in reading material for about a week."

A reporter decided that no snip of a girl was going to show him up. On his bookshelf, he had "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom" by T.E. Lawrence. It had been accumulating dust there for several years, and the last time the reporter tried to stumble through it, he couldn't even get one foot up on the first pillar.

SMUGLY, HE handed the book to Beth and said, "Read as much as you can in one minute." She did. Afterward, she agreed that the book was ponderous to say the least. That may have slowed her up. She checked out at 3,750 words a minute and was able to discuss what she had read.

Beth is a product of the Evelyn Wood junior rapid reading program, an eight-week course she began last February.

Her teacher, Mrs. Joyce Wagman, admitted that Beth is her prize pupil. "We can usually get the children up to a reading comprehension of about 1,500 words a minute. Beth's progress has been phenomenal."

"At first, I was skeptical about letting Beth take the course," said her father, Martin, a physical education instructor for the Chicago public schools. "I enjoy reading myself, and I didn't want to deprive my daughter of the joy of reading at a leisurely pace, mulling over certain phrases or thoughts which she might find beautiful. But since she took the course, she reads more than ever, so I guess my fears were groundless."

Beth agrees. "It's a lot more fun to read now that I don't have to devote the time to it that I once did," she said. "And in school it helped a lot, too." Always a bright student, Beth has maintained straight A marks in school. "But now I don't have to put in as much time to doing well as I did before," she added.

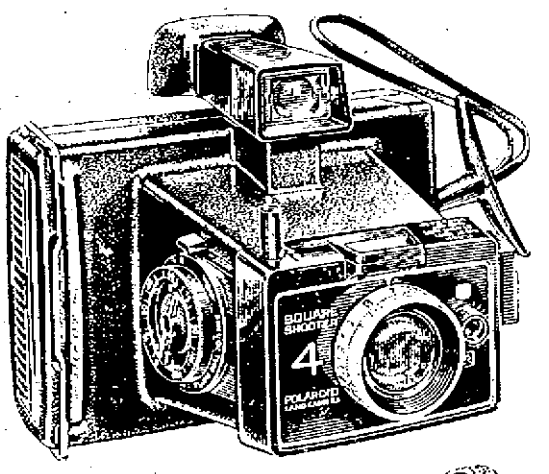

What is she reading now? "A book on psycho-cybernetics," Beth replied. "It's really good."

Do you want a copy of "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom?"

"Gosh, no!" Ah, well. Back to the bookcase for T.E. Lawrence.

Riding the rails

A pair of pretty bicyclists appear to be maneuvering their vehicles along the shadows cast by the iron fence on a beautiful, sunny November day in Long Beach's Bluff Park. National Weather Service forecasters said more of the clear, fall weather—which left Southland residents with a breathtaking view of the San Gabriel Mountains Saturday morning—is due today. They predict a few high clouds, with temperatures in the upper 60s along the beaches and in the low 70s inland. Saturday's high was 78 degrees, and overnight lows dipped into the 40-degree range. —Staff Photo by CURT JOHNSON

Now it's happening to cities

Municipal insurance rates skyrocket

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

It happened to doctors and now it appears to be happening to cities.

Insurance costs are skyrocketing. Premiums have risen as much as 400 per cent in the last year, according to worried city officials.

And, according to Cerritos City Manager Gaylord F. Knapp, "The taxpayer is eating that premium jump."

Knapp is a member of a special League of California Cities' panel looking for a solution to the insurance cost dilemna.

Long Beach pays a $106,500 annual premium for liability insurance on general city operations. But that's for a policy with an unusually high $250,000 deductible clause—in other words, the city pays for all damage suits and other claims totaling less than $250,000.

The city has budgeted another $175,000 for claims it will have to pay because of the deductible, John Williams, a city manager's assistant, said.

The insurance crisis, officials say, began in late 1973 when cities were surprised by the decision of the largest national municipal policy carrier, Pacific Indemnity, to leave the business.

"Apparently the company decided that cities were not the place to make money," said Knapp.

The insurance companies remaining in the field claim they were hit by severe losses in 1974 totaling $2.7 billion. That figure includes a drubbing in their stock market portfolios, said R. Scott Jones, vice president of George A. Richards & Sons. Jones negotiates Long Beach's insurance contracts.

Courts, he added have drastically increased the amounts of damage awards.

"It was unheard of a few years to get awards of $2 million against a city, and now its relatively commonplace," Jones said.

These three jolts were compounded last week when Pacific Coast Insurance, another large carrier, served notice that it too would no longer insure municipalities.

And there appears to be no end in sight. Jones said that in the first half of 1975, insurance companies lost $2.4 billion—nearly equal to the losses for the entire year of 1974.

Cities hit the hardest by the crunch on premiums are full-service cities such as Long Beach, Knapp said.

But communities like Cerritos, which contracts with the county for some services such as police and fire, also have suffered premium jumps from $24,500 in 1974 to $55,500 in 1975.

Lakewood, Bellflower and other contract cities had similiar problems.

Jones pointed out that Long Beach provides other services, such as police helicopters, paramedics, cemeteries, stadiums, gas department, physicians in the health department, marinas, water department, harbor, and the airport which present special insurance problems.

The city does save a considerable amount by using the large deductible and having city attorneys do much of the legal work instead of insurance company lawyers, Jones said.

Knapp expressed skepticism that the rate boosts were justified.

"The premiums have gone up disproportionately compared with the company losses," he said, and added that "we want assurances that the increases are related to insurance losses and not losses on the stock market.

"The remaining companies are being very selective, they're writing very few policies," Jones remarked.

Insurance companies try to collect $2 in profits for every $1 they pay out in claims, Scott said.

Many cities are depending on insurance to solve the problem of predictable losses, when they should be paying for forseeable losses with cash instead of turning in a claim and subsequently having their rates raised, Jones contended.

Long Beach predicts that it will lose about $175,000 annually in small claims and pays those in cash, using the deductible to cut costs, he explained.

Knapp said the California League of Cities is studying several possible solutions, including municipal pooling, where several cities would join together to get lower premium rates.

There also is a possibility that state law could be used to lower the rates or that other cities could follow the Long Beach example and take a high deductible, Knapp said.

New companies looking at cities are using more in-depth analysis," he said.

Error in crash report

A driver's license examiner, injured in a traffic accident that occurred while he was testing a prospective driver, remained in critical condition at Pacific Hospital in Long Beach Saturday.

Hospital officials said there had been little change in the condition of Vincent W. Jones, 62, who was admitted to the facility's intensive care unit following the accident Friday.

It was reported in the Independent, Press-Telegram Saturday that Jones was injured when the driver he was testing, 23-year-old Diane Lynn Davidson, collided with a Long Beach Public Transportation bus that was turning left on Burnett Street at Magnolia Ave.

That account was incorrect. Officers reported the bus was traveling north on Magnolia Avenue when Ms. Davidson, who had been driving south on Magnolia, attempted to turn left onto Burnett Street in front of the oncoming bus.

Investigators said the car was dragged some distance before it and the bus came to rest. Ms. Davidson suffered only minor injuries, and no one on the bus was seriously injured.

Officers said no citations were issued, and the cause of the accident was under investigation.

$200,000 payments

Doctor named in affidavit

A search warrant affidavit filed in Orange County Superior Court alleges that Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr. of Santa Ana has been linked to more than $200,000—including some Medi-Cal funds—paid by two hospitals for supplies they never ordered or received.

The affidavit, filed Friday and based on information supplied by three persons, alleges that the payments were made for invoices which Cella had printed at a shop operated by the hospitals.

The document also alleges that the checks "were cashed or deposited into bank accounts which are either directly or indirectly under the control of Dr. Louis J. Cella."

CELLA IS said to own a large portion of the financial interests for each of the hospitals, Mercy General of Santa Ana and Mission Community in Mission Viejo.

The informants on whose information the affidavit was based were identified as Robert Zunick, controller of Mission Community and former executive controller of Mercy General: Robert Oulette, assistant controller at both hospitals until last August, and Donald A. Ray, who was in charge of the print shop from May 1972 until last Sept. 25.

The affidavit was sworn to by investigator Loren Duchesne of the Orange County district attorney's office.

The search warrant, issued Nov. 13 by Superior Court Judge Jerrold Oliver, authorized examination of certain records and materials at a print shop operated by the hospitals at 3198-C Airport Loop Drive, Costa Mesa.

Investigators reportedly confiscated a boxful of printing material which was used to produce blank invoices in the name of 10 companies, some of them nonexistent.

Accompanying the affidavit were 24 attachments containing copies of invoices, vouchers and canceled checks.

THE CANCELED checks allegedly showed that some of the money was deposited into Cella's bank accounts, while some was deposited into the accounts of various firms.

According to the affidavit, Zunick told Duchesne "that the records of the hospitals show that the items on the above invoices were never ordered by or delivered to the hospitals."

Zunick also alleged, according to the affidavit, that Cella was directly or indirectly paid more than $200,000 on those invoices during the last three years.

Christmas mobile reprinted

Because of popular demand, the do-it-yourself Christmas mobile which appeared in last Sunday's Independent, Press-Telegram has been reprinted today on page R-7. Extra copies of last week's mobile were unavailable to fill the many requests of parents and teachers, so we hope this second printing will satisfy the demand.

Radicals spurned SLA, escapee says

VACAVILLE (AP) — The tiny Symbionese Liberation Army stayed tiny because its revolutionary dream world was largely spurned by the radical community, says a convict once falsely identified as an abductor of Patricia Hearst.

Thero Wheeler, recaptured in Houston, Tex., last July nearly two years after he escaped from prison, described in an interview the SLA's futile search for a wide following and its unsuccessful attempts to recruit him — including once at gunpoint. Despite the most celebrated kidnaping in recent history, the SLA never really amounted to much, he said.

"When I got out, there was no SLA," the 30-year-old convict recalled at the California Medical Facility here. "Donald DeFreeze was in the Bay Area trying to find members, trying to get them to join. But nobody was going for it."

WHEELER had met SLA leader DeFreeze through an inmate organization called the Black Cultural Association. DeFreeze was later transferred to Soledad Prison, from which he escaped.

Six months later, on Aug. 2, 1973, Wheeler, who was serving a term for battery on a police officer, escaped with the aid of what he calls "well-connected" radical acquaintances, but not the SLA. He says he left the prison because he believed he was failing to get proper medical attention for a lingering intestinal inflammation.

Once a member of the now-defunct Maoist Venceremos group, Wheeler said he traveled to New York and Chicago seeking medical attention, then returned to the Bay Area in the fall of 1973.

Radical acquaintances steered him to DeFreeze and several companions — including Nancy Ling Perry, Patricia Soltysik and Willie Wolfe, an outsider who had attended BCA meetings at Vacaville. The four died with SLA comrades Camilla Hall and Angela Atwood in a fiery Los Angeles shootout less than a year later.

"THEY CAME to me trying to find out whether I would help them start an organization," he said. "There were all of five people in it. It was particularly this one dude with an idea, DeFreeze.

"They were living out of books, man," Wheeler said. "They weren't living everyday existence.

"You can't readily equate what you read in books and reality," he went on. "To the people out there, trying to survive takes priority over dreams. He (DeFreeze) wasn't in a real frame of mind; he didn't understand the people he said he wanted to help."

Wheeler said he refused to join the SLA or help recruit because he opposed killing and was preoccupied with getting an operation. He said he saw DeFreeze and other SLA members about five times after his escape and turned them down each time they solicited support.

Wheeler said he fled alone to Houston, Tex., then set up a false identity under the name Bradley Bruce. He underwent two operations and had an electronics job until his capture last July.

"The whole picture surrounding the SLA is wrong — all the articles, assumptions, speculations and probabilities," he said. "They distorted it out of context. I don't think the SLA has ever been important, other than to be a sensation, a story."

Asked whether he believes that Miss Hearst was brainwashed into joining her captors, Wheeler said: "I think it could have been a little of both —coercion and trying to understand the cause—and I think maybe she got confused about what really was happening. I think that a lot of what she did was out of fear" of the SLA at first and later of the FBI.

An FBI spokesman in San Francisco said Wheeler is not wanted in connection with any SLA activities, including the April 1974 bank robbery in which Miss Hearst is charged.

SLA WAS MORE a product of sensational publicity than substance, says recaptured escapee Thero Wheeler. —AP Wirephoto

Besieged suspect gives up

A strongarm robbery suspect who barricaded himself inside his Carmelitos apartment with a high-powered .22 caliber rifle surrendered peacefully Saturday night after a Long Beach police Special Tactics and Rescue team surrounded the building.

Arrested on suspicion of robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and resisting arrest was Henry Gray, 27, of 958½ Via Wanda. A 17-year-old girl who was in the apartment with him was charged with resisting arrest.

THE five-man STAR team, along with other Long Beach units, was called in after Signal Hill police went to Gray's apartment with a warrant for his arrest in connection with a robbery in Signal Hill Saturday morning.

According to Long Beach police Lt. Tony Prutch, the robbery victim, Thomas Henry Jackson, of 2014 Junipero Ave., led Signal Hill police to Gray's apartment about 8:30 p.m..

With the police outside, Jackson, who knew Gray, went into Gray's second-floor apartment and asked for the return of a stereo set and various household items allegedly taken.

THE SUSPECT then put a rifle under Jackson's chin and told him to get out, Prutch said.

After Long Beach reenforcements arrived, police spent about an hour trying to talk the suspect into surrendering, Prutch said.

When police said it was his last chance, Gray came to the front door, pushed the girl out and followed her, according to Prutch.

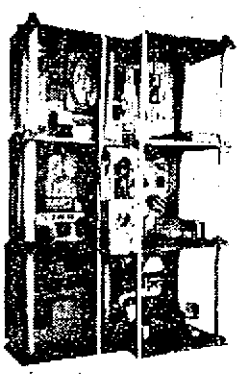

A restless crowd estimated at 200 jeered police as they tried to talk the suspect into surrendering, dispersing only after police declared an unlawful assembly.

New congressional procedures on budget praised

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP). — New procedures to give the Congress a tighter grip on the federal budget have been a success in their trial year, according to House and Senate Budget Committee chairmen.

Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., head of the House panel, and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, his Senate counterpart, both estimate that the new process has saved $10 billion to $15 billion this year.

The procedures were prescribed in the 1974 Budget Control Act, hailed as one of the most important congressional changes in many years.

Under the law, the new system must be used in 1976 and future years.

But the two budget committees decided to start with it in 1975 on a trial basis, even though there were many unusual headaches, including a record deficit in the current fiscal year budget.

But both Adams and Muskie now think the decision was wise.

"It has been a good learning process, Muskie told a reporter. "The members now have a feel for it and are beginning to realize how important it is.

"I don't see how we could put it into effect next year, with the very tight schedule that will be required, if we didn't have the trial run experience this year."

Conservative senators have not been as happy with the first year results.

Sen. James L. Buckley, Con.-R-N.Y., a member of the Budget Committee, said he was deeply disappointed that the Senate, in adopting the second budget resolution of the year Thursday, simply accepted spending increases that have taken place in the last six months.

Under the 1974 act, Congress will adopt in May each year a resolution fixing ceilings for federal spending and the deficit in the year ahead.

Then, in the fall, a second resolution will be passed revising the congressional budget program in the light of what the legislators have done on appropriations bills, changes in the economic picture, and unexpected boosts, the so-called uncontrollable outlays.

Buckley pointed out that the spending ceiling in the second resolution just passed was $8.6 billion higher than the figure in the measure passed last May, and the deficit was $6 billion higher.

Unless members of Congress can exercise better control than this, "they will serve as little more than bookkeepers adding up the effects of individual spending measures," Buckley said.

However, Muskie said that all of the spending hikes accounted for in the second resolution came in entitlement programs and other items which Congress is powerless to control in the short run.

For example, he said, unemployment compensation payments were up $1.6 billion, Medicare and Medicaid $1.7 billion, losses in housing subsidy programs $900 million, welfare outlays $300 million, farm subsidies $600 million, and veterans' benefits $1.4 billion.

Congress did follow the priorities set out in the first budget resolution in May and did not enact any new spending programs, Muskie emphasized.

If the Budget Committee had tried to make other spending cuts to offset the increases in uncontrollable outlays, it would have run the risk of aborting economic recovery, the senator said.

The figures in the second budget resolution will be binding on Congress for the rest of fiscal 1976, which runs to next June 30, once the House and Senate compromise their differences on the measure.

The conferees on the resolution are expected to meet to work out a compromise as soon as Congress returns Dec. 1 from its Thanksgiving week recess.

Military's pay beats civilians'

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Military personnel whose basic pay has more than doubled in the last decade now are drawing significantly more compensation than their civilian counterparts in the federal government, according to a study by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

A major general, for example, draws $54,713 a year in pay and benefits. That is $13,465 more than received in pay and benefits by a federal employe holding the top civil service grade of GS-18.

The combined pay and benefits for a 1st Lieutenant total $21,729, which is $5,326 more than received by a civilian employe holding a comparable grade (GS-8 or GS-9) in the civil service.

A study comparing military and civilian compensation was contained in the committee's report on this year's defense appropriations bill.

LIKE other congressional committees which have hesitated to provoke the political wrath of the sizeable military community, the Senate committee deliberately refrained from drawing the conclusion that military personnel were better paid than their civilian counterparts in the government. Yet that conclusion was self-evident in tables in the committee report.

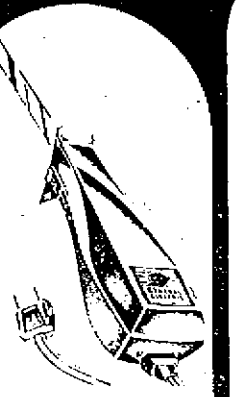

The comparisons showed that from the rank of sergeant up through major general, military personnel were receiving anywhere from $3,610 to $13,465 more in overall compensation and benefits than civilian employes in comparable grades in the civil service. The only military ranks receiving less were privates and corporals, and even there the monetary disadvantage was only about $500 annually.

The committee report suggested that the comparisons undoubtedly would come as a "surprise" to "the majority of military personnel," who, it said, tend to understate their compensation.

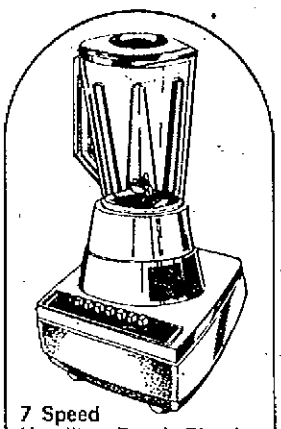

AS the report noted, the tendency among military personnel, when asked about their compensation, is to cite only their basic pay and housing and subsistence allowances and to leave out such other benefits as a free retirement system, free health care, commissary store privileges and government payments to their Social Security accounts.

The additional benefits were included by the Senate committee in making its compensation comparisons, as well as similar but not as extensive benefits given to civilian employes.

Economy, jobs top issues, Demos agree

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Democrats planning their 1976 campaign approach seemed agreed Saturday that economics is the issue which will beat Republicans, but a howling crowd outside said they ought to be thinking more about busing.

Several thousand demonstrators, more than the number of delegates inside at the National Democratic Issues Convention, milled outside in defiance of a demonstration permit which would have kept them at least a block away.

Riot-equipped police cordoned off Louisville Gardens, where Secret Service agents were guarding several Democratic presidential candidates.

But the crowd, after taunting police with a host of American and Confederate flags, and chanting "We Won't Bus," dispersed when three of its leaders were invited inside to sit down and talk it over.

After a huddle with conference leaders and presidential candidate Morris K. Udall, a spokesman for the demonstrators emerged and said, "We're satisfied that someone within the Democratic Party is listening to us."

Although busing has been a lively and volatile issue here since the countywide transfer of students began in September, it had received relatively little mention at the issues conference.

"The party will have to address itself to the busing issue," Udall told a news conference held at the height of the ruckus outside.

Presidential aspirant Lloyd Bentsen, meanwhile, was calling busing "a bankrupt social policy," and declaring it counterproductive to the educational process."

But most of the discussion in official sessions of the three-day meeting of 1,500 to 2,000 delegates centered around economics and seemed to be approaching a consensus that the best way to attack Republicans next year is to promote jobs in a recession economy.

The only disagreement appeared to be over how to proceed, rather than the goal. Udall and Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., spoke for a group wanting focus on a national policy of full employment.

Giant Louisville protest

Police block antibus throng

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Riot-equipped police turned back thousands of antibusing demonstrators Saturday after the marchers departed from their parade route and converged on a convention center where national Democratic Party leaders were meeting.

Some 200 policemen, several rows deep, cordoned off the street in front of the center and kept back the marchers. The officers held nightsticks across their chests and wore gas masks. Some held fire hoses pointed at the crowd.

Police Chief John Nevin said officers had been told to spray water on the crowd, already shivering in chilly winds and temperatures below 40 degrees, if protesters tried to cross the street to the center. "If the water don't work, we'll use gas," Nevin said.

The crowd dispersed a short time after several antibusing leaders were allowed inside the convention center to speak with Democratic leaders. Mayor Harvey I. Sloane said no injuries were reported and no arrests were made.

An estimated 5,000 to 7,000 demonstrators began the march, which wound through the downtown area, but only a few policemen were visible along the parade route. March leaders said some of the demonstrators were from Boston, the scene of earlier violence because of court-ordered busing to achieve desegregation.

Jack Shore, leader of Union Labor Against Busing, which sponsored the march, estimated the crowd at 7,000.

After a brief rally at the federal building, the demonstrators marched toward Louisville Gardens, the convention center several blocks away where the Democratic National Issues Forum was meeting.

Then, several busloads of riot-equipped police appeared, and some 200 officers disembarked and trotted into formations in front of the convention center.

The crowd shouted at police and waved Confederate flags and antibusing placards for more than an hour, but there were no clashes. After several of the crowd's leaders were invited inside the building to talk with forum issues, most of the demonstrators dispersed.

Louisville area schools were desegragrated in September under a federal court plan which required more than 22,000 pupils to be bused.

Earlier, several hundred black probusing demonstrators marched through downtown Louisville within blocks of the anitbusing demonstration but there were no clashes.

Conyers, protester find way to resolve differences

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Saturday morning, Bill Kellerman was leading angry antibusing marchers as they shouted outside the convention center where the National Democratic Issues Convention was under way.

Saturday afternoon, the automobile plant foreman was engaging in a pleasant dialogue with black Congressman John Conyers, D-Mich., while Democratic presidential candidate Morris Udall looked on.

A phalanx of police had blocked the marchers earlier Saturday, but as Kellerman put it, "someone grabbed my arm and led me inside."

A GROUP of Democrats had invited Kellerman and three other antibusing leaders in for discussions in one of the convention rooms, and it was there that he met Conyers.

"Maybe we have something in common," Conyers said to Kellerman, as they met.

Kellerman explained to Conyers that his people were angry at having school busing for desegregation imposed on them without a chance to explore alternatives.

Conyers suggested an informal exchange of ideas among the busing sides. Kellerman said his door always had been open.

"If you could get your folks to stop saying 'let us at the niggers,' that would help a lot," Conyers said.

HE SAID a Michigan delegate, a white woman, was "scared to death" by shouts from the demonstrators as she emerged from her car.

Kellerman said that "two years ago nobody in that crowd" would have shouted racist slogans, but that constant frustrations had polarized their emotions.

"Do I understand you're against racism?" Conyers asked.

"I most certainly am," Kellerman replied.

"I'm certainly glad to hear that," the congressman said.

Udall, a Democratic House member from Arizona, said he was glad to hear both men discuss the busing problem cordially. "That's what this country needs more of," he said.

Then Conyers and Kellerman parted, with Kellerman saying he'd be happy to have a beer with the congressman later.

In Boston, Richard Laws, spokesman for the antibusing group ROAR — Restore Our Alienated Rights — said about 40 members of ROAR went to Louisville. He said they wanted to meet with busing protesters there to discuss mutual efforts concerning opposition to antibusing action by the Democratic Party and labor leaders.

Earlier this week, AFL-CIO President George Meany met with the president and secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Labor Council. Meany said the council's stand against forced busing was against national AFL-CIO policy and ordered them to change it. A meeting of the state executive board was scheduled Monday to discuss the matter.

Laws said ROAR members have talked to representatives of two presidential candidates and plan to talk to representatives of other candidates.

Belin asks JFK death probe be reopened

anniversary of Kennedy's death in Dallas.

But Belin declined to rule out that a new inquiry might discover a conspiracy involved in the death of Kennedy.

"The Central Intelligence Agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Robert Kennedy in his capacity as attorney general of the United States failed to disclose to the Warren Commission evidence concerning plots to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro," Belin said. He found this "inexcusable."

He also criticized the FBI, which withheld from the Warren Commission a letter Oswald wrote shortly before the Kennedy assassination threatening to blow up a Dallas police station.

THE DECISION to ask for a new inquiry is a reversal for Belin who has steadfastly taken the position that the Warren Commission's findings were final. However, it was while serving on Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller's investigation of the CIA that Belin first learned of the extensive government plots to kill Castro.

He suggested that a congressional investigation should examine "whether or not there is any credible evidence of a foreign conspiracy."

"The Warren Commission found none — but the Warren Commission did not have any information on the CIA assassination plots," he said.

The fact that the extensive plotting against Castro was withheld from the Warren Commission has been the central factor in the growing suspicion of the Warren Commission's conclusions.

Committee effort to hide probe of JFK's life told

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—One of the secrets the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence tried hardest to protect with no success was its own not-so-indiscreet ramblings into the personal life of President John F. Kennedy.

What's more, evidence turned up by committee investigators but not disclosed in public hearings showed that the late director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover, and his agents were delving into it, too, while Kennedy was in the White House.

Perhaps the most sensitive aspect of the committee's recent inquiry into possible CIA assassination plots, especially to some committee members with presidential ambitions, was the discovery of FBI documents detailing Kennedy's association with a woman who had close ties with Mafia figures.

Now fully discounted by the committee as insignificant, FBI documents showed that Kennedy frequently met and communicated with a woman friend of the late Chicago mobster Sam Giancana during the time Giancana and associates were working with the CIA on a plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

The woman, then known as Judith Campbell, now lives in California under another name. She was called before the committee to testify in secret session about her relationship with the president and underworld crime figures.

Ms. Campbell reportedly has given the committee a sworn statement that she never knew of the plot to kill Castro.

Ring buying

I'm interested in buying a diamond solitaire and would like to know what would be a reasonable price for a good quality one or two-carat stone. I'd also like some advice on selecting a reputable jewelry store. T.P.R., Long Beach.

Prices are based on four factors, or four "Cs" - carat weight, clarity, color and cutting, and according to spokesmen in the jewelry industry, you can expect to pay from $2,000 to $5,000 for a high quality one-carat stone, and from $4,500 to $15,000 for a good two-carat stone. They advise you to seek a jeweler from among the more conservative, long established stores. One jeweler suggests that you ask a local banker to recommend a reliable store. Sylvia Porter, syndicated financial columnist, suggests that you avoid a jeweler who tries to sell you a "perfect blue-white diamond," which doesn't exist. The best-colored diamonds have the clearness of tap water— not too blue or yellow. Inferior diamonds sell for much less than the above prices but reputable jewelers consider many of them to be barely of gemstone quality and some sold as jewels, one noted, "should be on the end of a drill." (Nongemstone quality diamonds are widely used on cutting tools.) For help in selecting a diamond, you can get a copy of the free booklet, "Diamond Buying and Care Guide," at some jewelry stores, including C. C. Lewis Jewelry Co., 333 Pine Ave., and Brand Jewelers, 5013 Hazelbrook Ave., Lakewood.

...and selling

I want to sell my wedding rings but I don't know how to go about it. I have no idea how much they are worth and do not want to be cheated. Can you advise me on this? D.B., Long Beach.

You can get detailed written appraisals of your rings from jewelry appraisers or at many large retail jewelry stores. Normally, a written appraisal should cost about $10 for each item. Then you can wholesale your rings to jewelry stores, or jewelry buyers — after checking with several to get the best price — or you can try to sell them retail through a newspaper classified ad. You will probably get more for your rings if you sell them through an ad, because a store or broker will have to pay you less than the rings are worth in order to make a profit on the resale, according to a local jeweler Action Line contacted. He warned that you shouldn't have a piece of jewelry appraised by someone who also is a potential buyer. "There's a good chance you'll get a pretty low estimate from a jeweler who also wants to buy the piece." You can find appraisers and jewelry buyers listed in the Yellow Pages.

Tax back

I filed my 1974 income tax return in January, but I still haven't received my refund or my rebate. I've contacted the Internal Revenue Service and filled out three tracers, but they haven't produced any results. The tax form was filed under my married name with my parents' address since that was where I was living at the time. Since then my divorce has become final, and I'm trying to make ends meet on my own. I desperately need this money. Can Action Line help? D.S., Long Beach.

After we contacted the Internal Revenue Service, a check covering your refund and rebate was sent to you. We weren't given any explanation for the delay in issuing your refund.

Tree lights

I am having trouble finding the miniature, nonblinking Christmas tree lights that screw in, not push in. I have about 10 strings of these lights and need white or clear replacement bulbs. Can you help me? Mrs. C.W., Long Beach.

We weren't able to find a retail store that stocks the older model bulbs you need, but you can special order them through Keith Brown, store manager at Sav-On-Drugs Inc., 400 Pine Ave. Action Line also receives frequent requests late in the year for bubble lights. Replacement bulbs are available through Sears Roebuck Co. catalog sales. Nearby Sears stores are at 450 Long Beach Blvd. and in the Los Cerritos Mall in Cerritos.

U.S.-Russ SALT summit seen near

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — United States and Soviet officials, looking for ways of salvaging the talks aimed at limiting strategic arms, are leaving open the possibility of a high level Soviet-American meeting in the next two months to seek a formula for breaking the deadlock in the negotiations.

Although no date or details have been set, interviews this past week with key American officials left an impression that they expected Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to make a trip to Moscow in the near future to confer directly with Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party leader.

Another possibility, considered more remote than a Kissinger-Brezhnev meeting, would be a decision by President Ford to meet with Brezhnev again, for talks similar to those by the two leaders at Vladivostok last November and in Helsinki last summer. Brezhnev may attend a Communist Party congress in Havana late next month, bringing him close enough for a meeting at sea or in Florida.

At a news conference on Nov. 10, Kissinger virtually ruled out a high-level meeting until the Russians produced what he called "a reasoned response" to the most recent American arms limitation proposals, which they had rejected summarily.

At that conference, Kissinger said the talks were in "stagnation." But since then, Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin has met with Kissinger, and other signals have been sent between Moscow and Washington.

As a result, officials now seem to believe the Russians

will make a serious proposal that would make a high-level meeting worthwhile.

But the officials all stress that this is in part conjecture and intuition, based on the knowledge that Brezhnev, who is in poor health, would very much like to achieve an arms accord soon.

Soviet diplomats and officials here and in other capitals have been spreading the word in recent weeks that Brezhnev's health has improved and that he would not retire at the 25th Communist Party Congress, which begins Feb. 24 in Moscow.

The Strategic Arms Limitation Talks have been stalemated for some time over handling of two issues that had not arisen when Ford and Brezhnev agreed at Vladivostok on the framework for a new accord.

At Vladivostok, they agreed to set a limit for both sides of 2,400 offensive strategic delivery vehicles — missiles and long-range bombers. Of these 1,320 missiles could have multiple independently targetable warheads, known as MIRVs.

The two sides then began to negotiate what weapons would fall under the 2,400 limit and how to verify compliance. Problems arose when the United States asked the Russians to include a new bomber, known in the West as the Backfire, as a strategic bomber subject to the limit.

The Russians have so far produced about 50 Backfires, and have insisted that they are medium-range and not subject to limitations. The United States says they have the capability of reaching the United States on a one-way mission.

The Soviet Union, in turn, has pressed to include all American cruise missiles with a range of more than 600 kilometers, or 370 miles.

Attempts to save N.Y. hit new snag

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Hamstrung by political differences, the New York Legislature abandoned efforts Saturday to push through $200 million in tax increases for New York City before Monday.

The delay threatened to unravel Gov. Hugh Carey's plan to avoid default by the city next month.

The legislators said they would take up the tax hikes Monday, but Carey said he feared that could be "too late to avert bankruptcy" because the city needs a quick decision from President Ford on whether Ford will support federal aid for the city.

The President said last week he would decide early this week if New York State had taken enough "further steps" to justify federal loan guarantees or other aid for New York City.

The federal aid is crucial to Carey's plan, and the Democratic governor considered the tax increases a gesture of fiscal sacrifice which might impress Washington.

After day-long negotiations Saturday, legislative leaders gave up trying to meet objections of Republicans and black and Puerto Rican Democrats who were holding up action.

Carey had sought Republican votes to bypass the opposition of blacks and Puerto Ricans in the Assembly's Democratic majority.

But Perry Duryea, the minority leader in the lower house, refused to offer any GOP support unless the New York City Council, which already has requested that the state impose the taxes, votes again to enact them. Carey said that was "impossible" because the city charter required 12 days for action, "and by then President Ford will be in China."

The governor, obviously angry, told reporters that "I have no time to play these games. This is the most serious situation in the history of this state."

On Friday, legislative leaders said they had broken a partisan deadlock over a Democratic plan to raise income and commuter taxes and a Republican plan to raise the city's sales tax, which is already 8 cents on the dollar. They compromised on a package of new or increased levies on income, banks, estates, cigarettes, haircuts and massages in the city.

But they held up action until the New York City Council passed a resolution formally requesting the tax increases. By the time the council did so, at 7 a.m. Saturday, two new problems had developed that stood in the way of legislative action.

First, a coalition of black and Puerto Rican legislators refused to support the tax bills unless Carey agreed not to cut welfare programs and to add a black to the Emergency Financial Control Board, the agency through which the state has taken over the city's budget.

Second, Republican legislators began backing off their support for the tax package after White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen declared that Ford had never insisted on new taxes as the price for federal aid to help the city avert default.

tigation. Bagley is stationed in London.

Pentagon officials said fuller information on the number and extent of casualties is not expected to be available until sometime today.

Earlier, the Pentagon said damage to the Belknap was substantial. There was no further information on the specific nature of the damage, nor of damage to the carrier Kennedy.

The Belknap was taken under tow by the U.S. destroyer Bordelon bound for Augusta Bay, Sicily.

Other U.S. naval vessels in the area were the Ricketts, the Hart, the Dale and the Pharris.

A Pentagon spokesman said one Soviet destroyer was in the area at the time of the collision and subsequent rescue operations. He said he did not know how close the destroyer came to the collision scene and he did not know if the Russian vessel offered any help.

RUSSIAN naval vessels customarily observe U.S. naval exercises and other operations in the Mediterranean, as American ships and planes watch Soviet maneuvers.

In Norfolk, Va., families of the captains of the two vessels were advised that the skippers were "all right."

Information reaching the Pentagon indicated the Belknap was off the left side of the carrier when the cruiser's superstructure and the Kennedy's overhanging flight deck collided.

Schlesinger raps Ford

himself and Kissinger on "negotiating strategy in dealing with the Soviet Union" on such matters as strategic nuclear arms limitations, mutual force reductions in Europe and "what kind of leverage we should get out of grain sales and the like."

There was no immediate comment from the White House.

In announcing that he was replacing Schlesinger, Ford had said he was making the change in order to have his own team of officials in the Cabinet. Later, however, the President acknowledged that tensions and disagreements among members of the administration had played a part in his decision.

The former defense secretary was more pointed than in the past in indicating reservations about the framework of a new Strategic Arms Limitation agreement worked out at Vladivostok a year ago by Ford, with Kissinger's advice, and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

"It provided for less arms stability than I would have desired," Schlesinger said. But he conceded "that would have been very difficult to negotiate."

Schlesinger dismissed as "simply false" charges by some critics that he was responsible for the deadlock in follow-up SALT negotiations and that he has tried to undermine detente.

He skirted a direct reply as to whether he and Kissinger ultimately resolved differences on SALT but said that a new U.S. proposal made to Russia last September "was one, by and large, that I could accept."

"It reflected extensive discussions between myself and Secretary Kissinger at the behest of the President," Schlesinger said.

The Russians rejected that U.S. proposal, aimed at breaking an impasse over U.S. demands that Russia's new Backfire bomber and Soviet demands that planned longer range U.S. cruise missiles be included in the limitations on strategic nuclear weapons.

Asked how he assesses prospects for an equitable SALT agreement, Schlesinger said, "I am always hopeful, but the prospects clearly are less favorable than they have been."

"The Soviets have, across the board, become harder in their attitude," he said.

While he stopped short of accusing the Russians of cheating on the first SALT agreement, completed in 1972, Schlesinger said "it is...fairly clear that some of the Soviet actions have been inconsistent with the basic spirit of the agreement."

While refusing to discuss specific details, he did say "there is some question about whether the Soviets have been fully in the spirit of not interfering with the national technical means of verification."

This was an apparent reference to reported efforts by the Russians to jam U.S. electronic and other devices used to monitor Soviet tests of missiles and other hardware related to strategic weaponry. In the 1972 SALT agreement, both the United States and Russia had pledged not make such efforts.

war of the 1930s. Franco declared Spain a kingdom in 1948, but it had to wait 27 years to have a king.

"A free and modern society requires the participation of all in the forums of decision in the information media, in various educational levels, and in the national wealth," Juan Carlos said.

"Making this participation more certain and efficient each day is a community effort and the task of the government."

The new king paid a tribute of "respect and gratitude" to Franco, whose authoritarian rule of Spain ended Thursday with his death at the age of 82.

Divided between saluting the past and hailing the future, Madrid was a city of contrasts Saturday. Its people cheered the king in his uniform of ceremonial commander of the armies and solemnly filed in an unending procession past the body of Franco as it lay in state in the royal palace.

"Occult Medicine Can Save Your Life: A Modern Doctor Looks at Unconventional Healing."

Dr. Shealy, a nationally recognized neurosurgeon, will discuss a number of unconventional aspects of the healing arts, including biofeedback and autogenics (self-suggestion), at a free health information forum at Memorial Hospital Medical Center, Dec. 2

Biofeedback is a process by which a person can learn to control physiological processes formerly thought to be involuntary, using modern electric monitors.

Autogenics or self-suggestion, uses the simple basics of language and thought to achieve control of body processes.

Biofeedback may become one of the major treatments of the future for diseases that until now have been largely uncontrollable. Dr. Shealy reports biofeedback holds real medical promise in correcting disorders as different as asthma, epilepsy, stomach ulcers, migraine headaches, muscle tension, pain and high blood pressure.

Off Late Shows
Film ban OK with Reagan

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press

When Ronald Reagan heard that the Federal Communications Commission had ordered his old movies off the television late shows under the equal time rule, he smiled broadly.

"Somebody must have goofed," the newly announced candidate for the Republican nomination for president said, "because I've made some movies that—if they put them on television—I'd demand equal time."

The equal time ruling means that for the next six months, and possibly for a year, "Bedtime for Bonzo" is effectively banned from American television.

Similarly banned are "Knute Rockne—All American," "King Row," "Cowboy From Brooklyn" and all the rest of the 51 motion pictures Reagan made during his 20-year Hollywood career.

AN FCC official ruled a few hours after Reagan declared his candidacy Thursday for the Republican nomination for president that the FCC equal time rule would be applied to any television station that broadcasts old Reagan movies.

Milton O. Gross, chief of the FCC's fairness and political broadcast branch, said no formal ruling has been made on the Reagan movies but that past experience leaves no doubt they will be covered.

He cited a regulation which requires that any time a station allows one qualified candidate to use its broadcast facilities, it shall afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station."

Reagan's films date back to 1937, when he broke into Hollywood starring as a sportscaster in "Love Is In The Air." His last movie was "Hellcats of the Navy" in 1957, the only film in which he appeared with his wife, Nancy.

THOSE films have been a regular part of the Late Show fare on stations across the country for two decades, a fact that Reagan often jokes about.

When he was sworn in on Jan. 4, 1967 for the first of his two four-year terms as governor, Reagan turned to then-U.S. Sen. George Murphy, another former actor, and quipped, "Well, here we are on the late show again, George."

Even today, Reagan says he still meets many people who are much more interested in his old movies than in his political career as a spokesman for conservation principles.

"People often ask me what it's like to turn on the late show in a strange city and see yourself in one of your old movies. I tell them it's like suddenly meeting an extra son you didn't know you had," Reagan said.

The old movies have also been a source of jokes by Reagan's political foes.

Pennsylvanians admire Reagan

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pennsylvania Republican leaders, though committed now to President Ford, look upon California's Ronald Reagan as a legitimate challenger who could become a real threat for the 1976 GOP nomination.

Some of the state's GOP leaders admit admiration for Reagan, but most insist that Ford as the current occupant of the White House has a better chance to beat the Democrats next year, especially in Pennsylvania.

"We need a Republican candidate who can win," says Drew Lewis, the party's unsuccessful candidate for governor last year who is chairman of Ford's Pennsylvania campaign.

"Personally I like Reagan," Lewis told the Associated Press after Reagan's formal announcement that he was actively seeking the presidency. "I have no problems with Reagan (but) I think Ford will be a stronger candidate in Pennsylvania."

Republican State Chairman Richard C. Frame, who also is the minority leader in the state senate, says the party endorsed Ford for a full term last year and there are no plans to drop that support.

Pennsylvania will have 103 delegates to the national convention in Kansas City next summer, with 84 chosen by the voters at the April primary and 19 selected by the state organization.

Voters could show a personal preference for either Ford or Reagan in the primary, although that outcome isn't binding on delegates.

The state's two U.S. Senators, Minority Leader Hugh Scott and Richard S. Schweiker, are both "very strongly" for Ford's nomination.

"I have always believed that the Republican Party has room enough for everybody and that we, as Republicans, should do more to bring people in than to send people out of the party," Scott said in a statement, saying however:

"Candidates should scrupulously avoid divisiveness."

Schweiker says that in a race between Ford and Reagan his support is for the President.

"Although I believe a primary challenge offers a healthy impact on the political process I'm concerned by the interest of the Ford campaign staff in out-Reaganing Reagan," Schweiker says. "Not only do I think such a move is bad for the Republican Party but I think it could backfire for the President in the general election."

Shapp to enter dozen primaries

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp will enter about a dozen state primaries next year in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I don't think we can realistically get into many more. You get stretched too thin," said Shapp's campaign manager, Norval Reece.

Thirty states will have primaries.

Bonds Suit-Buy-Of-The-Year $99 and $109

(Vested and Unvested Suits)

made possible by our fabric buy of the year.

Nobody has to tell you the cost of men's suits has continued its dizzying upward spiral. Manufacturers, plagued by rising cost on all fronts, have had to reduce fabric quality while attempting to maintain price lines. The retailer usually can't control these forces and they help dictate the price he must eventually set for the suits he sells. But the 120 stores of The New Bonds control our own manufacturing. We are deeply into the fabric market itself, and our size and nationwide scope gives us considerable buying leverage in that market.

Luxury Fabrics From World Famous Mills Woven For $150 to $200 Suits.

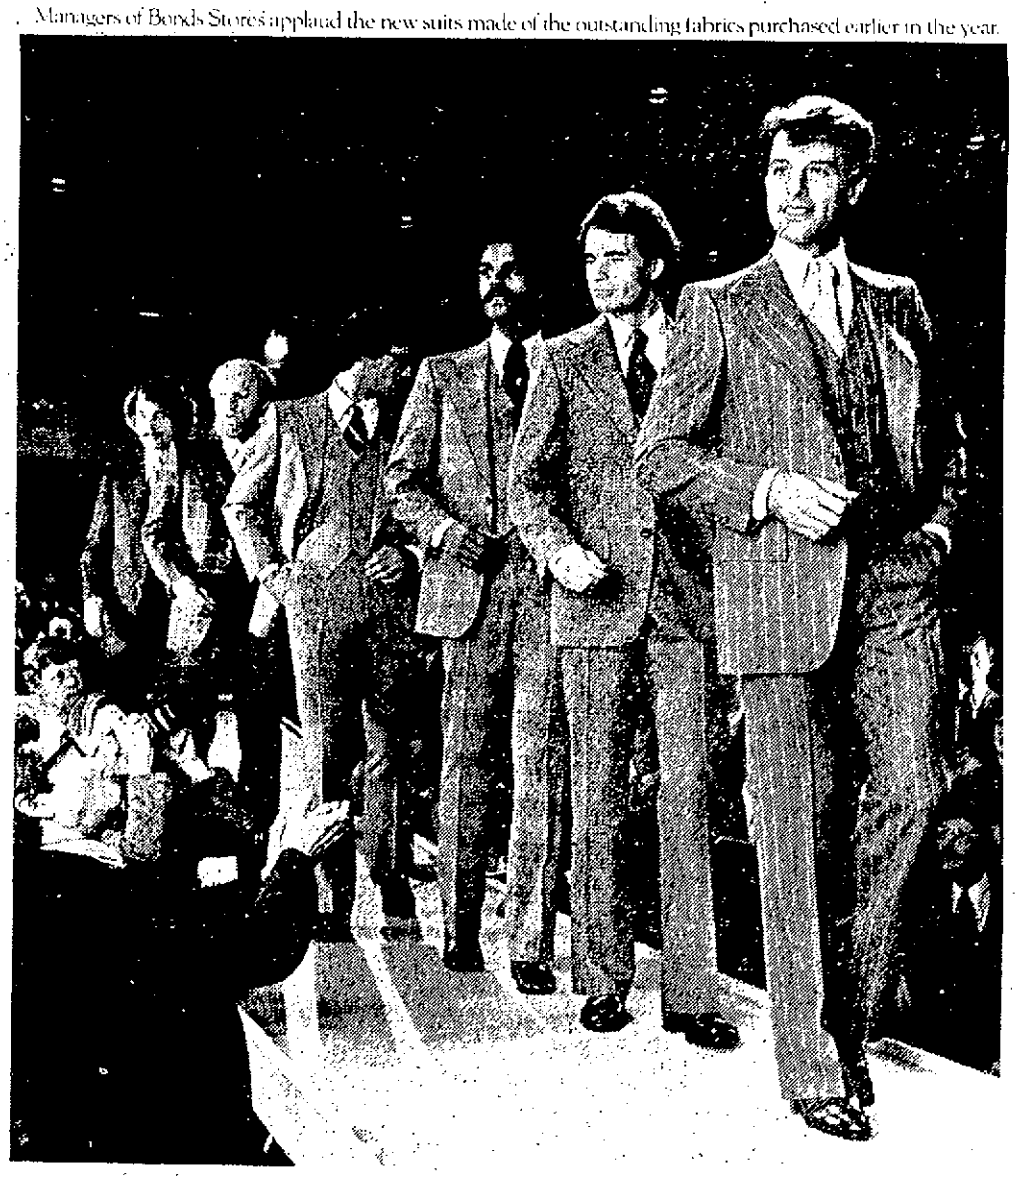

We selected the finest 2-ply all-wool worsteds and worsted blends. The price we obtained was rock bottom. And, it was obtained just before the prices of worsted and wool blend fabrics began their joyless joy ride, upwards. The mills had woven these fabrics for manufacturers whose suits would expect to sell at retail at from $150 to $200. But, the timing of our buy and the unprecedented size of our single purchase made favorable prices possible.

1,200 Football Fields of Fabric. Plaids! Stripes! Solids! Surface Interest!

What was the size of the buy? With 70% of it in worsteds and 30% in worsted blends, the combined yardage would stretch the length of 1,200 football fields and would be used in cutting and sewing tens of thousands of fine men's suits.

Even at Bonds Low Prices, These Suits Would Be $125 to $150.

Managers of Bonds Stores applaud the new suits made of the outstanding fabrics purchased earlier in the year.

The suits we have made from these fabrics have just arrived in our stores, some as recently as last week. The savings we negotiated will be passed on to customers of The New Bonds (while they last). The range of their fashion styling and fabric pattern and texture is wide, affording "something-for-everyone" in nearly every store of The New Bonds. You'll find youthful European models, distinguished Traditional models and strong Contemporary models in both vested and unvested selections.

This Week Only—Nov. 23-30. The Best Time To Buy.

Wallace would help N.Y. avoid default, if president

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace said Saturday night that he would not rule out federal assistance to prevent financial default in New York City if he were president.

Wallace, in Wilmington to address the North Carolina Jaycees, said that "the politic thing to say is 'let them go,' but the responsible thing is to take into account the consequences of a default in the financial capital of the world."

Speaking to reporters with a cigar clenched between his teeth, Wallace said he felt any aid to New York City should be subject to the city government doing all it can to get its house in order.

"They're just going to have to do the best they can before folks in other states help them. They've got to get back to the work ethic."

Wallace said he was not prepared to discuss details of how and when aid should be tendered to the city.

He said his trip to Western Europe had convinced him that a default would have worldwide financial implications as well as affecting bond sales in the United States. "I have mixed feelings about it (default), but it would not be good to see them default."

Late Show ban OK with Reagan

one million votes, incumbent Democrat Edmund G. "Pat" Brown somehow obtained a print of "Bedtime for Bonzo," in which Reagan costarred with a chimpanzee.

Brown delighted in showing the film—which Reagan concedes was not one of his best—to news reporters traveling with his campaign.

In recent years, Reagan has grown more tolerant of jokes about his acting days. But early in his California political career, Reagan bristled at suggestions that he had been a second-rate actor, and at jokes that he never got the girl in his movies.

Reagan did play the second lead in a number of films, including "Santa Fe Trail" and "Desperate Journey" with Errol Flynn, "Dark Victory" with Humphrey Bogart, and "Submarine D-1" with Pat O'Brien.

And Reagan also starred in some films that he concedes were second rate and worse.

"THE studio didn't want them good. It wanted them Thursday," he now says of those old "B" lot, or second feature films.

But Reagan, now 64, also made several films in which he won acclaim from critics as a major star and serious actor.

In 1940, in one of his best known roles, Reagan played Notre Dame football star George Gipp in "Knute Rockne—All American." It was that film that helped immortalize the line Rockne delivers to the team in its final game to go out and "win one for the Gipper."

Two years later, in what was generally regarded as his best motion picture, "King's Row," Reagan played Drake McHugh, a small town playboy whose legs are amputated by a surgeon who is angered by Reagan's romance with his daughter.

In the most dramatic scene in that film, Reagan awoke after the surgery, looked down at his body and cried, "Where's the rest of me?"

REAGAN later used that line as the title of his 1965 autobiography.

But that drama was a far cry from the contrived sight gags of "Bedtime for Bonzo," an improbable plot in which Reagan plays a college professor who attempts to raise a chimpanzee in his home like a child, or "The Girl From Jones Beach," in which Reagan woos and wins 12 leading ladies.

The equal time rule, which makes it impractical for stations to air any more Reagan films so long as he is a candidate, also applies to reruns of his television show of 1962-1965, "Death Valley Days."

Of more immediate consequence, it also had the effect of canceling Reagan's daily political commentary radio show, "Viewpoint."

Reagan was replaced last week on that show—now broadcast by 320 stations nationwide—by a series of other conservative guest hosts led by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Julie Nixon Eisenhower.

FCC officials say the equal time rule applies to all broadcasts except news shows, and only so long as Reagan is a candidate.

Hannaford sees Ford 'turnaround' on N.Y.

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, said President Ford's "simplistic" denial of aid to New York City has mislead Americans from elsewhere in the nation into an almost unanimous letter-writing response of agreement. But he predicted a turnaround by both the President and the public.

In a talk for the Third Friday Forum at the Edgewater Hyatt House Hannaford said it is the denial which will be costly in an "upward pressure on interest rates imperiling our fragile economic recovery"; in a deleterious effect on bond markets already being felt and in direct costs of funding essential services for New York City, estimated to be $2.5 billion the first year.

Hannaford said legislation out of his Banking and Currency Committee would "exact the necessary kind of management" from New York and "would not cost anything."

He said the people will come to understand this position and even the President is "slowly turning around" on the issue. However, Ford was adamantly against the loan guarantee bill last week. Hannaford called the bill "tough, tight and economical" and expressed hope it could be revived before Dec. 12, which New York Gov. Hugh Carey has set as the deadline for refinancing the city's debts backed up by federal loan guarantees.

Gun controls rise worldwide — doubts told

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press

The day came this past July for the people of Italy to register their pistols and rifles and turn in any "arms of war" listed in the country's new gun control law. The police were not ready for what they saw.

Reported for the first time were 153,839 handguns, 171,097 rifles and shotguns, and 154,821 sabers, daggers, bayonets and scimitars.

Handed to authorities were 12,487 machine guns, submachine guns, and army shotguns and pistols, along with 232,129 cartridges, 18 cannons, mortars and grenade launchers, and about 500 pounds of explosives.

The new law, directed at growing political violence and armed robberies that had jumped 27.6 per cent in a year, also banned the carrying in public of clubs, sticks, bars, chains, slings, bolts and "any other object that in view of the circumstances of time and place can clearly be used to harm people."

Italy had joined the growing club of nations that control guns. From Brazil to France to the Soviet Union, the trend is toward more restrictions on who can own firearms and how and when they can be used. Some governements say that restrictions reduce crime.

Even in the United States, one of the last nations with largely unrestricted gun ownership, control legislation is being examined seriously in congressional committees despite a strong progun lobby.

BELGIUM ALSO HAS a strong gun lobby, which is credited with blocking government efforts since 1970 to strengthen a 1933 gun control law.

Several bills to restrict gun sales in Brazil are moving through the legislative process, including one by legislator Edgar Martins to require a "psychotechnical" exam for a permit to carry a gun.

"Every day there are more armed criminals, and the guns used by those enemies of society generally come from those who get them without emotional and technical qualifications," Martins said.

In France, where nearly half of all homicides last year involved guns, officials are less concerned about legal gun sales than they are about gun thefts and smugglings.

"The sales of arms are not the main problem for us to curb crime," an interior ministry official said. "Arms are used either by gangsters and other underworld people who smuggle them from neighboring countries, or by ordinary citizens who use their hunting guns in crimes of passion. To forbid the manufacture and sale of arms to prevent crime would be as absurd as forbidding the making and selling of cars to prevent road accidents."

Government press reports in Russia, where handguns are rare but hunting guns can be bought with approval, indicate Soviet concern.

"Something is wrong if a person can buy a hunting gun and not register it," the government newspaper Izvestia said in a February article. "In the last 18 months, 7,000 unregistered hunting guns have been discovered in the (White Russian) Republic."

GUN CONTROL PROPOSALS before the U.S. Congress would set stringent registration procedures but allow ownership for most law-abiding, mentally competent adults. The laws of many nations, however, seek to limit ownership to certain classes of people or ban it altogether.

In Sweden, for instance, permission to buy and carry weapons is granted only to those who can prove they are members of the Swedish Sportsmen's Association, shooting and rifle clubs, or the Swedish Central Federation for Voluntary Military Training.

Sweden's law was amended last year to lengthen prison terms for violators and add new qualifications for hunters. That may help explain a slight downturn in the number of crimes involving guns.

Singapore's law is more exacting. "Private citizens are totally discouraged from owning guns," an official said. "Penalties are severe and it is very difficult to buy or sell guns."

The situation is similar in South Korea, where even legitimate owners of guns must leave them in police custody when they are not being used for hunting. "South Korea has a very strict gun control law and it is unthinkable for ordinary Koreans or subversive domestic elements to acquire guns," a police spokesman said.

It is difficult to measure the effectiveness of gun control laws in reducing crime, because many governments either don't compile statistics on gun-related crimes or refuse to reveal them. But there are indications that the laws are working in some countries.

"I think our gun control system is very effective," a government official in Hong Kong said. "There have been only three homicides attributed to guns this year and only one in 1974."

IN WEST GERMANY, the federal crime agency says it is difficult to statistically trace the effects of a 1973 gun control law. But the number of crimes in which guns were fired dropped from 10,487 in that year to 8,081 in 1974.

Singapore police won't release homicide figures, but a police source said "armed robberies have declined sharply since the imposition of the death sentence on accomplices who do not even possess a gun."

The clamp of martial law on the Philippines in 1972, under which more than 600,000 guns were seized and others licensed, is credited with a marked reduction in crimes committed with weapons there.

"Before martial law, roughly 80 per cent of the crimes countrywide were committed with the use of firearms," Col. Reynaldo San Gabriel of the Philippine Constabulary said. "After the imposition of martial law, the figure went to 25 per cent."

Similarly, there has been an 80 per cent drop in armed robberies in Uruguay since April 1972, when the military began controlling the circulation and use of weapons, primarily for political reasons.

In other nations, however, where guns have not been a problem or where war and political unrest are frequent, there is little current effort at gun control.

Open Watergate files, says Abzug

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., has requested that files and records of the Watergate special prosecutor's office be made public under the Freedom of Information Act.

Rep. Abzug, chairwoman of a House Government Operations subcommittee on government information and individual rights, made the request in a letter to Special Prosecutor Charles F. Ruff.

She also urged that any portions of the files which remain confidential should be given to the National Archives.

In a statement, Rep. Abzug said the special prosecutor's recently issued report fails to disclose additional information about matters including the ITT dealings, the 18½-minute White House tape gap and investigations into C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

"Much of the information held by the special prosecutor can and should be made public without violating the spirit or letter of the laws dealing with freedom of information and privacy," she said. "The people need the facts."

Most states are keeping out of the red

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press

Despite hard times, fiscal safeguards enacted years ago are working well enough to keep most of America's state governments well ahead of their debt obligations.

A few states in the Northeast have encountered severe financial problems as the recession has cut down on tax revenues while contributing to the number of people eligible for welfare, unemployment benefits and other costly state services.

But an Associated Press survey shows that in most of the country a conservative pay-as-you-go approach to government spending has prevented financial discomforts from becoming the sort of financial crises that have beset New York's city and state governments.

Pay-as-you-go is a tenet of the constitutions of 35 states; they require the governors and legislatures to cut spending rather than incur deficits to pay for operating expenses.

All states allow borrowing by means of bond sales for long-term capital projects such as highways and buildings. The majority, however, have erected barriers that effectively prevent their governments from getting too far into debt.

North Carolina is an example of a state that feels its traditional policy of fiscal conservatism is paying off. Despite having one of the lowest per capita incomes in the nation, it has a credit rating of AAA, the highest granted by the Wall Street rating firms.

North Carolina has indeed felt the recession's impact. Layoffs in the textile and furniture industries have pushed unemployment above 10 per cent for most of the year. And, like most other states, North Carolina depends heavily on sales and income taxes. When people are out of work, they buy and earn less. State revenues go down.

So the state legislature faced a novel problem this year. For 10 years, inflation had made budgeting a matter of how to spend surplus money, the result of revenues that had increased faster than operating costs. This year, however, costs outpaced income, and the legislature was forced by the constitution to forego some programs. A cost-of-living pay raise for teachers and state employes was postponed indefinitely. Other services could be cut if revenues do not improve. A freeze on hiring is now under discussion, along with a delay on capital improvement projects.

Despite the crunch, the state was judged healthy by bond investors when it sold some previously approved water pollution bonds in June. It paid an interest rate of 3.6 per cent, well below the prevailing market rate for municipals, now averaging almost 5 per cent but going as high as 11 per cent for New York State's short-term notes.

North Carolina, where the voters must approve any bond issue, has built up a state debt of $458 million. Debt service requires only 2 per cent of the state's revenue each year.

The percentage of revenue required to service existing debt is a key indicator of a state's health for bond analysts, who look askance at a state which must devote more than 10 per cent of its revenues to retiring bonds.

Across the country, state debt loads vary. All bonds floated by Texas, for example, are self-liquidating, paid off automatically from designated revenues, such as university dormitory rents. California devotes 2.1 per cent of its revenues to debt. Pennsylvania pays about 4.4 per cent. Massachusetts is about 8 per cent. At the other end of the spectrum, Vermont and Connecticut each pay 15 per cent. New York pays about 12 per cent, including the debt service of independent state agencies.

Many states with favorable debt loads have been blessed by factors unrelated to their fiscal conservatism. In largely rural states like Arizona, Tennessee, South Dakota and to a lesser extent North Carolina, agriculture provides a healthy economic base. The major cities are newer and smaller than in the Northeast industrial belt. They have not been surrounded by suburban communities that debilitate the tax base of the central city and force it to depend on state government for financial aid.

In North Carolina, the major cities have suburban areas within the cities' limits, so these areas contribute to city revenue.

Such healthy states usually do not have the welfare loads of a state like Massachusetts. Arizona's total welfare cost, for example, comes to less than $50 a year for each person in the state, while in Massachusetts the per capita figure is nearly $200 and in New York over $200.

North Carolina's crusty treasurer, Edwin Gill, put it this way: "North Carolina is not a wealthy state like New York. We have had to be financially conservative and responsible to insure that we'd be able to do anything for our people."

Gill, 76, was a legislator in 1929 when the Great Depression pushed many state and local governments to the brink of bankruptcy. North Carolina survived, despite the fact that the 1930s were a time of deflation, when debts grew relatively larger. In inflationary times, they grow relatively smaller.

Gill emerged from that experience committed for life to a philosophy he calls prudent. "You don't obligate yourself to more debt than you can expect to be able to pay," he says.

Of course, the fiscally conservative states do not enjoy the pinch that is requiring most of them now to cut spending to match revenues.

From 1967 to 1974, North Carolina's payroll grew by 24 per cent to pay for more teachers, mental hospital attendants and police.

During that period, state and local government employment across the nation rose 28 per cent, according to a study by the Joint Congressional Economic Committee. In the same period, federal employment rose 6 per cent and private employ-

Meeting set in bid to end school strike

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Negotiators planned a meeting today to try to end the two-week-long teachers' strike in time to open schools Monday.

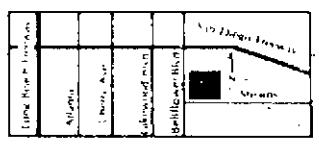

Ninety teachers remained in jail where they were ordered to stay until the strike was over.

Schools were open for the city's 20,000 pupils during most of the strike. But school officials ordered schools closed Thursday and Friday in an effort to break an impasse.

Most states keep out of red

ment 14 per cent.

In the past year, however, the revenue surpluses that fueled the expansion have diminished. In total, the congressional committee found, they shrank from $6.5 billion to $3.9 billion. In the 20 states with the highest unemployment rates, they dropped to practically nothing — a total of $800 million.

In Illinois, for example, Gov. Daniel Walker had to cut $330 million from his budget for the current fiscal year to avoid a deficit. The state's revenues are stretched so tightly that it has developed a cash flow problem and has been forced to postpone payment of some bills until the revenues have become available.

Massachusetts has a $400 million deficit in this fiscal year, 14 per cent of the budget, and Gov. Michael Dukakis has asked the legislature to increase taxes and cut spending, mostly for social services and higher education, to eliminate the deficit.

In the last fiscal year, only Massachusetts and Connecticut actually closed the books in July with deficits: $70 million in Connecticut and $450 million in Massachusetts. The other states, despite declining revenues and rising costs, managed to balance their budgets. And a few, like Texas, had big surpluses because of the tax revenues from booming energy and agricultural industries. The Texas surplus was nearly $1 billion. School aid was increased $700 million.

But even Texas feels the pinch when it tries to sell bonds. Since they are tax free, state bonds have always sold for low interest rates. Ten years ago, the average rate was 3 per cent, nearly two percentage points below the current average.

John K. Pfeiffer, vice president in charge of bond rating for Standard and Poor's of New York, says he's received visits from 10 state governors in recent months. Each tried to persuade him that his state deserved a high credit rating, despite the New York City crisis.

The rising interest rates have helped to trap several Northeastern states in a cycle of debt they are now struggling to break. These states have been the hardest hit because of high unemployment. They import much of their food and energy. Most have decaying inner cities that place severe demands on state governments.

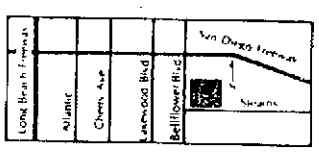

In addition, the Northeastern states are those which have the lowest debt barriers built into their statutes and state constitutions.

Officials in Northeastern states are incensed that their budgets bear the burden of welfare recipients who often come from places like North Carolina, where payments are lower.

L.B. outcry spurs FEA oil price review

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a result of Long Beach protests, Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb has agreed to review his rejection of a request for price increases on California crude oil, an FEA spokesman said Saturday.

The review will be made at a meeting Dec. 4 with members of the California congressional delegation.

The spokesman said the request had been rejected on grounds that granting an increase would amount to special treatment for the state.

He said that after analyzing evidence on the request by the California State Lands Commission, Zarb decided "there was no substantive argument for making the change" affecting controlled prices for so-called old oil in California.

However, Rep. Mark W. Hannaford, D-Long Beach, charged that the decision was "a shocking betrayal of California taxpayers which will cost the state of California $200 million in lost revenues annually."

Hannaford, whose district includes oil wells on state-owned tidelands, asserted that unless the price increases are granted "it will be no longer economically feasible to continue production at many wells."

He said the FEA decision "will hamper the efforts of California independent oil producers to compete with the major oil companies who have their own wells."

The Lands Commission had asked the FEA for price hikes which would narrow the current differential between California old oil, averaging $4.21 a barrel, and the national average price of $5.25 a barrel.

The designation "old oil" applies to oil from wells drilled before 1973, up to the amount produced by those same wells during corresponding months in 1972. Other domestic oil is now free from federal controls.

California oil prices have been lower than the nationwide average because the oil is heavier and had been more costly to refine than other oils. However, state officials contend that new techniques have been developed to make refining California oil less costly.

The FEA spokesman said Zarb had decided that "an upward adjustment of the differential cannot now be justified."

"Although the FEA fully recognizes the necessity for new price incentives to maintain old oil production at or above current levels, it finds no reason to believe that greater incentives are needed in California than in the rest of the nation," he said.

The spokesman said there was no "particular inequity" affecting California oil and "no evidence to believe that production costs have increased there more rapidly than elsewhere in the United States."

Buttocks stuck, jury swayed, bus line pays

OAKLAND (AP) — A jury has awarded $4,300 to a woman bus passenger who claimed her posterior became stuck in the restroom window when the bus swerved.

An Oakland-Piedmont Municipal Court jury made the award Friday to Eula Wright, 47, of Berkeley after a psychiatrist claimed she suffered emotional distress.

Ms. Wright told the court the incident occurred when she was returning by Greyhound bus May 3, 1974 after visiting her son at Fort Ord military base near Monterey.

While she was inside the bus restroom and fully clothed, she said, the bus swerved causing her buttocks to pop out the emergency window and become lodged outside.

The plaintiff said she freed herself after several minutes.

Judge Klein tells NOW courts discriminate against women

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Joan Dempsey Klein criticized her profession Saturday for prolonging what she called sexually discriminatory laws.

"Since the beginnings of this nation, judges, 99 per cent of whom are males, have utilized generalizations and stereotyping about men and women in their reasoning to prolong the existence of blatantly sexually discriminatory laws," Mrs. Klein told delegates to the fourth annual convention of the California branch of the National Organization for Women (NOW) in Los Angeles. The feminist group is holding two days of meetings.

"Such generalities as all women are weak, fragile, emotionally unstable, shy and retiring, passive, unable to handle money matters nor make decisions, dependent, and akin to children in their need for care, play an all-too-frequent and large part in the collective American male thinking process," the jurist said.

Mrs. Klein urged delegates to work for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, which has been ratified by 34 of the required 38 states.

"Whether ratification becomes a reality by 1979 will depend on the pressures exerted upon legislators in those state where the issue is pending," she said.

Mrs. Klein called opponents of the proposed 27th Amendment "well-financed, aggressive and articulate, if oftentimes misinformed factually."

Mrs. Klein said passage of the ERA was needed to correct discrimination in all areas of the law.

"It is not only in employment that sexually discriminatory laws abound," she said. "An examination of laws relating to credit, housing, education, sports, the military, marital and criminal legislation, etc., disclose the same faulty logic being used to justify different treatment of the sexes."

Delegates will elect officers for the coming year and adopt resolutions today.

Court ruling called threat to state's timber supply

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California may run short of timber if a federal court ruling banning the clear-cutting of trees in national forests is extended to the state, says a federal forestry official.

Ted Koskella, the U.S. Forest Service official in charge of resources in California, said in an interview that the ruling could cut timber production from national forests in the state by as much as 60 per cent.

"We'd have to completely rethink our timber management plans," Koskella said.

One timber industry official said the ruling could prompt companies to strip private lands of their trees to make up for the loss of wood from national forests.

THE RULING in August stemmed from a suit brought in West Virginia by several conservation groups. It is not being applied in Western states, but it could be if a similar suit is brought and upheld.

A federal appeals court ruled that both clear-cutting and thinning in the Monongahela National Forest in West Virginia violated the 1897 federal law which established the national forest system.

Clear-cutting is removing all trees in an area. Thinning means cutting selected trees, including young ones, in crowded areas. Both are common logging practices.

The court said clear-cutting violated a rule that national forest trees must be marked before being cut for sale, and thinning violated other restrictions.

THE SIERRA Club, one of the groups that brought the suit, said in its newsletter that the ruling meant "the Forest Service will have to give up tree farming and go back to practicing forestry."

Officials say national forests hold about half California's commercial timber and yield about two-fifths of its lumber.

George Craig of the Western Timber Association, a group of companies that buy timber from national forests, says those forests yield 2 billion board-feet of lumber a year in the state.

Harris: Ford on defense

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Pollster Louis Harris said Saturday it appeared President Ford was running scared because of Ronald Reagan's entry into the 1976 Republican presidential nomination race.

"The acrid smell of fear seems to come out of Mr. Ford in terms of Ronald Reagan," said Harris, who shared a panel discussion on the coming campaign with National GOP Chairman Mary Louise Smith at the conclusion of the National Republican Governors Association winter conference.

Mrs. Smith cautioned against divisiveness within the party which could jeopardize the GOP's chances of retaining the White House next year.

"The defensive posture of Ford politics has done more to make this a much closer contest than it probably normally would be," Harris said, noting it was unusual for an incumbent president to face a serious challenge within his own party.

HE SAID the Ford reaction to the Reagan campaign was building public support for Reagan by making him look stronger than he might be.

"It is my judgment that Ronald Reagan has been helped more in his challenge to President Ford by President Ford's attitude toward Ronald Reagan than by anything Ronald Reagan has done."

Louie Nunn, former Kentucky governor now serving as one of Reagan's strategists, said supporters of Ford had coerced nine of the 12 governors attending the conference to sign a letter backing Ford's bid.

He said the Ford strategists had raised the spectrum of pet programs such as federal revenue sharing going down the drain if Ford isn't elected next year.

Howard "Bo" Callaway, Ford's campaign director, denied this allegation, saying most of the governors supported Ford before they came here.

CALLAWAY agreed that Reagan presented a strong challenge for Ford, but said the President "has the respect of the American people" and will end Reagan's bid early by beating him in the first three primaries next year.

The letter signed by the nine of the 13 GOP governors — one wasn't here and three abstained from signing — was finalized Saturday for sending to Ford.

Govs. Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia, James B. Edwards of South Carolina and Meldrim Thomson Jr. of New Hampshire didn't sign, and Gov. James A. Rhodes of Ohio didn't attend.

Moore assumed chairmanship of the GOP governors group Saturday and said in that leadership position he didn't feel it proper to sign the letter, although he has stated his support for Ford. Edwards and Thomson are Reagan supporters.

Categorical grants rapped by governors

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The National Republican Governors' Association adopted only one resolution before concluding its winter conference on Saturday, calling for elimination of categorical federal grants and substituting block grants for them.

CIA bid to woo minorities hit

New York Times Service

SAN DIEGO — The CIA's renewed efforts to recruit blacks and other minority students at large universities has led to protest rallies and picket lines on three campuses of the University of California.

Faculty members joined student demonstrators this past week in San Diego, Los Angeles and Berkeley, demanding not only expulsion of on-campus agency recruiters but also "full disclosure and immediate cancellation of all other associations" with the agency.

The intensified recruiting of minority students for foreign intelligence work, ordered by William E. Colby, the outgoing director of the CIA, because of "a need for CIA's staff to reflect the diversity of American society," centered on the three campuses, where the agency has encountered sharp hostility in the past.

The agency has not changed its recruiting techniques, a spokesman said in Washington.

"We have about a dozen regional recruiting offices, as before, across the country," he said. We place ads in colleges newspapers, we work through college placement agencies, and we have a fair number of walk-ins, the same as it has been since the inception of the agency."

The spokesman said applications were "way up."

The most forceful anti-CIA action came on the San Diego campus Tuesday when the faculty senate, with support from the Black Studies Third College and the Center for Chicano Studies, mailed out ballots to its 700 members for a referendum on severing all ties with the agency, including any funded activities as well as recruiting.

University officials denied the existence of any agency-financed projects on the campuses.

A straw vote taken at an earlier faculty meeting showed four out of six of those attending opposed to what speakers denounced as "this shocking invasion of the campus by an agency of proven involvement in political assassination and other insidious actions."

At Berkeley, 300 students and faculty attended two rallies in Sproul Plaza, organized by a coalition of student organizations, that passed resolutions condemning the presence of the agency recruiters on campus and demanding repudiation of all connections with agency programs.

A picket line was set up around the campus placement office where minority students were being interviewed for agency positions.

Speakers at the Berkeley rallies included State Assemblyman Kenneth Meade, several professors and leaders of the Associated Students Council, the Education Liberation Front, the Spartacus Youth League and the Peace and Freedom Party.

Two rallies were held on the Los Angeles campus where 100 students picketed the Federal Volunteers Service Office set up at the UCLA Graduate School of Management for agency job interviews.

Winston Doby of the vice chancellor's office defended the agency recruiting before one of the meetings.

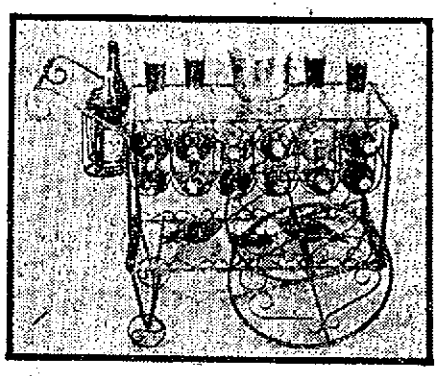

"We have to recognize the CIA is a legitimate agency governed by the same employment rules as any other government agency," he said.

The campus protests erupted following the disclosure that administrative representatives from the San Diego, Berkeley and Los Angeles campuses had attended a conference on Oct. 23 and 24 at the CIA's headquarters in Langley, Va., in response to an Aug. 23 letter from Colby to the University of California's president, Dr. David Saxon.

Commission rules may shift

Members of the Long Beach City Council serving on city advisory committees and commissions, except the Recreation Commission, would not have a vote on items before such bodies under an ordinance that has been ordered prepared.

At present, council members serve as members of the Park, Human Relations and Recreation commissions. Council representation on the Recreation Commission is specified in the City Charter, and the others by ordinance.

The council's Rules and Procedures Committee recommended an ordinance to provide that council members not have a vote on the advisory bodies because, it said, such power by elected officials might "intimidate" some committee actions.

Mayor Thomas J. Clark said council members serving on such citizen committees "tend to have very strong weight" on issues and suggested it might be advisable to eliminate council membership.

Councilman Don Phillips asked how the Rules and Procedures Committee saw the role of council members on the advisory bodies, and Mayor Clark said he felt it should be one of liaison only.

Under the proposed ordinance, which the city attorney's office was asked to prepare, council members would have the right to participate in discussion of any issue but not to make a motion or vote, the mayor said.

Holiday road show

Members of Poly High School's Caprice Welfare Club put finishing touches Saturday (a bit early for most folks) on Long Beach Public Transportation Company's Holiday Special bus. More than 30 members of the group turned out for the day-long bus-painting event on Pine Avenue at Fourth Street, and passersby stopped to watch as the white bus gained a holiday glow in red, green and assorted colors. Welfare Chairman Phyllis Bailey said club members volunteered to paint the bus after learning that the school's art students had done similar projects in past years. "The artistic members are sketching and the rest of us are painting," said one member. "We're all having a great time." The bus is to be used on regular routes during Christmas season, according to company officials. Ms. Bailey said it will be easy for other students to tell the bus was painted by Caprice Club members—the mouse at the front of the vehicle is the club's mascot.

State university seeking funds as enrollment surges

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

State university officials will ask for $2,195,000 in additional funds this week to offset a surprise enrollment surge that has unbalanced college budgets.

Although they think they'll get the money, planners at the 19 state colleges are weighing unpleasant alternatives they'll have to resort to this spring if the State Finance Department turns them down.

Those alternatives include placing lids on new enrollment—at entire colleges or in "impacted" programs—and laying off some part-time faculty. Larger class sizes are also possibile.

Some college officials believe that if enrollment continues sharply upward, instead of leveling off or growing slowly as they had expected, economy-minded state officials may push harder for imposing tuition.

The enrollment increase, a nationwide phenomenon that appears to be caused primarily by unemployment, has already forced colleges in other states to severely limit enrollments.

The State University of New York has decided to hold enrollment at present levels for the next five years at 20 of its campuses. Michigan State University is moving to decrease its student body.

When California enrollment records were tallied this fall, the state university system had three per cent more students than its budget provided for. The increase at Long Beach State University was 3.7 per cent (for a total of almost 33,000 students). Dominguez Hills had 5.1 per cent more than expected.

Each state college has reacted in a different way to this fall's surge of students. But each has had to make contingency plans to cut back services next spring to make up for the overload this fall.

Fullerton State University announced a collegewide enrollment ceiling.

At Long Beach State University, college officials said enrollment lids would probably have to be placed on even more "impacted" departments than this semester and some part-time faculty would probably be laid off.

"We hope the money comes through from the state," said LBSU vice president David Gray. "Otherwise we'll have to take some action in the spring. We can't operate this far out of balance."

University system officials will ask their Board of Trustees to request additional money from the State Finance Department Monday. "We're optimistic about getting it," one official said. (LBSU would get from $200,000 to $300,000).

The proposal for more funds states that the enrollment jump "has placed critical demands on faculty and support resources necessary to accommodate the over-enrollments."

Hearings slated on condemnation, housing project

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Public hearings on two significant Long Beach permit applications — one for demolition of a downtown building, the other for a proposed housing project in Naples — will be held Monday by the South Coast Regional Commission.

They will be among about 70 applications to be considered during the all-day session, starting at 9 a.m., in the council chambers at Huntington Beach City Hall.

THE CITY of Long Beach is seeking approval to demolish the 11-story Omar Hubbard Building, 310 W. Broadway, on the site of the proposed Long Beach Art Musuem in the Civic Center superblock.

Its 118 units have been vacated to make way for the proposed demolition. The building once afforded a magnificent view of the ocean and was one of the first own-your-own apartment complexes on the West Coast.

New construction has virtually obliterated the view, however, and — according to the commission's staff report — it would cost $2 million to bring the deteriorated building up to code.

COASTAL commission staff planners are recommending approval of the project, with one condition, that before the permit is issued, the city "submit proof that demolition will not result in making few or fixed-income housing more difficult to obtain (specifically housing of comparable quality and cost)."

The Naples housing project, proposed by Read & Faubus Development Co. of Costa Mesa, would allow for construction of five two-story duplexes, each 25:5 feet in height, with attached covered parking for 20 cars.

The plot, at 5934-5952 Naples Plaza, is zoned strip C-1 with R-1 zoning on surrounding streets.

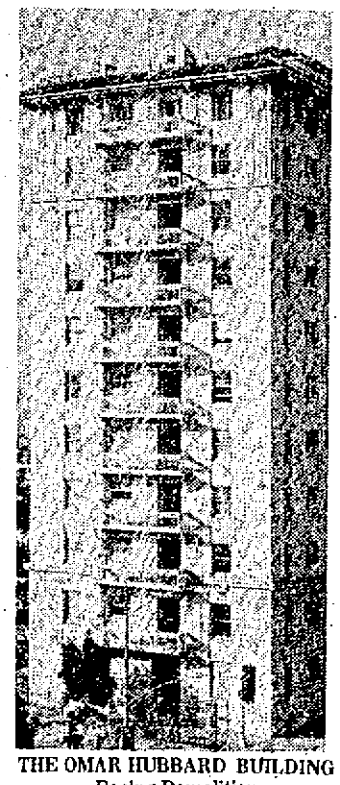

PROPOSED land uses for the parcel have been a controversial issue in the Naples community for more than two years.

An 18-unit condominium project was denied by the regional commissioners in November, 1974. They approved a modified proposal, however, for 15 units with increased on-site open parking. This was appealed to the state commission by area residents.

The regional commission's decision was reversed by a unanimous vote of the state commission, which denied the project on the grounds of excessive height (51 feet), lot coverage (81 per cent) and nonconformity with the character of the neighborhood.

CONTROVERSY again arose when the Long Beach Planning Commission certified an environmental impact report on the current proposal, even though the Naples Improvement Association had asked for a two-week postponement.

Tom Seegar, NIA president, said delay was sought because the association, having received the EIR only five days before the planning commission meeting, did not have time for resident review and an evaluation of the project.

L.B. lawyers find surprise, sentiment on Soviet trip

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Three Long Beach lawyers on a whirlwind trip to Russia found apprehension and surprise, a sentimental reunion, exasperation, beauty and a host of diverse, contradictory impressions.

And, although three lawyers anywhere would have trouble agreeing on anything, these three concurred that Russia offers:

—The appearance of affluence by city dwellers.

—Complete equality for women.

—No litter anywhere and generally few consumer goods.

—Bureaucratic snafus equal to those anywhere in the world.

For one of the three, Deputy Public Defender Elvira Austin, the highlight was a tearful, joyous meeting with the 83-year-old grandfather and aunt she last saw when she fled Kiev in 1943 with her mother and father.

FOR DEPUTY City Prosecutor Ron Brodsky the trip was an eye opener, a surprise.

And for attorney Richard Smith, the experience was both a surprise and a confirmation of previous convictions.

The three were part of a group of 161 Americans on an Aeroflot inaugural flight from Los Angeles to Moscow Nov. 7-15.

On the itinerary were Moscow, Leningrad, Odessa and Kiev—the museums, public buildings, cafes, streets and parks.

IF THE TRIP was an endurance contest because of the time schedule, it was also an exercise in frustration because of the intransigence of Intourist, all agreed.

Says Smith: "It wasn't that we couldn't go anywhere we wanted, but they were insulted if we didn't want to look at the missile display or stand in long lines to visit Lenin's tomb."

Unnerving, too, was the incident when a 9-year-old Russian boy, given a Polaroid picture of himself and his dog, showed it to a policeman and then was roughly dragged away by the officer.

"We were appalled and demanded an explanation from our guide," says Smith. "She said it was because he was a truant and was in the habit of begging gum from tourists."

HOWEVER, explains Brodsky, the member of their group who took the picture said the boy had said nothing to her before she clicked the camera. Later Brodsky's wife, June, saw the youngster released and darting down a side street.

Mrs. Austin's grandfather, she says, is the same shouting, unreconstructed enemy of the state she knew as a child—still damning those who took away his home and art gallery. Otherwise, he is comfortable in an austere apartment, his physical needs provided for in his old age, his days made happier by her gifts of his favorite "Black Doctor" wine.

The aunt, also 83, lives in one room of her 40-room home in Moscow, the rest of the house having been converted by the state to

ELVIRA AUSTIN
A Tearful Reunion

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

THERE'S A certain young lady in Concord, Calif., who thought the recent rummage sale of the Junior League of Long Beach, Inc., was just great. Why not? As a result of the sale she's the best-dressed baby on her block.

Later on, the young lady will call me "Grandfather," but in the meantime I'm just "Goo," a sound that comes trippingly to her tongue at 4 months old. Even though her vocabulary is still in its formative stage she is more articulate than most of the young "method" actors you see on the Merv Griffin and Johnny Carson shows.

Money is no object where Summer Anderson's wardrobe is concerned, which is why my wife, Mike, plunked down a fast $1.50 for two Junior League rummage sale outfits for her. The costumes are a bit large, but Summer will grow into them, for she's a chip off my old block.

We had rummage sales when I was a child, but in those days we called them "Dad." At least that was true in my case. When my father gave up on a suit after 10 or 12 years it became my property. One such legacy was the vested, dark blue pinstripe I wore to Confirmation when I was in the sixth grade.

I stood out among my knicker-clad male classmates, particularly when the suspender button on the oversize trousers popped as I made my way down the aisle to the altar. The pants stood at half-mast when the priest dubbed me "George" and shooed me toward the sacristry where a vigilant nun waited with a safety pin. Her solution was to pin the front of my errant trousers to my four-in-hand tie (also one of my father's hand-me-downs. This bit of inventiveness caused me to walk in a crouch when I rejoined my classmates for the recessional.

I thought I could fade into the crowd, but my squeaky oxfords kept whispering my secret to the congregation. When the shoes weren't squeaking they were flapping and slapping against the marble aisle. My Dad not only had a big heart where his son's apparel was concerned, he also had big feet—and I was wearing his hand-me-down shoes.

That wasn't the end of my difficulties on Confirmation day. The shoes had been tan before they were bequeathed to me, and they had to be black for the ceremony in church. Dye from my shoeshine kit took care of that but couldn't cope with the rain that was pelting down outside the church.

In the eyes of the church I was now a soldier of the Lord. Alas, the dye on my shoes went AWOL, which was not an auspicious beginning for the new soldier.

However, blessings are where you find them. The rain clouds had a silver lining, for the downpour caused my sizes-too-large hand-me-down suit to shrink. Even though I was drenched to the skin, I had a better fit than before.

I didn't know that at the time; the knowledge came after the suit had been draped across a kitchen chair for the night to dry by the pot-bellied coal stove.

If I have any advice for my granddaughter, it's this: Pray for sunshine and never dye your pink booties black. Also, wear your rummage sale dresses in good health and with the same pride I wore my dad's hand-me-down suit on that day so long ago.

Even if Summer Anderson toddles into a rain-shower she should have no worries about her dress shrinking. God looks out for children in second-hand clothing, as I can attest.

NOW, LET'S meet Joe Stevens, 15, and Louis Schwing, 14, members of Lakewood's Troop 134, Boy Scouts of America, and two of the coolest first-aid men in the business.

The youngsters demonstrated their skill last Sunday when their troop was backpacking in San Gabriel Canyon at Little Bear Creek in the Angeles National Forest. The scouts were hiking back to their base camp when 13-year-old Kevin Blakley slipped and fell into a rock-littered creek bed, suffering an arm fracture.

Joe and Louis didn't waste a second. They made Kevin comfortable, checked him for possible shock and quickly applied splints to the fracture. Louis then raced off to summon help.

A ranger Louis met on the trail radioed for a sheriff's helicopter while Louis hurried to the base camp to tell Kevin's father, Scoutmaster Gerald Blakley, and his advance party.

Meanwhile, Kevin had been airlifted to Arcadia Methodist Hospital. Rangers and hospital officials hailed the first-rate doctoring of Joe and Louis, said they couldn't improve on it. Are the Boy Scouts "prepared"? Just ask Kevin Blakley.

A censor in Nebraska

In Nebraska, a county judge imposed severe limitations on what news organizations could publish or broadcast about a man accused of murdering six persons.

Some of those restrictions have been lifted by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun, but others remain, and their presence is disquieting.

JUSTICE BLACKMUN ruled that the trial court could temporarily ban any publicity linking the facts of the crime to the person accused of committing it. This would ban reporting of the fact that the accused man has confessed to the mass murder. It would ban reporting the statements of persons who say the accused man told them about the slayings. It would ban publication of the information that the accused man left a note at the murder scene.

The Nebraska secrecy order is different from the usual court order barring law enforcement officials and parties to a case from providing information about the case. The Nebraska order directly bars newspapers and others from publishing information revealed in open court and also from publishing information about the defendant's criminal record.

The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution bars any abridgement of freedom of the press, but Justice Blackmun suggested that while this amendment would come into play to protect reporting of the trial, it does not apply to news stories before the trial starts.

The justice's intentions are laudable. He wishes, as did the trial court judge, to ensure that so far as possible jurors will not have been subjected to prejudicial publicity. Once a jury has been chosen, Justice Blackmun must reason, it can be sequestered if necessary to protect its members from being influenced by newspaper and television reports on the case.

IT MAY WELL be that in this particular case delaying the publication of information will do the public no harm. But there can be cases in which such a delay would be harmful. It might increase public fears. It might even make it easier for a corrupt judge to dismiss a case.

Newspapers and broadcasters should use discretion in reporting information such as criminal records that might not be admissible as evidence in a trial. Ordinarily, publication of that sort of information can be delayed until the jury verdict is in without depriving the public of information it needs to have. But the First Amendment clearly leaves the responsibility for exercising such discretion with the press and not with the courts.

An order issued by a Supreme Court justice in a case such as this is only temporary. His rulings do not become binding on other judges in similar cases. Justice Blackmun's assent to court-imposed censorship is regrettable, however, and we hope it is a one-time anomaly that neither he nor other judges will repeat.

Reagan will surprise Easterners

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — There's a touch of parochialism in most of us, so California reporters who have covered Ronald Reagan in the past should be excused if they enjoy the discomfiture of eastern seaboard reporters whose political prejudices are about to be strained.

The Easterners know all about Ronald Reagan, you see. Ronald Reagan is an ex-actor, so everything he does is theatrical. He is great on television, O.K. on a rostrum in front of an audience, but no way is he going to get down and mix it with the common folk, right?

Wrong. At least the last part, about mixing it up with the common folk.

EASTERN COLUMNISTS and political reporters will discover their error when they watch Reagan campaign — the same way their western colleagues discovered their own error, first in 1966 and again in 1970.

One incident from Reagan's successful re-election effort in 1970 will illustrate.

The then governor was traveling down the San Joaquin Valley in an incredibly plush converted bus which, reporters were told, had been used to take the stars of the "Lassie" television series to shooting locations.

Reagan was in a private compartment up front. The reporters and campaign staff were forced to endure the back of the bus, where there were large, comfortable seats, tables, a shower, a kitchen, and a bar, well stocked.

What eastern writers will probably learn first about Ronald Reagan is that he digs organization, smooth, punctual, efficient organization. If the travel schedule reads "Arrive Topeka 11:32 a.m.," that is when Ronald Reagan and party will arrive in Topeka.

AND SO IN 1970 as reporters were moved comfortably from one valley town to another, handed advance copies of speeches at appropriate times (and given time to write and file stories), there was little to abuse the still-existing prejudice that Ronald Reagan lived a life insulated from real people.

He was deposited on a stage, cracked a few jokes written for him by Pat Buttram, read a speech, shook a few selected hands, got back on the bus, and went to the next place, where he was deposited on a stage, cracked a few jokes written for him by Pat Buttram, etc.

But now we were approaching Visalia, near Fresno, and there was word that students at the local junior college had scheduled a demonstration at the shopping center where the governor was to speak.

UNRULY STUDENTS made security people nervous, and so various options were considered. Cancel the appearance, move it to another location, ask for uniformed police assistance in advance, try something else. Reagan said forget it. Go where we're supposed to go, be there when we're supposed to be there, and park the bus.

It was just before noon when the bus arrived at the crowded shopping center, and sure enough there were the students, carrying signs and shouting about people on welfare.

Reagan got off the bus, surrounded by his security men, and began walking along the mall toward where he was supposed to give a speech, and the students and their taunts and jeers and shouts and signs followed right along.

Suddenly Reagan heard something that made him mad. He stopped, climbed on a bench, and asked who had said whatever it was that offended him.

A BLACK YOUTH stepped forward, and repeated a charge about people on welfare not having enough to eat and its being Reagan's fault.

Ronald Reagan took the kid on, told him about welfare money being taken by people who really didn't need it, leaving less for those who really did, told him he was weeding the cheats out and recited numbers showing that the truly needy now had more.

He shut the angry black student up, is what Ronald Reagan did, and the startled students whose notions of an aloof, insulated governor had just been shattered wandered silently away while their target went to where he was supposed to go and said what he had been scheduled to say.

It is a scene that had taken place, in various similar forms, in 1966, and which took place at other times in 1970. It is a scene that will occur in 1975 and 1976. Ronald Reagan is devastatingly effective.

TRUE, HE IS theatrical, and he does indulge in fantasy frequently. He thought people really believed him when he said he was not a presidential candidate, when in fact he had been one for years, and he still thinks people believe him when he says he is not a politician when in fact he is one, a superb one, and has been accepted as such for an even longer length of time.

But, those fantasies aside, Ronald Reagan knows the world he lives in, knows the people whose votes he wants, and knows how to give the impression he is of it and for them.

Reagan has undoubtedly hurt himself by waiting so long to declare and thereby losing some support, particularly in California, that he could have had. But he is a tough politician and a tough campaigner, and he will, at least in the beginning, bewilder the Easterners who expected him to be neither of those things.

SEN. CHURCH REPORTS EIGHT PLOTS AGAINST CASTRO'S LIFE BY CIA — NEWS ITEM

Another CIA device

Somewhere in the Senate intelligence committee is a fan of synecdoche, and maybe even of James Thurber.

It was Mr Thurber who first brought synecdoche — pronounced sin-neck-doe-key — to our attention in a small essay on the funny language of prosody.

SYNECDOCHE IS a rhetorical device in which a short word or phrase is substituted for a longer one, or vice versa. On the farm, the classic example is probably the use of "head" for "cattle," as in "He runs 400 head." In the city, the classic example may be the use of "the law" for "a policeman," as in "Watch it, Charlie, here comes the law!"

The Senate committee notes that the rare reverse-twist synecdoche — in which a longer phrase substitutes for a shorter one — appeared in CIA discussions that spoke of "doing something about Castro." That may have been a longwinded synecdoche for "killing Castro."

The original government synecdoche fan may have been within the ranks of the CIA intellectuals, for the word first popped up in its current spy-story context in a report by the CIA's inspector general in 1967. That report, the Senate investigators discovered, grumbled that confusion arose because of "frequent resort to synecdoche — the mention of a part when the whole is to be understood, or vice versa."

"Thus," the report went on, "we encounter repeated references to phrases such as 'disposing of Castro,' which may be read in the narrow, literal sense of assassinating him, when it is intended that it be read in the broader figurative sense of dislodging the Castro regime."

IT IS TOO bad, it seems to us, that the CIA did not apply to its search for synecdoches the imagination of James Thurber, who became absorbed in the subdivision of synecdoche in which a container is substituted for the thing contained. Thurber lay awake nights trying to think of an example of the reverse of this: the thing contained for the container. He finally found one, which as we recall required him to make up a small scene in which someone brandished a milk bottle at a loudmouth. "If you don't shut up," Thurber imagined him saying, "I'll smack you on the head with the milk."

If the CIA really wished to speak enigmatically, it might have resorted to a metonymy similar to the one in which "the White House" substitutes for "the President," as in "The White House has announced plans. . . ." Havana might have been substituted for Castro, as in "Let's light up a Havana."

Senator Soaper

SCIENTISTS WORK to predict earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. The red-headed stenographer says she'd be more interested in predicting her boss' temper tantrums.

SOME CANDIDATES are finding it difficult to raise campaign money, especially since these days they have to spend most of it before the campaign even starts.

WELL, YOUR HONOR, this fellow had a roll big enough to choke a horse, which I consider very inhumane, so I took it away from him before he could choke some innocent horse or even a large dog.

Letters to the editor

Medical malpractice

EDITOR:

One of the proposals now being advanced by various medical groups is to limit physicians' liability for medical malpractice damages to $100,000. Any balance of a jury verdict in excess of that would be paid from a state fund created by taxes on insurance policies or group insurance policies.

Limiting the recovery for the victims of malpractice would imply those victims suffer less pain than the victims of other types of injuries. Not even a medical doctor could convince any patient of that.

If the balance of the jury verdict were paid from a fund created by the contributions of income from doctors who make in excess of $100,000 a year, the plan might have some merit.

Unfortunately, the great majority of the medical profession is being forced into a high premium situation due to the practices of some of the higher risk fields of medicine. Yet it is those same higher risk fields that are producing the higher incomes for the practitioners.

Perhaps the costs of medical malpractice could be reduced by simply requiring the doctor found to have not rendered appropriate care to contribute all fees received in the treatment of this particular patient toward the payment of the malpractice insurance premium. In this way the doctor who practices good medicine for 40 years without a malpractice claim against him will not be penalized for the carelessness of another practitioner.

First freedom

EDITOR:

The lead editorial in the Nov. 14 edition seems to me to be one of the finest you have ever published. Your political opinions, my thoughts and the decisions Justice Douglas helped to make may not have agreed at all times, but we are in perfect accord that protection of freedom of the press is vital to this 200-year-old "experiment in democratic living."

Highest compliments to the writer. In this instance, it does seem a shame that editorials traditionally are not bylined.

Rising values

EDITOR:

Assessor Philip Watson's comforting news about the low Long Beach property tax rate would have been more informative if he had let us in on how it was accomplished.

After taking a jolt a couple of years ago when land values were raised significantly on the assessment rolls, I find that this year, with no changes in our property, assessments were again increased, by 10 per cent on the land and 80 per cent on improvements.

While the assessor has the excuse that he is simply complying with the law, it somehow seems unfair to all of us who have been belabored by inflation in recent years to have the same weapon used on us again to increase our property taxes.

To get some impression of what happened, I spent about an hour at the local assessor's office checking assessments. The many telephone and personal inquiries I heard there convinced me that the shock I received was shared by many of my fellow citizens.

Race to success

EDITOR:

I was sick when I read that the Marine Stadium's racing program had been cut by three dates. It isn't right that a few selfish, loud, wealthy and influential persons can cut Marine Stadium racing down and down until there will be none at all.

As for the Grand Prix, if we lose that, this city is doomed to be an old retirement town. I have a friend who, with her husband, attended the race in September. She was there the whole day and was so excited and happy. She is looking forward to the next race. Incidentally, she is middle-aged and sightless. She couldn't see, but she could hear.

Bedroom TV

EDITOR:

It seems that TV and the movies have run out of things to say. I would not be surprised if our TVs in the bedroom have not found a lasting home there. It seems the words, talent, plot, story and meaning have all given way to the word SEX.

When all this started it was said the movies were becoming more real. I believe the movies are letting the minority teach the majority — but what?

I thought that a movie was made to take you away from real life. It is to put you in world that should be.

Where have all the writers gone, long time passing? To the bedroom?

I would like to express my appreciation for your editorial "Legislators' salaries."

As you clearly point out, we did pass a resolution creating an independent 15-member commission to study our salaries and those of other elected officials, and we expect to have their findings made available to us by March 1. Hopefully, this action will make the process of setting salaries of legislators more acceptable to the public in the future.

Accurate columns

EDITOR:

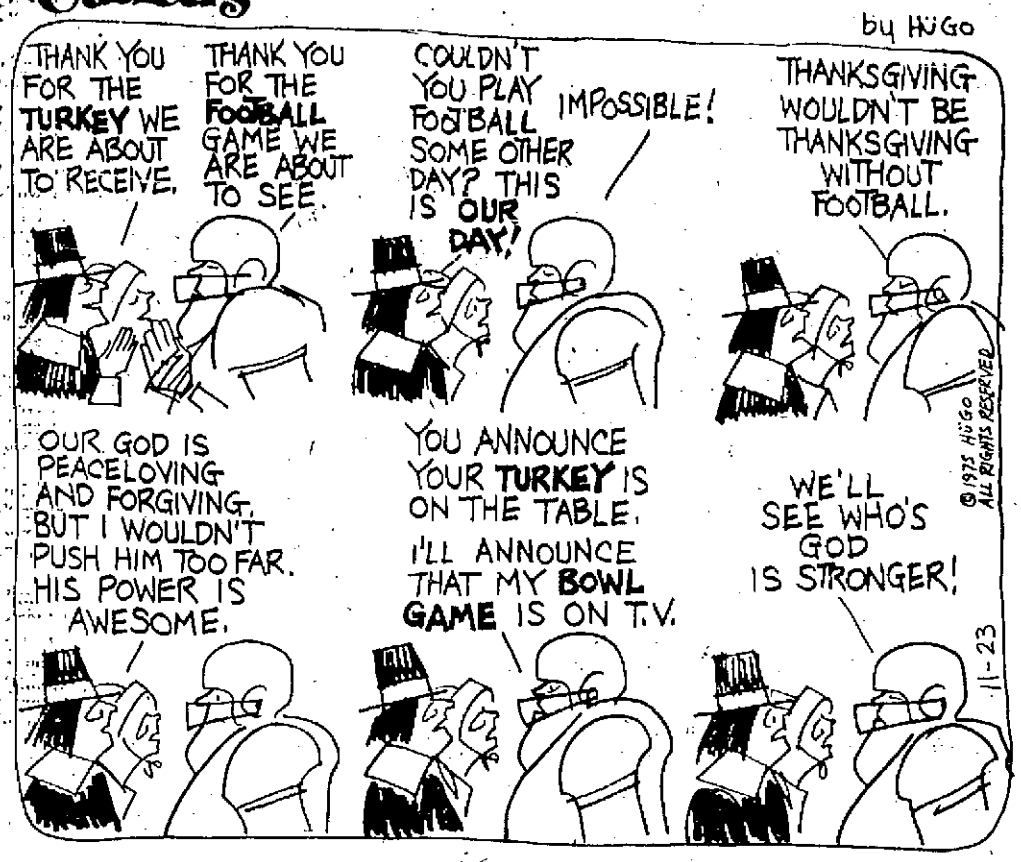

Your No. 1 reporter, in my estimation and many of my friends, George Robeson, would not write the article on cremation were he not quite sure of the facts.

I've checked out numerous items of interest listed in his column and in not one was I left in doubt.

Why not run reprints of his articles when he's ill or on vacation? Opening the editorial page and not seeing his column is like dinner without dessert.

A wing — and a prayer

NEW YORK — President Ford came home with the turkey and put it in the East Room. "I've got the turkey" he told everybody, and his voice swelled with pride, for he had been fiscally responsible in negotiating the purchase and, though it weighed 537 pounds, it had cost him only $2.637 billion cash, which was nothing in Washington money terms.

Leading everyone to the East Room to see his prize, he cracked the door, stuck his head in and was struck a resounding feather blow in the nose. He withdrew and slammed the door.

ALARMED, Ron Nessen mounted a chair and peered through the transom. "That's the weirdest turkey I've ever seen," Nessen exclaimed. "It doesn't go 'gobble, gobble, gobble,' like turkeys are supposed to. It goes 'flap, flap, flap.'"

Henry Kissinger mounted the chair to see for himself, gazed a long time, then stepped down and addressed the President. "Who sold you this turkey?" Kissinger asked.

"It's a secret," said the President, grinning.

"You know, of course," said Kissinger, "that this is a highly unorthodox turkey." "I know," grinned the President. "It weighs 537 pounds."

"It has only one wing," said Kissinger.

THE PRESIDENT smiled.

"Nothing but one wing," said Kissinger.

The President nodded.

"No drumsticks. No thighs. No breasts. No back. No neck. Just one wing."

"And you'll notice," said the President, "that the one wing is the right wing. It's got no left wing, this turkey."

Dr. Arthur Burns, the wizard of currency, beamed delightedly through his pipe. "In that case, it will never be able to commit fiscal irresponsibility," he said.

Betty Ford said she was sure this was in its favor, but how was she going to roast a 537-pound wing, and even after she did, who was going to eat it?

"Eat it!" exclaimed Bo Callaway, the President's wizard of politics. "Nobody's going to eat this wing. We're going to fly it to victory next November!"

AT THESE WORDS, the wing beat so seriously against the door that the White House shook, and Donald Rumsfeld came running to tell the President that Ronald Reagan was on the telephone. "Reagan says somebody stole his turkey and he wants it back right away," said Rumsfeld.

"That's nonsense," said the President. "I paid cash to a reputable salesman of turkeys and snake oil, and threw in Nelson Rockefeller to sweeten the deal. The turkey is mine."

At the mention of Nelson Rockefeller, the wing uttered a blood-curdling flap and crashed against the door with such force that the frame buckled.

Everyone recoiled. Secret Service men drew machine guns, and the wing uttered another harrowing flap that sent the door crashing down. In an instant, an enraged mass of feathers was struggling to burst through the door.

AS THE Secret Service men took aim, the President threw himself between their guns and the turkey. "You can't shoot that wing," he cried. "Barry Goldwater is in there!"

With a horrendous sighing and flapping of feathers, the enraged wing burst free and began pursuing everyone through the White House.

"To the bomb shelter!" cried the President. "No wing on earth can break through those walls."

Everyone fled for dear life, escaping into the bomb shelter and sealing the hatch in the nick of time. Everyone, that is, but Senators Hugh Scott and Jacob Javits, who were plucked up in a wing joint and carried to the kitchen to be chopped into the giblet gravy, which the wing was preparing for the great Thanksgiving feast it contemplated in Kansas City the following summer when it would serve the Republican party, roasted, stuffed and garnished with California's delectable Reaganberry Sauce.

President Ford and his friends sat safely locked in the bomb shelter listening to the wing whistling happily in the kitchen above. "I'll go up and try to pacify it," said the President. And he did. He was never seen again. Someone who resembled him appears in the kitchen now and then holding a giblet chopper, but he had feathers instead of whiskers and hair.

The atmosphere at the top

NEW YORK — The outlines were generally known but still it was hard to credit the details disclosed in Washington about the Central Intelligence Agency's plots to assassinate foreign leaders and the Federal Bureau of Investigation's efforts to assassinate the character and career of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King.

In fact, if King was right in believing that the FBI was trying to drive him to suicide — and documentary evidence appears to support that interpretation — then the bureau can be said to have tried to assassinate him physically. Its method was only slightly more devious than the CIA's poisons and its deals with Mafia killers.

CAN THESE things actually have been done in the name of the American people, by their authorized security agencies, through the consent or indifference of their elected political leaders? The answer is "yes," and that fact has to be faced in all its implications before anything effective can be done to prevent such obscene actions in the future.

The Senate Intelligence Committee, for example, is going to offer legislation to outlaw assassination plots against foreign leaders. But what good will that do, if nothing else is done? Both CIA and FBI officials have shown themselves repeatedly willing to ignore and break the law. Even the committee's own report tells how a former CIA official, Richard Bissell, waved aside suggestions that planning to kill Patrice Lumumba might be legally a murder plot; and Richard Helms, the former CIA director and still this country's accredited ambassador to Iran, told the committee himself that it had never occurred to him to check on the agency's legal authority for the mail intercepts it used in snooping on American citizens.

But the intelligence committee is centering its recommendations on greatly improved congressional oversight, including a joint House-Senate Oversight Committee. Here again, the intention is good, but if nothing else is done little will be changed in the actual operations of the FBI, the CIA and other security agencies. They have shown time and again their ability to co-opt or to dupe their congressional overseers, not to mention their supposed political masters in the executive branch; and a major reason why they so frequently disclose their great desire for more formal oversight arrangements is that they know such committees as that now being proposed usually become the ardent defenders and proponents of the agencies supposedly being overseen and controlled.

The more important necessity, without which oversight is likely to be futile, is for Congress to rewrite and sharply restrict the missions of the security agencies to clearly defined activities. The open-ended authority the CIA now has to do virtually anything either directed by the National Security Council or not specifically prohibited by it is one root of its troubles. Another probably is the linkage between its intelligence-gathering and analysis function, and its covert operations.

NOT ALL covert operations are bad — for example, the clandestine organization of democratic labor unions in third-world countries where there might otherwise be no such unions — but to vest the power to conduct them in a huge secret agency that also provides the government's basic intelligence estimates give that agency too much power to influence rather than serve foreign policy. And the very scope of the CIA's mission now insures that it can usually find some justification and necessity — not to mention means — for doing almost anything it thinks useful to "national security."

Somewhat similarly, the FBI's sweeping authority to conduct counterespionage operations gave it the opening to engage in domestic political spying; since American Communists or Fascists or dissidents might become foreign agents, they had to be watched and reported on, in the bureau's view. And Congress itself, by requiring such abominations as the "security register" of Americans to be arrested and confined in the event of a war, gave the bureau an even broader mandate to check up on the political views and activities of thousands of citizens.

BUT OVERNIGHT, new laws and more restricted missions still will not "control" the security agencies unless the example is set for them at the top, in Congress and the executive branch. Who stood up to, and demanded accountability from, J. Edgar Hoover in his prime? In fact, when President Johnson and Congress combined to exempt him from mandatory retirement in 1965, they gave him license to pursue his own peculiar version of "national security" — including his war on Martin Luther King, which became known at the time both in the White House and Congress.

As for the CIA, if its efforts to murder Fidel Castro and Patrice Lumumba were not actually ordered by President Kennedy, the agency still drew in no small part its impressions of what was desirable and permissible from the political atmosphere in which it operated. More than any other factor, that atmosphere, in the executive branch and Congress, determines finally whether oversight and the law will prevail or become ciphers.

Avoiding doctrinairism, probably the most complete history of the Bible ever published in English, these three volumes display dazzling erudition. Volume I ranges from the beginnings to Jerome, and is edited by P.E. Ackroyd and C.F. Evans; Volume II, edited by G.W.H. Lampe, take us from the Fathers to the Reformation; Volume III, edited by S.L. America's troubled cities

CLEVELAND, Ohio — The cities of America all have their troubles, but there is probably still more civic pride, more striving by private individuals and institutions to face our problems and correct our faults in the United States than in the cities of any other nation.

Go where you will in the big towns of the United States today and you will find disintegration, racial segregation, economic disruption and political and moral confusion. But you will also find recovery, reconstruction and a tremendous struggle, against formidable odds, by what amounts to a vast army of people of all classes and races, in private and public works, to be faithful to the ideals of the nation.

CLEVELAND IS only one illustration of the point.

James Reston

New York Times News Service

I have spent two weeks here, talking to students at Case Western Reserve University, to the mayor of Cleveland, the superintendent of schools, to politicians of both parties and to the editors and reporters of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Cleveland Press, and the Ohio black press, dominated by W. O. Walker of the Call-Post.

Seeing the life of a city in these terms, you get a better understanding of American democracy. The Western Reserve University was founded in 1826, when John Quincy Adams was President. Thomas Jefferson and John Adams died that year on the same day, appropriately on July 4.

This university is not only educating young undergraduates and administering one of the best medical, dentistry, and nursing professional schools in the world, but it is also dealing with the human and technical problems of its own community here in Cleveland.

IT IS INVITING the old people of the Cleveland community into its classrooms, and it is making the thoughtful minds of its faculty available to help deal with the distracting and troubling problems of this entire northern Ohio area.

Still, Cleveland, like Boston, and many other major cities, is now involved in a major political and legal problem over the racial integration of its public schools, and this is an odd and troubling situation.

In some ways, Cleveland has been more progressive on racial questions in the schools than any other American city. Forty per cent of its school-teaching staff is black, as compared to 5 per cent for Boston. Forty-five per cent of Cleveland's administrative staff is black. Two of the five leaders of the Board of Education here are black.

Yet it is true that 57 per cent of the Cleveland school population is black and because of the "white flight" from the central city to the suburbs there is clearly segregation of the races in the city schools.

ACCORDINGLY, the NAACP has brought the Board of Education into the federal courts this past week, charging "intentional" segregation and calling for "comprehensive reassignment of students" — which of course means substantial and controversial busing.

The local black leaders are very dubious about the wisdom of all this. Even the local NAACP leaders, in contrast with the national NAACP leaders, have their doubts.

And the whole community is wondering whether the racial situation would be better after a court order for busing than it is now.

The other day, Henry Kissinger, the secretary of state, asked, "Why do we insist on tearing ourselves apart?" and this is what many people in the Cleveland community are now asking about the situation here.

LBSU audience told Reagan a 'potential hazard' to President

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

The Illinois Congressman who holds the third-ranking position in House Republican leadership said in Long Beach this weekend that Ronald Reagan is a "potentially hazardous" threat to President Ford's political health.

But Rep. John B. Anderson, who aligns himself with Ford in the growing intraparty struggle between the two candidates, said Reagan would have to do more than "tick off a lot of charges" about what's wrong with the country "if he's going anywhere."

"Reagan's conservatism is not mirrored in the country to the extent that he could win the race for president," Anderson said.

Although he avoided strongly attacking Reagan himself, Anderson denounced the ultraconservative economic philosophy of unnamed Reagan supporters.

Noting that some Republicans have charged that Ford's deficit budget disqualified him from claiming the mantle of fiscal conservatism, Anderson said the nation's recession gave Ford no choice.

"I don't think the future of my party lies with latter-day Neanderthalism in fiscal policy," he said. "Americans want new ideas, not a retreat behind old cliches."

ANDERSON, chairman of the House Republican Conference and second-ranking Republican on the House Rules Committee, made his remarks in a press conference and in a speech to about 75 persons Friday at the Graduate Center of Long Beach State University. His talk was sponsored by the college administration.

He said the Republican Party is in trouble with the nation's voters because of its "elitism."

"The party is becoming more exclusive instead of appealing to a broader spectrum in society," Anderson said. "The GOP must respond to the needs of a new and changing clientele."

It's vital to the party's health that its leaders ask, "What are we doing wrong that millions of Americans have deserted us?", he said.

Anderson said that only 21 per cent of the country's registered voters are Republicans, as opposed to 38 per cent in 1940. He said 96 per cent of the party's members are white, only 18 per cent are under 30 and 81 per cent are Protestants.

Only 15 per cent of the nation's college students consider themselves Republicans, as opposed to 32 per cent Democrats, Anderson said.

AT THE SAME time, an increasing number of Republican incumbents are being defeated or are retiring, he said.

Although Anderson noted that the party faces a "potentially divisive fight" between Ford and Reagan, he said it's too early to term Reagan's presidential bid so divisive that it will damage the party.

"It's not the candidates who will cause such division, but over-eager supporters looking for a fight," Anderson said.

He said that Republicans should look for new solutions to problems such as welfare instead of suggesting "patchwork solutions" such as crackdowns on welfare fraud.

"Reform of the welfare system will take total consolidation of all systems into a single, cash-dispensing agency," he said.

"People will listen to the party that gives them ideas for positive reform," Anderson said.

More folks read more books than ever at L.B. libraries

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Circulation of books and periodicals in the Long Beach Main Library was up 21.8 per cent in the fiscal year ending last June 30 and has jumped another 21 per cent in the past four months, City Librarian Frances Henselman reported.

That gain, and a 9.9 per cent increase at Burnett Branch Library, helped increase circulation in the Long Beach Public Library system by 4.2 per cent over fiscal 1973-74, Mrs. Henselman said.

A study of circulation figures indicates that the increase at both the Main Library and Burnett Branch stems from the purchase of a large quantity of books for the two facilities, she said.

"It shows that when people have the materials they use them," she said.

USING MONEY which was the library's share of possessory-tax litigation on oil two years ago, the Main Branch added 21,638 books in 1974-75. It had purchased 13,666 in 1972-73, by comparison.

Burnett Branch, at the start of last year, began receiving federal funds under a special program, and most of the money has gone into book purchases, Mrs. Henselman said.

The branch bought 4,376 books last fiscal year, as compared to 1,957 the prior year.

From July through October of this year, she said, the Main Library's circulation figures have increased another 21 per cent, and Burnett has recorded a 30 per cent increase.

Anticipating greater stack and storage space when the new Main Library in the Civic Center is opened, Mrs. Henselman said the money is being spread out so funds will be available to buy additional volumes when the increased space is available.

SHE SAID the library staff anticipates an increase of from 20 to 40 per cent in circulation when it moves into the new Main Library.

At the end of fiscal 1974-75, Mrs. Henselman reported, the Long Beach Public Library had a stock of 652,185 books. Of these, 467,143 were adult books, including 341,839 nonfiction and 125,304 fiction. Juvenile books totaled 185,042, of which 119,161 were nonfictoon and 65,881 were fiction.

The totals represent a gain of 20,810 volumes in adult books and 6,173 in juvenile books. The library also had 17,817 records and 816 films available for loan, as of the end of the fiscal year, Mrs. Henselman said.

Enrollment surge hits colleges; funds sought

"Without additional resources, enrollments in the winter and spring terms will by necessity have to be curtailed."

The report points out that the Legislature's Budget Act allows the Trustees to declare an "enrollment emergency" when enrollment projections are exceeded by more than 2 per cent.

The enrollment rise at LBSU was primarily caused by more present students continuing in college and taking more classes. But there were also more new students.

"My own belief is that this is a temporary phenomenon," Gray said. "But since we can't predict the impact of future social change and the future state of the economy, we don't know for sure."

College officials won't know until next month whether spring registration is up also. Applications are being taken for next fall starting this month.

Some qualified students applying to LBSU programs in physical therapy, nursing, and art are already being turned away, according to Leo Goodman-Malamuth, academic vice president. He said the radio-TV department also has more students than it can handle.

Students who want to major in some popular subjects such as accounting are being admitted to the college but have been unable to get the classes they need, he said.

Gray ruled out placing enrollment ceilings on the college as a whole for next spring.

He said that LBSU officials want to accommodate all qualified student who apply.

However, many faculty members would rather have an enrollment ceiling imposed than see the sizes of their classes continually increased.

Jim Ryan, chairman of LBSU's Academic Senate, said he believed some classes have already grown larger because of this fall's enrollment surge and the class size trend in recent years has been upward.

"Administrators are reluctant to put a lid on enrollment because it would put them in a poorer position to get more funds," Ryan said. "But the larger classes get, the less effective professors can be and the less learning will take place."

Although college officials have considered dismissing part-time faculty next spring, Ryan said the long-term trend seems to be to hire more part-timers to cope with increased enrollment, instead of recruiting more expensive full-time professors.

However the college reacts to this fall's enrollment increase, no one wants to over-react and discourage too many students from applying.

If the up-trend continues for several semesters, that's probably what college officials will end up doing. But if it's only a one-time "blip" in enrollment patterns, turning away too many students could be disasterous.

"We've been working to attact more students for the past several semesters because we were worried about falling enrollment," one college official said. "If word gets around that we're overcrowded—and enrollment suddenly drops off—then we'll have more budget troubles."

house many other families. She is equally unreconstructed but less vocal, and she appreciated, above all other gifts from her niece, armloads of warm clothing.

"THAT IS the most expensive thing in Russia —a pair of shoes costs half a month's wages," explains Mrs. Austin, who speaks fluent Russian and acted as translator for the group.

Despite the high prices, she says, people in the streets are well dressed, and stocks of clothing in the stores, if not high fashion, are well made and ample.

Her most colorful memories: speaking Russian with African students and late-night talks with the floor managers at hotels who bemoaned the lack of consumer goods and entertainment in their workaday lives. She also recalled that there, as elsewhere, it pays to go to the top when a problem arises.

"Once in a nightclub and once at the ballet I was confronted with the 'get in line and wait' syndrome to the point of absurdity. When I stood my ground and demanded, in their language, to 'see the director' the problem was solved," she says.

NONE OF the three suffered the customs harassment that Long Beach Municipal Court Judge Charles Litwin experienced when he left Kiev two weeks earlier. That involved dumping out everything he had packed, including his coat and shirt pockets and his wife's box of Kleenex.

RICHARD SMITH
Convictions Confirmed

In retrospect, he decided that it was because of his visit to the home of two Jewish physicists in company with a tour couple who were active in protesting Russian anti-Semitism.

The trio's luggage wasn't searched, nor were their cameras confiscated, Smith said, although one fellow traveler, a North Hollywood physician, had his camera seized and emptied during a 90-minute interrogation by Russian police which delayed the plane's departure.

One fellow tourist, Brodsky recalled, got up early every morning, boarded the subway and wandered at will, taking endless photographs and making his way back in a cab.

FOR SMITH and his wife, Judi, however, the atmosphere was oppressive and controlled. "They never smiled, they screamed and shouted constantly, they pushed and shoved, and the slightest deviation in schedule threw Intourist into complete chaos," he said. "I was prepared for an Iron Curtain atmosphere, and I found it. What surprised me was the cosmopolitan atmosphere and the cleanliness of the cities."

Mrs. Austin and Brodsky, however, met those who smiled and danced and clowned at dinner, and Mrs. Brodsky communicated in sign language with women on the street who stopped her and asked her how many children she had.

In restaurants and on tours they constantly saw women supervisors laying down the law and reprimanding male underlings, all report.

MOST BEAUTIFUL cities were Leningrad and Kiev, and the streets of each city were without litter, they said.

Most impressive is the preservation of culture in each city, they agreed. "If it's historical or artistic they've kept it and are proud of it," says Mrs. Brodsky.

Mrs. Austin, who watched television and read periodicals, says frequent subjects were Watergate, New York's financial crisis and racial injustice. Pamphlets in several languages at the airport quoted from Russian Premier Leonid Brezhnev's United Nations talk on Russia's desire for peace.

Mrs. Austin, the only one able to discuss politics, didn't, she said, for fear of reprisals against her relatives.

Would they go back again?

Emphatically yes, all agreed, but on a more extended, less structured trip.

Center ribbon-cutting due

Formal dedication and ribbon-cutting ceremonies for the $750,000 North Long Beach Neighborhood Facilities Center are scheduled to be conducted from 1 to 4 p.m. today at the center in Houghton Park, 6335 Myrtle Ave.

City Councilman Russ Rubley, whose Ninth District encompasses North Long Beach, said the ceremonies are to include flag raising by members of Boy Scout Troop No. 57, introductions of several area legislators, the center director, contractor and architect. Refreshments are to be served on the patio, and tours of the center are scheduled to be conducted.

The event, which is open to the public, also will feature donation of a small pick-up truck on a one-year lease basis by Long Beach Fabricators, a business in the northern portion of the city, Rubley said.

Rubley added that the center, designed to serve more than 60,000 North Long Beach residents, will provide health services, senior citizen programs, employment counseling, juvenile and family counseling, and meeting space for community clubs and organizations.

In addition, he said, Big Brothers for fatherless children are to be available from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays; social and protective services from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays; nondiscriminatory housing listings from 9 .m. to 1 p.m. Thursdays; legal advice and representation from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fridays; Camp Fire Girls from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursdays; consumer problems advice and education from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Tuesdays; and child development provided by the Long Beach Unified School District from 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Traffic safety course slated

Traffic Safety for Adults is a new course being offered at Norwalk-La Mirada Adult School that may sometimes count for court credit in lieu of fines.

Classes are held each Wednesday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Deputy Monte Allen of the Norwalk sheriff's station is the instructor.

Further information may be obtained from the school.

Collection points set in Toys for Tots drive

Collection points for donations for Toys for Tots, the annual holiday project sponsored by the Marine Corps Reserve, are open in 40 Southland locations.

Decorated barrels have been placed in fire stations, hospitals, colleges, banks and several business in the Long Beach area so individuals may donate Christmas gifts for needy youngsters.

The barrels are available during the normal working hours of the businesses.

They will remain in the locations until Dec. 19. The toys will be sorted and distributed to local agencies, which will in turn deliver them to needy youngsters.

JOHN G. CLOCK

MR. CLOCK, a native of Iowa, moved to Long Beach with his family when he was about 12 years old. He served in the Army during World War I and was graduated from the University of Southern California School of Law following the war.

He maintained a law practice in Long Beach from the early 1920s until a few months before his death. His first law partnership was formed as Clock and McWhinney.

He later practiced in the Jergins Trust Building with the law firm of Clock, Waestman and Clock. The latter Clock was his nephew, Henry.

MR. CLOCK was a member of the Long Beach and Long Beach-Los Angeles County Bar Associations, the American Bar Association and the American Bar Foundation. He also was a life member of the American College of Probate Counsel.

Long active as a leader in professional organizations, Mr. Clock served as president of the Long Beach Bar Association in 1943; was elected a member of the California State Bar Association's board of governors in September 1945; was elected vice president of the California State Bar Association in September 1947, and served as chairman of the Lawyers' Committee for (former Republican Gov.) Goodwin Knight in 1953.

HE WAS admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court in 1956.

He also was an enthusiastic supporter of amateur and professional golf and a member of the Virginia Country Club.

In 1958, his law firm waged a successful battle against a Los Angeles County Superior Court decision that ordered golf clubs to pay unemployment tax for caddies. The firm of Clock, Waestman and Clock appealed the decision and won a reversal from the California Supreme Court.

MR. CLOCK served as president of the California Golf Association in 1950 and had previously been president of the Southern California Golf Association.

He served as vice president of the USGA in 1958 and 1959 and was elected president of the association in 1960 and 1961, after having served nine years on the group's executive committee.

He also held membership in the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrew's, Scotland.

HE WAS awarded a Gold Card, signifying life membership in the Southern California Professional Golfers Association, on his selection as "Man of the Year in Golf" for 1958.

Mr. Clock, who maintained his long-time residence on Devon Place near the Virginia Country Club until his death, is survived by his wife, Blanche; a daughter, Rosemary Sadler; nephew, Henry Clock; and four grandchildren.

The family suggests that remembrances be made in the form of memorial contributions to Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach.

POLICE BEAT

Two killed in crashes

Two young Norwalk men were killed in separate traffic accidents in Santa Fe Springs, authorities reported Saturday.

Sheriff's deputies said 19-year-old Alan Lewis, of 11629 Pantheon St., died early Saturday when his car was struck by a train as he attempted to cross the tracks at Lakeland Road and Bloomfield Avenue.

Investigators said Lewis drove around the crossing barricades and past flashing lights to the tracks. His car was hit by the oncoming train and dragged three-quarters of a mile, they said. Lewis was pronounced dead at the scene at about 3 a.m.

Highway Patrolmen, meanwhile, said 23-year-old Michael Lynn Milling, of 14838 Madris Ave., was killed when he lost control of his motorcycle and crashed on an offramp of the Santa Ana Freeway.

Officers said Milling apparently was traveling very fast when he attempted to exit the southbound freeway at Rosecrans Avenue.

They said Milling hit a curb and was catapulted over a guard rail. He was dead on arrival at Norwalk Community Hospital at 10:30 p.m. Friday, officers said.

Decomposed body found

The badly decomposed body of a woman in her 20s was discovered Saturday in an oil field near 31st Street and Linden Avenue by a high school student who was looking for lizards, Long Beach police reported.

The victim was not identified. Police said she had been dead for at least two weeks and may have been sexually assaulted.

Investigators said the woman's clothes had been pulled up around her neck and added that she may have died from a blunt-force blow to head.

An autopsy was scheduled for today, they said.

Compton man wounded

A Carson sheriff's deputy shot and wounded a man who allegedly attacked him with a knife and a flower vase in an East Compton home Saturday afternoon.

Investigators said the shooting occurred after Deputy Richard Shear answered a family disturbance call at the home of Willie C. Curry, 36, 16307 S. Thornson Ave.

They said Shear told them he shot Curry once in the hip during a scuffle when he was cornered by a man wielding a knife and flower vase.

Curry, who was first reported in satisfactory condition at Paramount General Hospital, was later transferred to the jail ward at County-USC Medical Center and booked for suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon, deputies said.

They added that Shear was not injured in the 12:34 p.m. incident.

Thieves steal paintings

Paintings valued at $395 were stolen from the Crest Theatre, 4275 Atlantic Ave., by burglars who may have purchased tickets to see the movies, then hid in the building after it was closed for the night.

Manager Charles Robinson told Long Beach police that the paintings were part of an exhibit from the Theatre Gallery in Hawthorne, officers reported Saturday.

Christy's Christmas At Los Cerritos Center

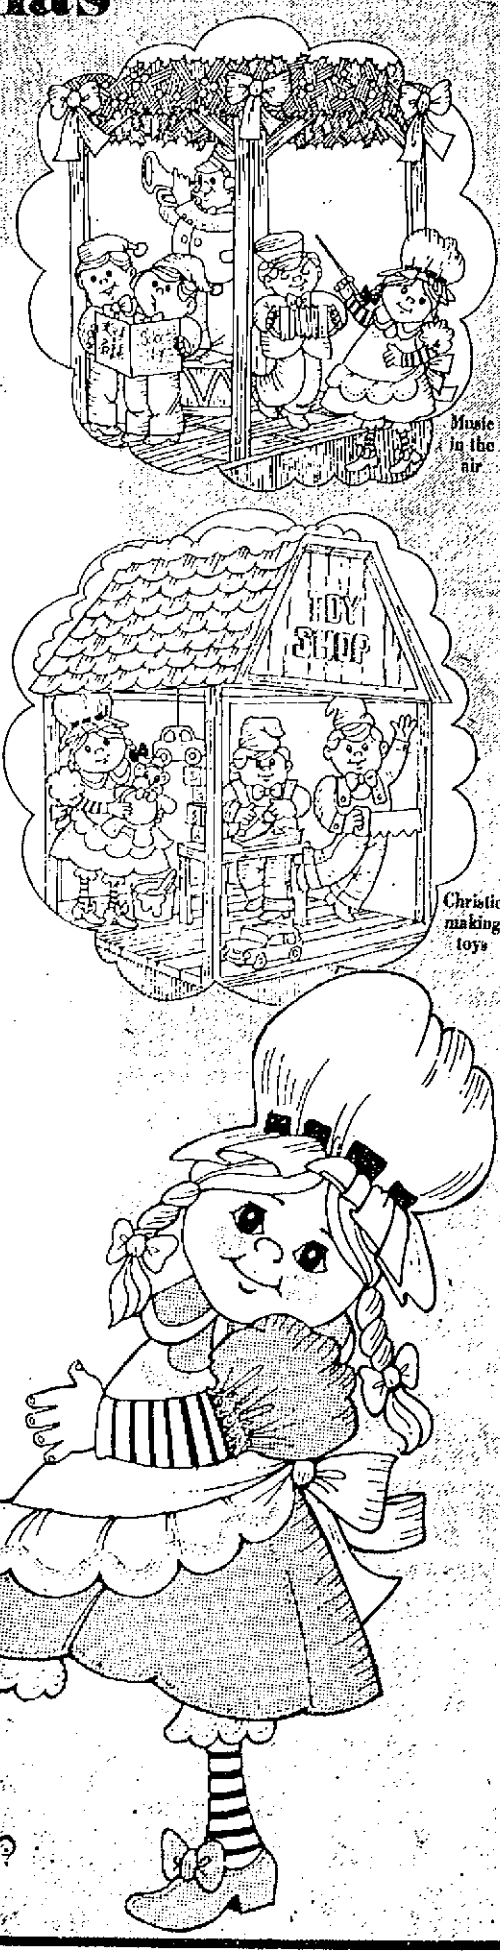

Santa will arrive in a colorful, antique touring car with Christy and Rudolph November 28 at 11:30 a.m. Lohman & Barkley, KFI radio personalities, will be on the mall in front of Ohrbach's to greet Santa, and a Christmas parade will follow throughout the mall.

Once upon a time, there was a little girl named Christy who had never heard of Christmas. One day she set out for the great tree forest to see if she could find one. Soon she came across a group of animals. "Good morning," said Christy. "I am looking for a Christmas. Do you know where I might find one?" Mr. Raccoon spoke up and said, "Why don't we all go with Christy to find a Christmas?" "Let's ask Mr. Reindeer, he travels a lot," said Miss Squirrel.

"Mr. Reindeer, this is our friend Christy. She is looking for a Christmas. Can you help her find one?" "Sure, I will take you all to Santa Claus, he knows all about Christmas." So, they continued through the forest to Santa's house.

"Santa, where can we find a Christmas?" asked Christy.

"Well, Christmas is lots of things," exclaimed Santa. It is visions of sugarplums; sharing a Christmas feast, the traditional photo of children, baking Christmas goodies, music in the air, and making toys. Christmas is sparkling windows, snowflakes dangling from the roof, the twinkle of lights, and most of all, sharing time with those we love. It is all at Los Cerritos Center. Join us daily from 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. and Sundays 11:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m., and see and live a little girl's Christmas dream."

DELL

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Improved coordination and expansion of personal enterprises turn this into an upbeat year. You're tempted to take on more than you can easily handle, and circumstances force you to prune your schedules, which you may find embarrassing. Relationships thrive along lines suitable to your age. Today's natives are perfectionists, put in time and effort to achieve accuracy. Many excel in sports.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Begin a new job or treat the old one like new. Calculated risks are tempting; you stand a good chance of coming out ahead. Social moves take you to strange places off your regular beat.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Stabilize your base of operations with definite agreements and firmly stated goals. Don't waste time on people who refuse to be serious. Overtime is worthwhile if you can manage to do it.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): An improvement of your position is probable. Go on the theory that yours is the best course of action under the circumstances. Invite friends in to talk shop, compare notes and solve problems.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Personal initiative pays off; just watch expenses. That whim or impulse purchase misses by a mile. Postpone investments and permanent financial arrangements for another week or two.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): You have higher energy available and can sell anything you believe in if you really try. Accept a chance to assert yourself and your objectives. Build up your most important long-range plans.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seek help for activity that will upgrade your situation. You may have to relocate to pursue your career. Intuition is clear however far afield it leads. Good news tonight.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends offer advice on every subject. Eventually you must make up your own mind, but it's fun to listen to all sides. Don't pick up the tab. Don't invite guests home right now.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go back to those who came to your aid before. Promote current ideas, and have a sales pitch ready. Educational travels and scholarly projects are favored.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Overconfidence is your potential downfall today. Don't take anything for granted or skip any of the essential details as you push ahead. Conditions are great for making progress.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): See that communications continue in good order as you organize a fresh campaign or revise existing programs. Associates offer suggestions; take a close look before you react.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enthusiasm attracts extra cooperation. Your earning capacity rises. Add to reserves and start a new savings account. Give personal plans your full attention.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): The opportunity is there to demonstrate what you've achieved lately and to receive the proper backing. File petitions or applications. Express your opinions where they count.

SEN. MAGNUSON

Why honor Magnuson?

THE WATERFRONT

Back when this writer was in the Marine Corps, we used to call the type of action taken this week by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners as "blowing smoke."

The board passed a resolution praising Spyros S. Skouras for serving as chairman of the Admiral of the Ocean Sea Awards Committee, which will host a dinner in New York honoring Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., who is chairman of the Senate's Interstate Foreign Commerce Committee.

It just so happens that Skouras is owner, president and chairman of the board of Prudential Lines. It also so happens that Prudential recently announced it is moving from Long Beach Harbor to Los Angeles Harbor.

Los Angeles port officials were understandably happy with the return of the shipping line to their port and estimate the move will increase port revenue by about $250,000 a year. The company, then known as Grace Line before it was purchased by Skouras in 1967, called at Los Angeles Harbor for nearly 40 years before moving to Long Beach.

In a resolution adopted by the Los Angeles board, Skouras was saluted for "...serving in an instrumental role in paying tribute to a great and outstanding American (Magnuson)."

The commission had previously voted to spend $550 for a full page advertisement in a souvenir program to be distributed during the New York banquet and to authorize a harbor representative, possibly Mayor Tom Bradley, a city councilman, or a harbor commissioner, to fly to New York to attend the Magnuson dinner. The air fare, hotel, taxi fares, and other incidental expenses would be paid by the harbor department out of port revenues.

Magnuson is sponsoring a Senate bill that would extend U.S. coastal jurisdiction out to 200 miles. Owners, operators, skippers and more than 2,000 fishermen who man the commercial fishing boats operating out of San Pedro and San Diego oppose adoption of the Magnuson bill. Supporting them are thousands of cannery workers who process the fish landed by the fishing boats. So do the workers making the cans in which the processed fish are sealed. So do the truck drivers who haul the canned fish.

The reason?

It is feared that if Sen. Magnuson's bill becomes law (a similar bill already has cleared the House of Representatives) that many of the 148 maritime nations will take similar action. Already 11 nations have claimed the 200-mile jurisdiction.

The general manager of the 40-boat Fisherman's Cooperative in San Pedro has stated that if the fleet home-ported in Los Angeles Harbor were prohibited from fishing within 200 miles of the coasts of Mexico, Central America and South America it would "kill" the fleet and eliminate thousands of jobs of Terminal Island cannery workers—mostly women of minority groups.

John Royal, secretary-treasurer of the 550-member Local 33 Fisherman's Union, labeled the action by the commission saluting Sen. Magnuson as a "slap in the face" to the California fishing industry.

Royal, who served as a member of the Harbor Commission for four years, asked:

"Has the commission allocated any monies to honor our own California senators and congressmen who have and are fighting to protect our fishing industry?

"At the risk of sounding like a disgruntled former harbor commissioner, which I am not, I wonder about the legality of spending nearly a thousand dollars to pay tribute to a man who is backing a law that could kill the Southern California fishing industry," Royal said.

The harbor commission officially has taken a stand against adoption of the 200-mile limit. Asked how it could spend money to honor a senator sponsoring such a bill, the harbor department's general manager, Fred B. Crawford, defended the commission's action:

"Senator Magnuson, despite his sponsorship of the 200-mile bill, during his long tenure in Congress has sponsored much legislation of benefit to the Port of Los Angeles."

Diving medics

Emergency medics with skills comparable to those of military combat corpsmen are being trained to handle deep-sea diving injuries in a program sponsored by the Commercial Diving Center on the Wilmington waterfront and by the University of Southern California.

James Joiner of San Pedro, executive director and president of the diver training center, considered to be one of the best in the world, notes there are now about 300 offshore oil platforms operating throughout the world, with another 200 under construction. All require the services of skilled divers. Many of the platforms are hundreds of miles from land, and at times isolated by weather conditions.

26,836-ton catch of anchovy told

During October, California's commercial anchovy fishing fleets landed 26,836 tons of the small pelagic fish, compared to 6,936 tons taken during the same month last year.

However, Herb Frey, a senior marine biologist with the Department of Fish and Game, points out that a comparison of monthly totals can be misleading and not an indication of the abundancy of the anchovy fishery.

"While the tonnage taken this year was nearly four times of that taken a year ago, it might well be that the fishing boat skippers in Ocober 1974 elected to fish for other species such as mackerel which brings higher prices at the canneries," Frey said.

The total tonnage of anchovy taken through October this year is 42,777 tons. That compares to 8,842 tons for the same seasonal total last year.

During October live bait fishermen were filling commitments without trouble, although San Diego bait dealers had to fish as far north as Oceanside, according to the DF & G.

Secret Witness

A summary of rewards, cases

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 56 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $38,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home at 261712 S. Pacific Ave. in San Pedro at about 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 42-year-old Donna Rae Goodell, found beaten to death in her home at 12230 Briarwood St. in Stanton on April 21, 1975.

— Rewards totaling $2,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by Knights of Columbus Council 3449 — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Steven Robert Snedeker, 18-year-old clerk shot to death during a robbery at the H & O Liquor Store, 6069 Cherry Ave., on the night of Jan. 27, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 25-year-old John Richard "Sharpstick" Dekker of Bell Gardens, shot to death by an unknown assailant as he was sitting in the Chit-Chat Bar in Bell Gardens shortly after midnight on Oct. 4, 1972.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killers of Jose Ballestero, 18; of Wilmington, stabbed to death by a group of young men as he was walking to his nearby home from a bus stop on L Street near Lakme Avenue at 10:45 p.m. on March 17, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Ashok N. Parekh, 27-year-old owner of Paul's Market, 755 Magnolia Ave., shot to death during a holdup at his store on Sept. 19, 1974.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Douglas Rehpohl, 32-year-old music teacher moonlighting as an Anaheim taxi driver, found stabbed to death near his cab on Sunset Road south of Ball Road in the Anaheim area on the night of Oct. 12, 1974.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Andrea "Treecy" Logan, 5-year-old Long Beach girl found strangled in an alley back of 136 Walnut St. near her home on May 7, 1974.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Mrs. Evelyn Sarah Cunningham, 56, found beaten and stabbed to death on the kitchen floor of her home at 3701 Linden Ave. on March 20, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of nine young men whose bodies, most of them sexually mutilated and one decapitated, were found throughout a wide area of the Southland beginning on Dec. 26, 1972.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself . . . any name, as long as it's not your own . . . and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, 90801.

Prints traced in death case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police said Saturday they were checking fingerprints found the home of an 83-year-old woman who was bound, gagged and apparently beaten to death by robbers.

Inspector Hobert Nelson said the prints were being traced to determine if they might belong to the person or persons who forced their way into the home of Fusayo Kono, the mother of a Japanese hotel executive.

Nelson said Mrs. Kono had been dead "for some hours" before her body was found Thursday in her home.

NEVER was I ever called "My Love"
Never have I kissed a Turtle Dove, Never has a whisper warmed my ear,
Never have I held a thing so dear, However did I live & get to be, 35 or so & you not come to me. However do I bear the live-long day, However do I sleep all the night away. However do I wake & you not be, In the hollow of my arm a-beside me. However can I live & not have you, However can I ever, Oh God. What if I never?

Condominiums 1020

PSSSST! CAN YOU KEEP A SECRET?

If you're searching for a rare buy on a home, and you'd be interested in living in a beautiful Long Beach condominium, you might sneak over to Second Street East this weekend! Prices start at $43,900

Although we're just putting the finishing touches on our exclusive 24-home condominium, and actually won't be holding a Grand Opening for another month, we're certain you'll be impressed!

The reason we're sneak previewing Second Street East is because the developer, Wilcraft Development, Inc., can't stand NOT letting the cat out of the bag. You see, it took two years to get approval from the Coastal Commission to build the luxurious four-story, full security complex because it's only two blocks from the Pacific Ocean.

Every one of the residences has patios & balconies. And many of the two & three bedroom, two bath homes have sea views. We're especially proud of our unique suspended bridge system which provides additional privacy & allows exclusive entryways to each home.

Naturally, we offer all the modern conveniences: Sturdy double-wall construction, handsome gas log fireplaces, a total early warning fire detection network, wet-bars, all-electric kitchens, walk-in closets, formal dining rooms, individual laundry rooms, even two car garages with electric controlled doors & plenty of storage space for all residents. So bring your friends to Second Street East. But keep it a secret!

SPACIOUS FAMILY room adjoins informal eating nook and kitchen of the Plan 2, one of four models now offered at WoodWalk in Lake Forest.

WoodWalk's Phase 2 opens in Lake Forest

WoodWalk, the $7 million single-family home community in Lake Forest which held its grand opening just last month, today opens sales in the second phase of the project.

Sixty homes, containing three and four bedrooms, are included in Phase 2, according to Michael T. Murray, marketing manager for First Management Corporation, at prices ranging from $60,500 to $78,000.

THE SECOND PHASE is being opened some two months ahead of the original schedule because 42 of the 48 homes in the first unit already have been sold.

In the new segment, the emphasis is being placed on the larger homes, although there will be a good selection of all four models.

"Included in the 60 homes now under construction are 20 Plan Four models with bonus rooms, which were the fastest selling units in the first phase," said Murray.

The Plan Four with bonus room contains 2,795 square feet.

DESIGNED by Architect Frank Leslie Spangler, AIA, Newport Beach, all WoodWalk homes have open floor plans which add volume to their already spacious interiors.

On the exteriors, Architect Spangler combined suteco with wood trim and heavy shake roofs to give the homes distinctive appearances.

Each WoodWalk home has at least one fireplace, with one model having three. All kitchens have built-in ranges, double self-cleaning ovens, dishwashers, disposers, ceramic tile counter tops, pantries and luminous ceilings.

The single-story Plan One has a two-car garage, the other three, all two-story homes have three-car garages. All garage interiors are finished with dry-wall.

WITHIN A short walk from their homes, WoodWalk residents have a $1 million recreation facility for their use. The Sun and Sail Club, whose membership is limited to Lake Forest residents, has a 36-acre lake for boating and fishing, a 13,000-square foot clubhouse.

Four models, furnished and decorated by Louise Klotz of Habitational Design, Inc., are open daily for inspection from 10 a.m. to dusk.

TO REACH WOODWALK, take the San Diego Freeway to the El Toro off-ramp, which runs into Avenida de Carlotta.

Go south to El Toro Road, turn left (east) and proceed to Muirlands Boulevard, then left to Ridge Route Drive.

Go right on Ridge Route Drive to Chaparral and the sales and information center.

$400,000 Recreational Center ready today at Laguna Village

The vast $400,000 recreational center at Laguna Village, a 914 unit townhome condominium community opens today, west of the San Diego Freeway on Canada Road in Laguna Hills.

Designed over a 4.5 acre area, the center boasts of 5,500 square foot clubhouse and recreational complex, with large main lounge, wet bar, fireplace, card room, kitchen and activity rooms, billiard room and men's and women's saunas.

ALSO, there are three pools at the $45 million townhome condominium development, including a therapy pool, two regulation-sized double tennis courts, children's play area, lawn bowling field and a sandlot volleyball court.

Laguna Village, which offers residences priced from $43,500 to $48,900 has two-story townhomes available in five floor plans and two special bonus room options. The townhomes vary from 1,350 to 1,665 square feet of living areas, with two to three bedrooms and two baths.

According to Bruce Hill, president, Pacific Coast Realty, exclusive sales agent, the developer has more than 20 years experience in building and designing recreation centers.

"BOB KREIS, president of Laguna Village, Inc., has been building these fun centers since 1954. He developed San Carlos, a 5,000 acre community in San Diego, and he has been perfecting facilities involving recreational activities ever since," said Hill. "He believes that this recreational complex is the culmination of everything he has studied in this field."

Though the clubhouse has been designed to easily accommodate large gatherings in its many rooms, it

LAKE STREAMS PROVIDE RESTFUL LIVING ATMOSPHERE

Lake-front living in the master-planned community of Lake Forest is offered at Lake Terrace, according to W. Scott Biddle, president of Biddle Development, Inc., builder of the $2-million community that opens today.

Located about a mile from the San Diego Freeway in El Toro, Lake Terrace offers 24 one-and two-level homes, priced from $55,000 to $85,000.

MANY feature dramatic views of the lake and streams cascading over a series of water falls that border the development.

'Early bird' reservations open today at Shadow Run

Temporary sales facilities have been set up for "early bird" reservations this weekend at the new Shadow Run development of single family homes in Buena Park. First reservations will be taken starting at 10 a.m. today.

The Warmington Development, Inc., homes are under construction at Larkspur Drive and Stanton Avenue, just north of La Palma Avenue in Buena Park.

Pre-sale prices begin at $44,000 with excellent conventional financing and just 36 homes are being presented in the new Shadow Run series.

Four distinctive floor plans are being offered in one and two story designs with two, three and four bedrooms and two baths. Individually detailed exteriors feature shake roofs and enclosed double garages.

Luxury appointments of the new homes include large convenience-center kitchens, elegant master suites, vaulted ceilings, fireplaces in some plans, carpeting, gas forced air heating, designer light fixtures and service porches in some homes.

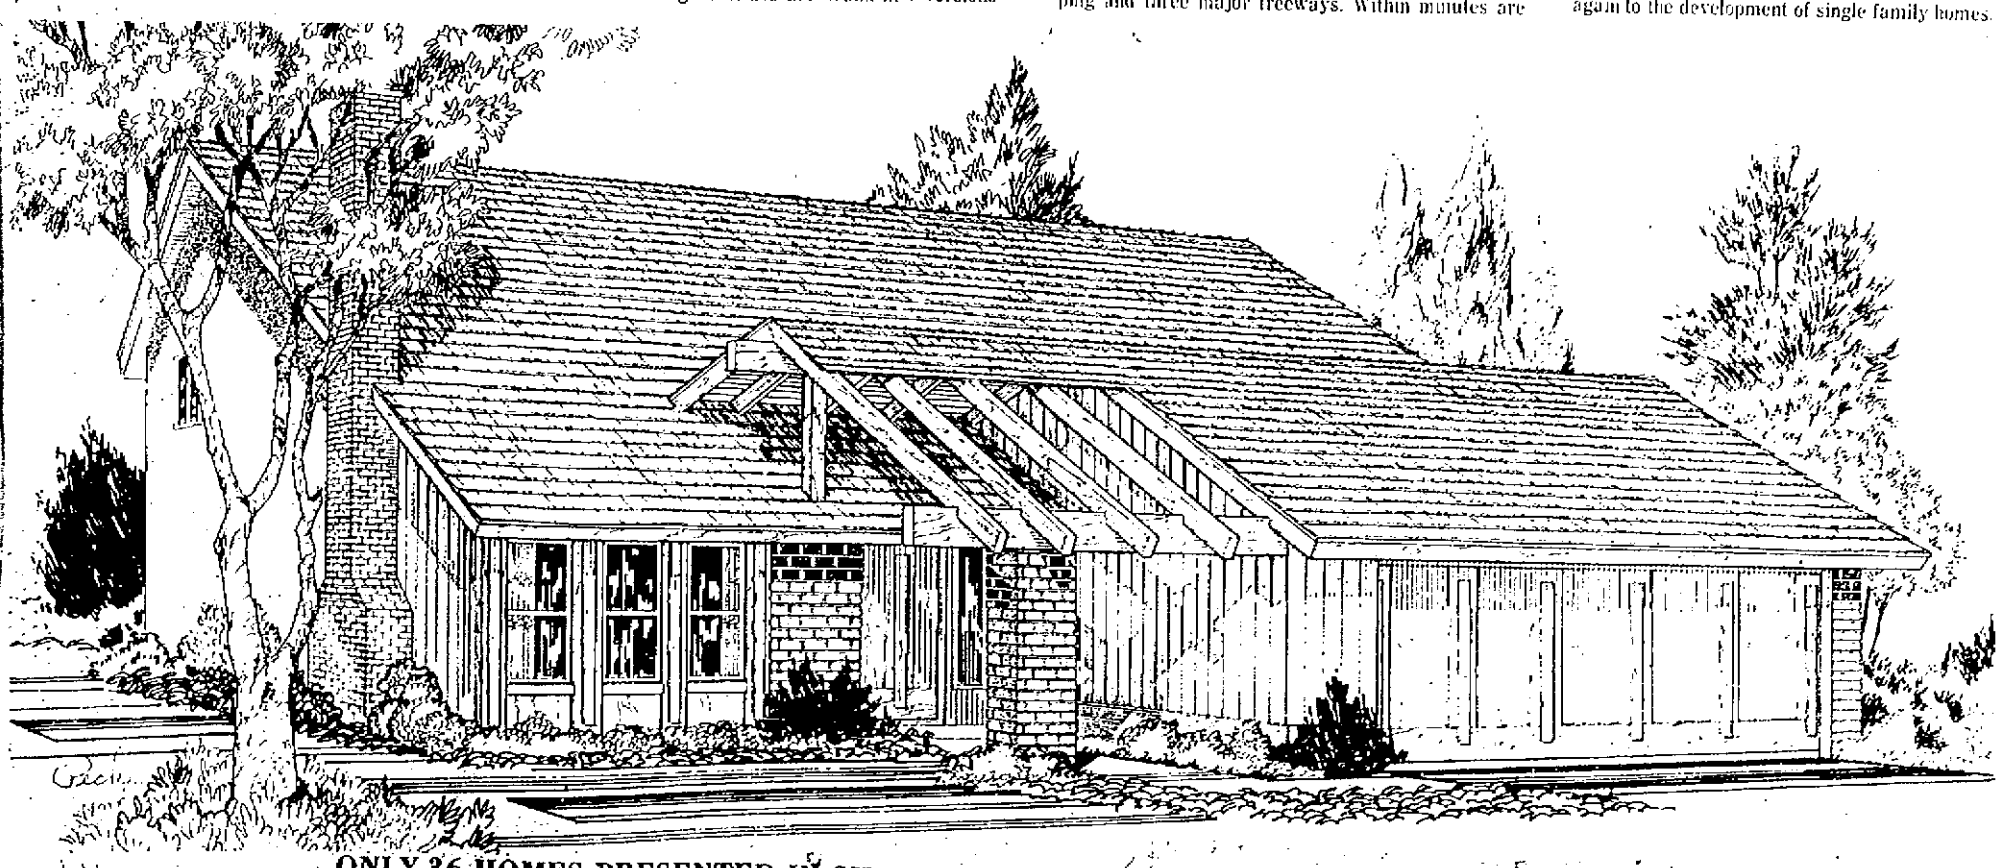

The Warmington homes are brand new versions of the progressive "Three-Homes-In-One" concept that has made the Shadow Run series so successful, according to the builder.

Each home is designed in three distinct sectors: Family, formal and private. Kitchen/family areas are the center of family activity, with living rooms designed for formal occasions. Bedrooms are secluded, offering private retreats.

The homes are in a convenient, private neighborhood of quiet cul-de-sac streets, near schools, shopping and three major freeways. Within minutes are Knott's Berry Farm, Disneyland, Angel Stadium and other southland attractions.

The sales facility will be open daily from 10 a.m. for pre-opening reservations at 7681 Larkspur Drive in Buena Park.

Shadow Run may be easily reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway or Artesia Freeway to the Beach Boulevard exit, then south on Beach to La Palma and left (east) on La Palma to Stanton and left again to the development of single family homes.

Boardwalk buyers go for carefree lifestyle, poll says

What are the most popular features of planned condominium communities?

Does condominium ownership have advantages over owning a single-family, detached home? Over renting?

Certainly these answers vary — depending upon the character of the specific development — but a recent survey of buyers at The Boardwalk in Cerritos provides what may be typical answers.

A 104-UNIT planned community of two and three bedroom condominium homes, located at Artesia Avenue and Palo Verde Street, The Boardwalk is 62.5 per cent sold out, with 65 buyers to date.

The units are priced from $33,800 to $39,800 and excellent conventional financing is available, with annual interest rates as low as 8 per cent and as little as 5 per cent required as a down payment.

Al Quaglietta, Vice President of Long Beach Construction Co., Boardwalk developer, reported survey findings of interest to both families in the housing market and to the housing industry itself.

"Not surprisingly," Quaglietta said, "85 per cent of our buyers at Boardwalk stated that freedom was the primary attraction — freedom from yardwork, house and pool maintenance and the like — for buying in a condominium development."

"THE CAREFREE lifestyle offered in condominium ownership was important to 38 per cent who previously had owned homes but it also was the primary influence with 68 per cent who had been renters and preferred not to assume the chores of ordinary home ownership," Quaglietta said.

Also reflective of Boardwalk's buyer profile, Quaglietta pointed out, was the fact that 35 per cent of the buyers were unmarried and among the 65 percent of buyers who were married there was an average of only one child per family, less than half of the national average.

"Clearly," Quaglietta pointed out "condominium ownership appeals to the socially mobile families of today who remain small in number by choice, who enjoy the built in recreation, security and maintenance of planned communities in preference to ownership of traditional homes."

Plans offer wide choices

Six distinctive elevations, accented by brick, slumpstone and wood detail, provide each new Lake Terrace ownerwith a near-custom home.

According to Biddle, terms are very advantageous. As low as 7.5 per cent financing or families may buy with as little as 10 per cent down.

Amenities include wet bars, oversize master baths, cathedral ceilings and large, walk-in closets.

A sunken living room with vaulted ceiling and fireplace is featured in the three-bedroom, two-bath Plan 1. The master suite has sliding glass doors to the rear yard and a vaulted ceiling. The adjoining master bath features a step-up Roman tub and double cultered marble pullmans with uni-lav basins. The patio-view kitchen is convenient to the dining room and has direct access to the garage for laundry convenience.

THE LIVING ROOM in Lake Terrace's Plan 2 features a massive brick fireplace and a 20-foot ceiling. The upper level in this two-story home is alloted to the master suite which includes a large bath, a bedroom with adjoining step-down retreat and fireplace and a spacious balcony overlooking a stream. Two auxiliary bedrooms, a family room and formal dining room complete this 2,100-square-foot home.

Fully appointed kitchens include O'Keefe and Merritt gas ranges with double continuous cleaning ovens, automatic dishwashers, trash compactors, disposals and luminous ceilings. Kitchens also feature pass-through windows with exterior serving bars, pantries, furniture-finished wood cabinets, and ceramic tile counters.

OTHER FEATURES in Lake Terrace's comprehensive amenities package include air conditioning preparation, smoke detection system, deluxe carpeting in living and bedroom areas, and gas log lighters.

Exterior features include wood shake or Monray tile roofs, fully insulated walls and ceilings, perimeter and sideyard fencing, front yard landscaping and sprinkler system, concrete driveways and underground utilities.

Lake Terrace owners automatically become members of the Lake Forest Community Association which provides maintenance of one's front yard and of all common areas and recreation facilities.

Owners have full voting privileges in the Lake Forest Beach and Tennis Club.

LAKE TERRACE'S ideal south Orange County location is away from city congestion, and yet close to major employment areas in the Newport Financial Center and the Irvine Industrial Complex. Shopping is convenient at the new Laguna Hills Mall and at Fashion Island.

Lake Terrace model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. until dusk. London Line Realty of El Toro is exclusive sales agent for the community.

To reach the development, take the San Diego or Santa Ana freeway to the Canada Road offramp and drive easy. Turn right at Overlake Drive to Lake Terrace. Lake Terrace is located at 24302 Lakeview Lane, El Toro.

also allows for partitioning between certain areas as well.

"In designing this specious facility, it was important to make sure it would serve the needs of many and of few at the same time," said Hill, "without the various groups or persons getting in the way of the others."

OVER 40 per cent of Laguna Village will be devoted to open space. There are greenbelts and patios, and the developer has also dedicated a 12 acre parcel to the County of Orange which will eventually design the site as a park.

"We have maintenance-free living available here," said Hill. "Residents will soon discover an increase in their leisure time and a new relaxation from the responsibilities of routine property management."

Laguna Village is a heavily landscaped community which has view-oriented living and dining rooms and some master bedrooms with panoramas as well.

Many of the townhomes have optional floor plans. The Monterrey, for example, has four bedrooms or can be obtained with two bedrooms and a 16 by 17 foot rumpus room or den. The second bedroom of the model is als extended to measure 11 by 14 feet, and can be used as a guest bedroom, library, private study or den.

"THE DEMAND for this style of townhome at Laguna Village has been staggering," noted Hill. "In addition to all of this space, we have included an unfinished bonus storage area in the Monterrey measuring 1,400 cubic feet, and a regular storage room of 230 cubic feet."

Additional features include that each townhome condominium has its own washer-dryer area within the residence. Most have skylighted entryways.

Laguna Village, which features a 3,000 square foot design center called the Homestead Store, has models open from 10 a.m. to dusk daily. Each townhome has a private auto terrace which serves as a private patio and one car garage, if desired, or attached two car facility.

Plus open space is provided conveniently close by for one additional parking space per resident.

LOCATED on gentle rolling hills, Laguna Village has 104 units in its first and second phases. A third phase, with 95 units, is also open now.

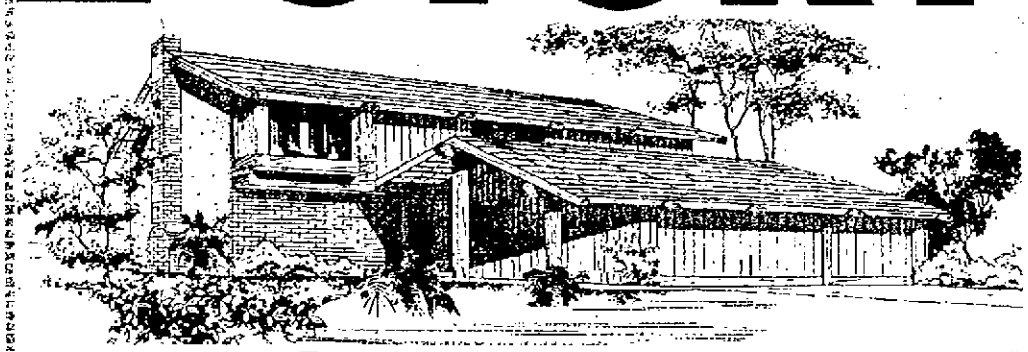

Homeowners pay a $50 monthly fee to cover all maintenance of the recreational amenities, townhome exteriors, greenbelts, personal water bill, fire insurance and a master TV cable system.

Conventional financing is available with 10 per cent down.

Today is the grand opening of a new residential development, Ravenspur Condominium Homes, at 5718 Ravenspur Drive, located just off Hawthorne Boulevard, above Peninsula Center on the beautiful Palos Verdes Peninsula in Rancho Palos Verdes.

The new development offers 21 large two bedroom with two bath condominiums with prices ranging from $48,950 to $59,950. Construction and landscaping are completed and immediate move-in is possible.

According to Michael L. Keele, a principal of Argonaut Enterprises, owner of Ravenspur, "In addition to a prime Palos Verdes location near excellent shopping, fine schools and outstanding recreation, these new homes are of high quality construction. Whittier Monterey sales steady

Steady sales continue at Whittier Monterey, the collection of elegant townhomes built by Showcase Homes along the view-hillside in Whittier. Privacy clusters of split-level and tri-level townhomes contain two and three bedrooms with two or 2½ baths in four different floor plans priced from $43,950.

Ready now for immediate occupancy, the townhomes have recently been reduced $4,000, according to Dick Kurth of Kurth and Associates, sales representatives for the new development.

A variety of financing is offered with interest rates from 7¾ percent to 9 percent available depending upon the size of the down payment.

"VIEW, location and value are the elements cited by new homebuyers when describing their reasons for purchasing a Whittier Monterey townhome," Kurth stated. "Spectacular vistas of the basin stretch to the Palos Verdes Peninsula, encompass the skyscraper silhouettes of downtown Los Angeles and take in the San Gabriel Mountains."

The terraced grounds of the residential community include two recreation centers, each with a swimming pool and therapy pool. An owner's clubhouse is situated with easy access for all residents, and maintenance of the landscaped gardens, exteriors of townhomes and recreation facilities is under the direction of the Whittier Monterey Homeowners Association.

Interiors are complete with wall-to-wall carpeting through the living room, dining room, hall, stairs and bedrooms with cushioned vinyl tile in the kitchen and baths. All windows and sliding glass doors are fully draped. Some plans have vaulted wood ceilings and private balconies, and all have convenient storage space situated throughout.

Showcase Homes distinctive work-saver kitchens have built-in appliances at Whittier Monterey which includes a range, eye-level double oven (continuous cleaning), dishwasher and disposer under luminous ceilings. Custom-finished cabinetry and wide countertops surround the appliances.

EACH townhome has an attached double garage with automatic door openers. Outlets for laundry appliances are located in the garage. Direct access to the interior of the home from the garage is an additional built-in security feature. Garages open to concrete driveways which lead to gently curving streets engineered for safety and noise reduction.

The multi-level townhomes are situated less than 15 minutes from downtown Los Angeles. Shopping facilities, schools and parks are nearby with excellent access to major transportation routes.

Furnished models, prepared by Vicki Welsh of Modern Interiors, are maintained at Whittier Monterey to display the varied floorplans and features. The sales office at 10620 Sierra Morena is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

To reach the dramatic hillside community, take the San Gabriel Freeway (605) and exit at Beverly Boulevard. Drive east on Beverly to Workman Mill Road and turn left on Workman Mill Road to Sierra Morena. Drive one block east to the new Whittier Monterey townhomes in Whittier.

With 'apologies to Iroquois'

"Psst! Wanna buy Manhattan? Or a piece of it?" Sound like the latest of Mayor Beame's schemes to eliminate the city's budget deficit?

What will be up for sale is a three-dimensional, multi-media model of Manhattan built by the Ruckus Construction Co., which, according to the Times, is finishing work on the downtown section that includes a 30-foot-high World Trade Center.

Once the midtown and uptown sections are completed, interested buyers can haggle over the price of the entire island or just a section of it when it goes on display at a midtown gallery.

Sweet move-in at Landing

Kendall Development Co., Inc. is presenting every new home owner at its new Huntington Beach community, The Landing, a 12-pound box of Knott's Berry Farm Jellies and Jams.

"It's our way of welcoming families into their new homes," said Ida Mazur, director of consumer services for the Newport Beach-based homebuilding firm.

THE GIFT is accompanied by a card that is personally signed by all Kendall Development employes. "New home owners are particularly pleased with the card," noted Mrs. Mazur. "Several people have mentioned that the gift typifies the extra attention Kendall gives to each owner."

Most of the families who have purchased homes in the first three increments will be living at The Landing by Christmas, according to the developer.

At the present time all Landing homes are sold. However, additional homes will be available beginning January, 1976.

MEANWHILE furnished models may be viewed Saturday through Monday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the sales office, located at the corner of Talbert Avenue and Springdale Street in Huntington Beach.

Beginning in January, the models will again be open on a daily basis.

See-through doors add dimension

Another dimension is added to a family room when it has sliding patio doors. The view becomes a visual extension of the family room.

Energy conservation is also achieved when the sliding patio doors have wood frames, double-pane insulating glass and factory-applied weatherstripping to reduce fuel costs.

Design for Living

You're a brick lover now

By EMILY MALINO

Brick is unbeatable. A single brick wall in any room can give it all the character it needs, and often in spite of the furnishings.

Brick has texture, it has atmosphere and it has its own marvelous ruddy, warm color.

Even whitewashed brick is handsome. It can give the same texture to a room, but can lighten it and make it adapt to a darker exposure.

Whether brick is left in its natural rust or tan or painted white, it is a very strong element in any room and must be treated with care. It has a gutsy feeling that is reminiscent of the early days of this country, like hand-hewn beams and log cabins and oil lamps.

On the other hand, we are living in the 20th century and we have to learn how to mix brick with the things we like.

BRICK GOES with a great many different styles of furniture, with furniture, in fact, that comes from places where no one ever saw a brick, much less lived in a brick room.

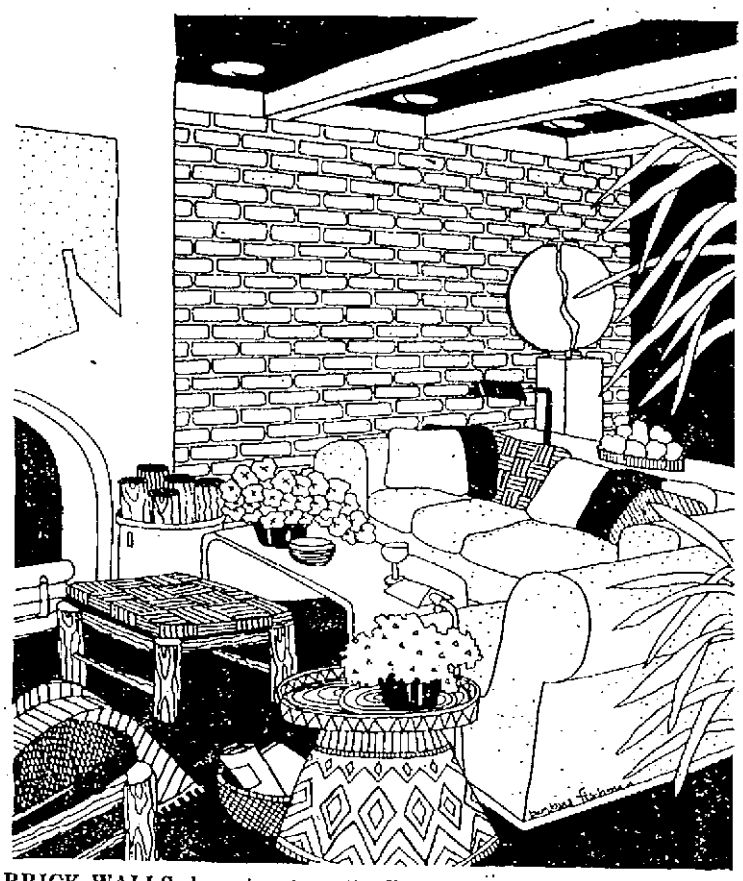

One kind of furniture brick definitely doesn't go with is fine French. Somehow, an elegant curved fauteuil (which your dictionary will tell you is an open arm chair) just looks wrong against brick. Even Sheraton or Chippendale chairs or tables look wrong.

Some woods look wrong; mahogany, for example, looks strange with brick because it is such a fine, closely grained wood that it seems out of place with this very robust material.

What works with brick? I can see a good case for pine furniture, the simpler Early American kind, ladder-back or Windsor chairs, trestle tables and pewter accessories.

I can see country French, those marvelous, heavy old tables, settees and chairs that are still available and if you can't find the real thing, you can buy good reproductions.

CONTEMPORARY furniture works with brick as well, but not the sleek chrome and glass we're used to thinking about. I like simple modern sofas and tables made of white laminate, chairs that are more Scandinavian in feeling than American modern.

BRICK WALLS do not automatically make a room. You have to choose your styles with care.

I worked on a family room with one brick wall; choosing sturdy but attractive furnishings to go with the brick was our problem; the only keepable was an old, faintly Art Deco sofa, a gift from the couple's parents who had bought it when it was considered "modern."

I covered it in a sturdy tan and white herringbone tweed and found a white Parsons table to fit behind it, a perfect place for an extra reading lamp and handy for a bar or glasses or a bowl of fruit.

A similar white laminated table, with Deco curves, is the coffee table and around it are a trip of footstools made of heavy, rustic logs, and an indoor version of the old log picnic furniture, with cushions covered in brown batik and rough brown handwoven Haitian cotton. Two lounge chairs in the same rustic style face the sofa.

BASKETS, a copper vat to hold logs at the fireplace, plants and modern sculptures and paintings work happily with the natural rust brick, and the whole assemblage is placed on a dark chocolate brown shag-plush carpet that conceals a multitude of sins as well as wear and tear and cookies and pizza.

The room was dark because the windows, which were at one end where a big game and dining table was placed, faced north, so we painted the brick a warm white, keeping the adjacent walls the same beige as the color in the tweed of the sofa.

Recessed wall-washer lighting in the ceiling lights the face and texture of the brick wall, which lighter than the rest of the room and the dark ceiling, easily becomes the focal point of this practical room for family pleasure and relaxation.

Seasonal snacks by Deane

The sights and scents of the Thanksgiving season will be fully evident today through Wednesday in the five model homes at Deane Homes in University Park.

Traditional dishes such as turkey, pies, cookies and hot, spiced apple cider will be tantalizing visitors to the model complex, located just off University Drive about a mile east of Culver Drive, from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. all five days.

"It's a special time of the year," said Cary Garland, director of marketing for Deane Development Co. "We thought we might help to set the holiday mood for those who drop by."

Low income housing plans due airing

What's Your Problem?

Base your down payments on workable mortgage level

By DON CAMPBELL

How much is "enough?"

If we're talking about a down payment, then we're talking about the amount of money that the seller is willing to accept. If we're talking about "enough" repayment of money owed to a loan shark, then we're talking about a sum that will persuade him not to have our arms broken.

But when we're a potential buyer, with plenty of money at our disposal, then WE decide how much is "enough."

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

Do you think it is wise for me to make a very large down payment when I purchase a house?

I am 52 years old, retired military, with an annual pension of $10,500. I have $32,000 in cash and about $8,000 in stocks, mutual funds and E bonds. The family is just my wife and I. When I get employment, I expect to make a yearly salary of about $8,000. At present I am just looking the situation over here while renting a small apartment. Mr. C.J.B. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: Different situations, and different problems. The average family, that is, starts house-hunting with two questions that have to be resolved: How much can we afford to pay as a down payment; and how much is it going to cost us per month?

Your case is different because you have enough ready cash to buy virtually any house that suits your fancy — and that is the danger. There's going to be a temptation here to over-buy and take on a house that you really can't afford to maintain on your relatively fixed income.

So, start a little bit backwards and try to determine how much per month you can afford to pay and what size mortgage fits into this scheme of things. Once you've determined this, then you'll know how much of a down payment is going to be required to leave a mortgage that you can handle.

According to the "Rule of 60," your monthly payments (principal, interest, taxes, insurance and maintenance) shouldn't exceed 1/60th of your annual income — or, in your case, about $300 a month. To be on the safe side, we should think in terms of a house with a $24,000 mortgage because, at this level, approximately $200 a month is required to amortize it, including principal and interest. That leaves a cushion of $100 a month to handle taxes, insurance and maintenance.

This means that if a $40,000 home catches your eye, you are going to have to pay about $16,000 down to keep the mortgage at the $24,000 level. If you buy a $30,000 home you should pay at least $6,000 down ... and so it goes. (Figures are based on a 20 year, 8 per cent mortgage).

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

My question is about selling a house in the over-65 capital gain situation. You inferred that the deed must be under joint ownership to derive this tax benefit.

What if the wife (who is younger) is the sole owner of the house and the husband (who is several years older and will reach 65 first) cannot prove that he is, in fact, in joint ownership of the house, because his name is not legally present on the deed? As you may know, quite a few marriages were set up this way to protect the wife if something happened to the husband.

One other point. In the case of inheriting a home (no cash consideration, just "love and affection"), what value would be placed on this home so that the gain, or loss, could be computed after the purchase of a second home at $40,000? Mr. W.H. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: If the husband's name isn't on the deed as joint owner, then, as far as the law is concerned, he's not a joint owner no matter how much he may be so in reality. That means that, in order to capitalize on the over-65, once-in-a-lifetime capital gains treatment on the sale of your home, you're either going to have to wait until you, yourself, are 65 or, preferably, change the papers now to joint ownership.

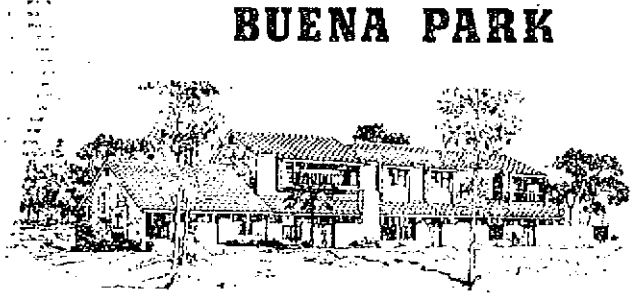

What about a gift house? The value put on it is the "fair market value" at the time the inheritance was made.

Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only representative questions of general interest. Write him in care of the I,PT, Box 230, Long Beach, 90844.

Why do stores start Christmas before Thanksgiving?

The pumpkins are still fresh from Halloween, Thanksgiving is not yet here, and already merchants have begun their Christmas shopping promotions! Many people may wonder what's the hurry. But suppose merchants didn't start Christmas early? It would not only pose many problems for them, but for YOU, the customer.

Remember how crowded our stores are the final two or three weeks before Christmas? Now imagine how difficult it would be to select that gift for a far-off friend and get it mailed on time.

Any business has a responsibility to all its customers, and many people prefer to do their Christmas shopping in the pre-Thanksgiving period when stores aren't quite so crowded.

And what about the children? Thousands of kids look forward to their annual visit with Santa Claus. If they had to wait till after Thanksgiving many hundreds would be unable to see jolly St. Nick.

Early promotion of Christmas also makes it easier for the merchants to stock and display the goods you'll be buying. It makes it easier, too, for his employees to provide the type of service you need during this peak season.

The reason then that merchants start Christmas before Thanksgiving can really be summed up in two words: "PUBLIC SERVICE" — the kind that adds to the cheer of the holiday season.

So do yourself and your favorite stores a favor. Start shopping now . . . while selections are at their best . . . while you have plenty of time to compare before buying . . . while sales personnel can give you the kind of service you prefer . . . for a Merrier Christmas Season.

Michigan can't 'Buck' trend

Ohio State plants Roses again, 21-14

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — For an unprecedented fourth consecutive year, his Ohio State Buckeyes are going to the Rose Bowl.

But to hear irascible Woody Hayes talk, Saturday's stunning 21-14 Big Ten championship victory over arch-rival Michigan was the biggest game in his 25-year Ohio State career.

"It's the greatest comeback I've ever had," said Hayes after holding deadline-frenzied reporters out of the locker room for 30 minutes following the game, in which the Buckeyes scored twice in the final four minutes to overcome a 14-7 Michigan lead.

"It's the greatest game I've ever coached," Hayes said. "We were outplayed until they scored in the second half. It's amazing how the game turned around...once we changed our pass protection, we were all right."

While Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin had his 100-yard-a-game streak snapped at 31 with a 46-yard rushing performance, it was quarterback Cornelius Greene who marched the Buckeyes to the tying score and Griffin's younger brother Ray who made the game's biggest play.

The younger Griffin, a sophomore safety, picked off a pass from Michigan freshman Rick Leach and returned it 30 yards to the Wolverine three yard line with just 2:23 remaining.

Pete Johnson—who scored all three Buckeye touchdowns—bolted over on the next play to snap a 14-14 tie and doom Michigan to defeat.

However, the Wolverines' consolation is a berth in the Orange Bowl against Big Eight champion Oklahoma, a 35-10 victor over Nebraska.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler, often criticized for running a conservative offense, had his Wolverines take to the air 21 times, only to see young Griffin's interception destroy his hopes of a triumph.

"When the score is 14-14, you've got two choices to make," he said. "You either play conservatively or you play to win. We decided before the game not to play for a tie, so we had to gamble late in the game and you all know what happened when we had to go to the air."

Michigan bolted ahead 14-7 with less than six minutes to play on a 43-yard drive.

Then Greene, mixing passes with a few runs, marched the Buckeyes to their second touchdown. Hayes didn't bother to go for a two-point conversion after Johnson's second touchdown, with 3:18 remaining, and Tom Klaban's conversion kick tied the game. The Buckeyes' better over-all record would have sent them to the Rose Bowl regardless of a tie, but the younger Griffin erased that possibility with his

Big win, big wait for Cal

STANFORD (AP) — The California Bears, who may have no place to go now, were well traveled on Saturday.

Especially Chuck Muncie, who would love to match his talents against those of Ohio State all-America Archie Griffin in the Rose Bowl.

"If Chuck Muncie isn't a Heisman Trophy winner, then who is?" Cal coach Mike White asked after his Bears trounced Stanford 48-15 to clinch at least a share of the Pacific-8 championship.

"If it happens, it will be a treat," Muncie said of the possibility of beating incumbent Griffin in this year's balloting.

"He's awesome, just awesome. He's got to be the biggest all-round threat in college football,"

Rich Waters, a Stanford defensive back, said of Muncie.

White, in a statement which told the story of the 78th Big Game between the schools, said, "Muncie can do it all — run, catch passes, block and throw."

The big tailback ran for 166 yards and three touchdowns, caught a pass from Joe Roth for another touchdown and threw a 46-yard scoring pass to Wes Walker.

Now comes the Big Wait for the Bears, who won't go to the Rose Bowl unless Southern California can beat UCLA Friday night. UCLA would tie for first with a victory and get the bowl invitation by virtue of an earlier 28-14 win over Cal.

Soaring Sooner

Sooners smother erring Nebraska

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma's season-long plague of fumbles finally rubbed off on someone else, and the Sooners rubbed it in with a shocking 35-10 victory over second-ranked Nebraska Saturday.

Oklahoma, ranked No. 7, lost three fumbles, but Nebraska wound up with a terminal case of turnovers. The previously-unbeaten Cornhuskers lost four of five bobbles, had two passes intercepted and Oklahoma turned the miscues into five touchdowns.

"Nebraska is a great team, but today they made some of the mistakes and turnovers that have hurt us in the past," said Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, soaking wet after his players tossed him in the showers.

"We were lucky. If Nebraska hadn't made some of those mistakes, we would have had a hard time winning. We made a lot of mistakes in the first half, but we were a good enough football team to come back and capitalize on Nebraska's mistakes in the second half."

The victory earned Oklahoma a trip to the Orange Bowl and a share of the Big Eight championship. Nebraska players previously voted to refuse any bowl bids if they lost to the Sooners but coach Tom Osborne said after the defeat his team will probably take another vote on whether to accept an invitation to the Fiesta Bowl against the winner of the Arizona-Arizona State game.

"We knew that turnovers would be the most important part of the ball game," said Osborne. "But that's football. Sometimes it bounces your way, sometimes it doesn't. As long as we were hanging on to the ball, I though we were playing pretty well. It was the same thing that happened to Oklahoma against Kansas."

Nebraska threatened three times in the first quarter, but the Cornhuskers could manage only a lone field goal from opportunities that could have produced three touchdowns.

The Sooners came from behind twice, on Steve Davis' fourth down, one-yard run in the second period and Horace Ivory's second chance, five-yard dash in the third quarter. It came two plays after a

SAN DIEGO — Mike Willis summed up the evening succinctly:

"It was a 'hellified' effort by everyone," Willis yelped in the Long Beach State locker room moments after the 49ers had given host San Diego State a 21-17 defeat as a going-away present.

The Aztecs are going independent next June 30 in hopes of seeking greater challenges than they have found recently in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

In their final year in the PCAA the Aztecs finished third with a 3-2 record, trailing San Jose State (5-0) and the remarkable 49ers (4-1), who in two years under Wayne Howard and his staff have rebounded from the depths of a 1-9-1 season to the heights of a 9-2 year.

Long Beach, which had driven inside the San Diego 20 in an upset attempt a year ago only to be thwarted by a pass interception, got its game-winner with 51 seconds remaining Saturday night when quarterback Joe Paopao flipped a swing pass to halfback Johnny Washington. Washington then outmaneuvered two San Diego defenders and just made the corner of the end zone.

The Washington heroics came on third-and-four at the San Diego five yard line. The former Riverside City College star had just come into the game to replace Herb Lusk who had sprained an ankle on the previous play.

Television replays of Washington's brilliant running seemed to indicate that the 165-pounder had been kocked out of bounds at the two.

"I made it into the end zone...barely," contradicted Washington. "I had nowhere to go outside so I faked inside and went out. I know I had the first down and I went over the marker in the end zone."

Washington's exceptional effort was actually a bonus for the 49ers, who merely ran his play to set up a fourth down maneuver.

"We weren't going for a field goal," Howard said. "We were setting up a two-point conversion play we'd worked on all week and we have to run the play from the right hashmark. That's why we threw the pass to Johnny."

Bobby Clarke and Ross Lonsberry also scored for the Flyers. Rangers' center Phil Esposito injured his ankle in the loss and will be lost to the team indefinately.

Islanders 5, Scouts 2— Clark Gillies scored two power-play goals and net-minder Billy Smither remained undefeated against Kansas City. Smith, who stopped 35 shots, has a 3-0-1 career mark vs. Kansas City. Ed Westfall, Bobby Nystrom and Garry Howatt scored the other Islanders' goals.

Canadiens 4, Maple Leafs 2 — Pete Mahovlich scored two goals and set up another as Montreal moved five points ahead of Kings. Mahovlich's second goal, just 18 seconds into the final stanza, proved to be the game winner.

Black Hawks 1, Canucks 1 — Chicago's Cliff Koroll and Vancouver's Ron Sedlbauer tallied just 15 seconds apart in first-period for only markers. The tie ran the Hawks' unbeaten streak to 11 games.

Blues 5, Red Wings 1— Derek Sanderson scored one goal and assisted on two others. Detroit outshot St. Louis 35-24 but goalie Gilles Gratton stopped 34 of those shots. Sanderson assisted on goals by Jerry Butler and Chuck Lefley.

Flames 6, North Stars 3— Gerry Meehan scored his first two goals of the season and Hillard Graves added a goal and two assists to pace Atlanta. Curt Bennett, Jean Lemieux and Ray Comeau scored the other Atlanta goals. The Flames connected on three of their first four second period shots to ice the game.

Pens crown Kings

PITTSBURGH (Special) — Veteran Vic Hadfield scored two goals and Syl Apps scored one and assisted on three others Saturday night as the Pittsburgh Penguins came alive with three times in the last period to defeat the Kings 6-3.

The game was tied three times before Apps tipped in a slapshot from the blue line by Bob Stackhouse to put the Penguins ahead to stay early in the third period.

Hadfield's first goal came in a wild first period and tied the score at 2-2. His second at 8:35 of the final period put the game out of reach.

FORMER King Lowell MacDonald, who set up both of Hadfield's goals, also had an assist on a first period power-play goal by Jean Pronovost, which gave the Penguins a short-lived 3-2 lead.

Ron Stackhouse started the scoring for Pittsburgh early in the first period when he tipped in the rebound of a shot by Pronovost. Tom Williams tied it 1-1 for the Kings when he and Bob Berry engineered a two-onone breakaway three minutes later.

Marcel Dionne, breaking out of a five-game scoring slump, put the Kings ahead 2-1 when he blasted a 30-foot shot past Michel Plasse. Then came Hadfield's first goal and Pronovost's go-ahead score before the end of the period.

VICTIM of the six-goal onslaught was Rogie Vachon who had shut out Pittsburgh four times in his last seven games against them. It was only the third win for the Penguins in their last 13 meeting with the Kings, two of those games ending in ties.

Dionne, who came to the Kings in a controversial off-season deal with Detroit, faces his old teammates for the first time tonight when the Kings and Red Wings tangle in Detroit. Some familiar faces who will be opposing the Kings are Dan Maloney and Terry Harper, the two players the Kings gave up to acquire Dionne.

Fullerton routed, 70-0

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Halfback Ben Garry scored four touchdowns Saturday night as Southern Mississippi's Golden Eagles smashed Fullerton State, 70-0.

Garry scored on runs of 1, 12 and 8 yards and took a 13-yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Ken Alderman as the Eagles ran wild against the hapless Californians.

The Southern defense held Fullerton to minus 11 yards rushing and a net gain of 67 yards as the offense ran up the second-highest point total in Eagle history. Only a 76-0 victory over Northwestern Louisiana in 1951 topped the night's output.

The USM attack netted 468 yards rushing and 81 passing.

They couldn't stop it

Palomino gets a lesson and a draw

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Carlos Palomino started another class Saturday night.

Ringwise Hedgemon Lewis gave the Long Beach State senior a boxing lesson at the Olympic Auditorium, although settling for a draw in their 10-round welterweight bout. There were no knockdowns.

"I'm satisfied," said Palomino, who entered the ring as a 10-7 favorite of the estimated 4,500 spectators and emerged with his record at 18-1-3.

"It was a close fight, but I don't think I lost it. I could have won it if I had been doing the things I know I can do."

Referee Rudy Jordan scored it 4-4, judge Pat Murphy 3-3 and judge Lou Filippo was by far more generous to Palomino than anyone else around ringside, favoring the fighting 49er by 6-3.

The Independent, Press-Telegram had it 6-6, and Palomino had to come from far behind in the last two rounds to manage that.

Palomino spent the eight rounds trying to get a fix on his elusive prey, who was grinning broadly through his mouthpiece at the less experienced man's frustration as early as the second round.

Lewis, 56-6, needed only the first round to learn that it wouldn't pay to press his younger and stronger foe, so he settled into the fencing game that had confounded most of his opponents—including, at times, champion Jose Napoles.

Palomino was impressed.

"Oh, yes," Carlos said, agreeing that Hedgemon was the class opponent of his career. "He's a smart fighter . . . a two-time challenger for the title."

Lewis was characteristically cocky although he felt like he had lost.

"I kept waiting to be that old man you guys were writing about all week," the 29-year-old campaigner told reporters. "It never happened."

But when Palomino, 26, caught him with a solid left hook late in the seventh round, Lewis sneaked a quick look at the clock. He also seemed awfully weary at the finish, especially after he got careless in close and Palomino wobbled his knees with a stiff left and overhand right with a minute remaining in the ninth.

"I'm not the kind of guy that's gonna run the whole fight," said Lewis, who weighed 148, a half-pound more than Palomino. "I might have slowed down a little, but not enough to lose the fight."

Palomino thought he had wasted too much time.

"I was just a little cautious," Carlos said. "In the early rounds especially, I wasn't doing what we'd worked on. Then in the ninth I thought I hurt him, but I couldn't get there with the shot I needed."

Manager Jackie McCoy said, "You've gotta give Hedgemon a little credit for that."

Both sides indicated they would be agreeable to a rematch, although Lewis' handler, Eddie Futch, said his fighter will go through with his scheduled Dec. 12 bout against Harold Wester in Masdison Square Garden.

"I want to fight," Hedge said. "That's what I do for a living."

For Palomino, it's back to the books.

Tury Pineda, 137½, of Mexicali, Mexico, scored a 10-round decision over stubborn Claude Durden, 134½, in a companion bout.

49ERS WIN—

in Long Beach State annals.

San Diego, exploiting a 23-yard pass interference penalty on Long Beach, had driven 84 yards in 10 plays to go ahead, 17-14, with 6:52 to play on Ollie Brown's one-yard run.

But Long Beach responded by consuming 69 yards in 18 plays to get Washington in position to win the game.

Five times on the drive the 49ers were faced with third downs and each time they got the required yardage.

On one occasion, San Diego chipped in with a holding penalty; on two others Lusk ran for the needed yards; and on the others Paopao hit Leanell Jones with 16-yard passes.

Both of Jones' catches came on third-and-10 situations.

"Leanell did a super job," Howard said of the sprawling receptions.

"I'm just glad I was able to do it," replied Jones, who had caught only 10 passes in the 49ers' previous 10 games.

Lusk's second run was a bold call by Howard.

It was third-and-six at the San Diego 19 and Long Beach had thrown in that situation virtually all night.

But Howard called a sweep and this time Lusk bolted around the left side of the Aztec defense for eight yards.

Lusk carried twice more before spraining an ankle.

Exit the Praying Tailback, enter the Miracle Maker — Mr. Johnny Washington.

This is not to slight Lusk.

The 195-pound senior, who entered the contest as the nation's No. 3 rusher with 1,413 yards, and was playing with a broken hand and a sprained knee, stung the Aztecs for 183 yards and a touchdown before turning the heroics over to Washington.

It was Lusk's courageous 66-yard run that got Long Beach back in the game after San Diego had forged to a 10-0 second quarter lead.

Lusk bolted off tackle on the 66-yarder, shook off two tacklers, got to the outside behind a block from wide receiver Tom Boehme and struggled the 66 yards to the end zone with San Diego's Kevin Feeney about one step behind much of the way.

Willis, the remarkable receiver from Long Beach City College, accounted for all 68 yards in Long Beach's other scoring drive, which consumed less than a minute at the end of the first half.

Willis first caught a "streak" pass for 38 yards from Paopao, then lured an Aztec defender into a 21-yard pass interference penalty before taking a nine-yard strike from Paopao for his first touchdown since the opening game of the season.

Willis finished with five catches for 73 yards.

Perhaps the evening's most heroic performance, however, was turned in by the beleagured 49er defense.

The 49ers were playing the contest without starting tackles Jeff Lyall and Rich Valenzuela and had another tackle, Al Best, injure his knee before the game.

But Best played, leading a crippled corps of interior linemen that included Frank Allen, Kevin Russell, Ron Kipp, Fred Bryant and Kise Fiatoa, who were also performing in subpar health.

That group accepted the challenge in the final 30 minutes, yielding the one score but stopping all three of San Diego's other drives with intereceptions.

Two of the interceptions, by Julius Mathis and Ben Randolph, were inside the Long Beach 10.

Randolph's came with 16 seconds remaining.

"I'm glad I got it," sighed a tired Randolph. "They were picking on me all night."

The 49er senior was grabbed by Mathis in the lockerroom.

"If I'd gotten that last guy you'd have gone all the way," Mathis said.

LBCC tumbles East L.A. but Valley champ

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

Long Beach City College played its trump card Saturday night, but L.A. Valley didn't follow suit.

While the Vikings were disposing of host East Los Angeles, 14-3, just freeway miles away Valley was putting the finishing touches on its first Metropolitan Conference championship since 1955 with a 52-28 win over injury-riddled El Camino.

The Vikings did their part, but Valley spoiled the party. A Long Beach win and a Valley loss would have created a three-way Metro deadlock and forced a vote for a playoff representative.

But Valley's victory ruined all the Vikings' hopes. The Monarchs jumped off to a 14-0 lead over El Camino, stretched it to 28-14 at the half and then exploded for three final-quarter TDs to put the icing on only their third winning season in 20 years. Valley will meet Fresno in the Potato Bowl next weekend at Bakersfield.

Despite the Valley-El Camino outcome, Long Beach still staged quite a comeback, winning four of its last five games—including its last three in a row—to finish with a 4-5 over-all record after dropping its first four.

All the scoring came in the second quarter. East L.A.'s Efrain Velasco put the Huskies on top with a 42-yard field goal five seconds into the second period. Long Beach roared right back one minute later when freshman Greg Hopkins marched the offense five plays for a TD following a 66-yard kickoff return by Ed Gillies from the Viking goal line to the Husky 34.

Hopkins used Charlie White for four yards, then on third-and-six rolled to his right, stopped and threw across the grain to tight end Larry Koontz for 30 yards and six points.

Thanks again to Gillies, the Vikings were back on the board with 4:13 remaining before the half. On fourth-and-11, the sophomore "Mr. Everything" raced 63 yards with a fake punt to the Husky one, setting up White's touchdown.

The night was one of severe frustration for the sixth-ranked Huskies. East L.A.'s trouble began even before kickoff when it was learned that the state's 14th-rated over-all passer, Walt Ransom, had been hospitalized with an agonizing kidney injury sustained during last week's loss.

His replacement, freshman Mike Willams, ran well, but was hesitant and erratic with his passing and in general was unable to move the offense.

Husky running back Alvin Fike, coming off a disappointing 29-yard output last week, surpassed the 1,000-yard mark with 2:16 remaining in the first period and finished with 68 yards on 19 carries.

Cerritos finishes with tie

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

Cerritos College concluded a season of frustration on an appropriate note Saturday night, combining a season low 260 total yards with 104 yards in penalties en route to a 28-28 tie with visiting Grossmont College.

The deadlock gave the Falcons a 4-4-1 record, 2-3-1 in South Coast Conference play, and Grossmont finished with a 4-5-1 mark, 1-4-1 in the SCC.

Cerritos had recovered from a 14-point deficit early in the period to take a 28-21 lead on Trini Gardea's one-yard touchdown plunge with 3:08 remaining in the third quarter.

The Falcons were quiet thereafter and Grossmont concluded the scoring with Larry Downs' three-yard TD run with 5:06 to play. The Griffins had a chance to win the game with four seconds remaining but Jorge Da Silva's 46-yard field goal attempt fell far short.

Cerritos, which fumbled four times and tossed up an interception, stayed close only through the thievery of its defenders. The Falcons surrenderd 314 yards but forced six turonvers, three of which were followed by touchdowns. Bo Larson (two interceptions) and Billy Whitford (interception and fumble recovery) led the way while Eddie Riley and Mike French also picked off errant passes.

Gardea entered the game at quarterbackafter a sluggish start by Jim Conley and completed 11 of 18 passes for 141 yards and a touchdown. The Falcons gained only 89 rushing yards, led by Marty Campbell's 68 and a pair of touchdowns by Ken Oates.

Carelessness proved Cerritos' downfall, however, as it permitted Grossmont six first downs by penalties, the last on an offsides call during a Grossmont punt with only a minute to play.

Trojans lace Australians in cage debut

Forward Greg White scored 19 points to pace USC to an 87-56 victory over the touring Australian Olympic basketball team in the Trojans' 1975-76 debut Saturday night at the Sports Arena.

The Trojans used an aggressive man-to-man defense, coupled with superior board strength, to hand the Australians a fifth successive loss on their current tour of West Coast schools.

San Jose earned bid to a bowl

San Jose State, with a 9-1 record (its only loss was to Cal by three points), should have received a bowl bid, in the opinion of Long Beach State's Wayne Howard.

"You can't ask for much more than what San Jose accomplished," said Howard, who found himself in the unaccustomed position of supporting a conference archrival.

"San Jose's record is far better than that of a lot of bowl-bound teams and the Spartans played equal to two Pac-8 teams in Rose Bowl contention (Cal and Stanford). Bypassing San Jose was an insult to both the Spartans and our conference."

If his 49ers had been in San Jose's position, would Howard have lobbied for a bowl bid?

"Hell, yes. I'd try like the dickens to get our team into some bowl. We would have earned the right to a bowl berth. The best team in our conference is more deserving of a bowl bid than some of those third and fourth place teams with three or four losses."

MUCH MOANING by Dodger fans has resulted from the recent trade with Atlanta, but one very responsible baseball man claims "the Dodgers made a great deal".

His explanation: "The Dodgers really gave up very little, outside of Lee Lacy, to land Dusty Baker and Ed Goodson. Baker is the young spark and potential super star they needed, while Goodson is a very good pinch-hitter and a guy who could have a big year. He's done it before.

"The Dodgers didn't need the other three players they traded. Jim Wynn's arm was gone and everybody knew it. His power was diminishing, too. Tom Paciorek was a great minor league hitter. Period! He was a terrible defensive fielder, which (Walt) Alston and (Al) Campanis realized. Jerry Royster could help the Braves, but he wasn't really needed by the Dodgers.

"Sure the Dodgers are being criticized now, but how quickly fans forget. Remember when they traded Singer, Frank Robinson, Valentine and Grabarkewitz for Andy Messersmith? They were criticized then, too, but who's laughing now?"

Campanis, the crafty Greek, rarely is outfoxed. He has a reason for every move. While his latest deal — on paper — seems to favor the Braves, I, too, remember the uproar when he dispatched Robinson and Singer to the Angels. I have a strong hunch that Mr. Baker will justify Campanis this time, too.

WHEN DON MERRY interviewed Dr. Stephen Horn, he discovered that the Long Beach State president learned early to seize the initiative.

As a high school student in Hollister, with a passing interest in journalism, Horn was hired by the town newspaper to deliver accounts of his school's football games.

"I got paid five cents an inch," he recalls, "and I bet our school was the only one in the state which got 55 and 60-inch stories.

"Sometimes they were a little longer because I included a few paragraphs on what the band did at halftime."

"But," he conceded, "that was only because I was a member of the band."

Would you say that was a Horn tooting his own horn?

AFTER A RECENT Ram game, a youngster shoved a piece of paper into linebacker Jim Youngblood's hands, demanding an autograph.

When Youngblood returned the signed paper, the kid looked at the signature and snorted:

"Aw, nuts. This ain't the right Youngblood."

If looks could kill, Jim Youngblood (not Jack) would have withered the brat in his tracks.

HOW WAS RON JESSIE able to catch 10 passes in a game (vs. Atlanta last Sunday) in these days of sophisticated defenses? The question was posed to Chuck Knox, who answered:

"The first question is, 'Where was Ron Jessie?'.

"You see, we used several different offensive formations and Jessie was in a different place on every pass play. Even as sophisticated as defenses are today, a good receiver in a different place can catch passes all day."

The Ram coach added this afterthought: "It helps, too, when someone like Ron Jessie is single-covered."

To which, I'm sure, the Falcons will say "Amen!".

RICH SAUL CLAIMS he cannot pick out any single person as his toughest defensive opponent because the game has changed so much today that he faces a different man across the line on nearly every play.

"You play against so many defenses today—New Orleans alone has seven— that you hardly see the same guy twice each game," said the Ram center. "It's not like the old days when you played a whole game with the same guy against you.

"I might play opposite four or five people in one game today. So it's impossible for a center to single one guy who's the toughest because it's never the same one who lines up against the center. They're all tough, anyway."

IN THE AFTERMATH of the controversial last-second touchdown that paved the way for the Cardinals' win over the Redskins last Sunday, it might be pointed out that the NFL has 11 new officials this season.

The inexperienced ones have been involved in numerous controversies, including the Cardinal-Redskin fuss and a very bad call (films substantiated the error) that probably cost the Rams a win over the 49ers.

It seems imperative, therefore, that the NFL install a training camp for officials, something it does not have now. Most NFL officials are lawyers, bank officials, schoolteachers—people used to exercising authority during the week. They then seem to extend that authority onto the field.

The result of the lack of training—most NFL officials have graduated from college ranks and there is a big difference in pro and college rules—and overextension of authority is a chain of inconsistent calls.

Too many games have been decided by bad calls and it's high time the mighty NFL shapes up and educates its hired hands.

Hudson High streak ends

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. (AP) — The nation's longest prep football winning streak was snapped at 72 Saturday as Ishpeming defeated Hudson High School, 38-22, for the Michigan Class C State Championship.

Hudson High, representing a tiny Michigan town of about 2,500 persons, had set the record last week in the semifinal round of the playoffs, the first state championships in modern Michigan history.

The previous record of 71 consecutive victories by a prep team had been held for a decade by a Jefferson City, Mo., high school.

Hudson High last lost in the opening game of the 1968 season. Over the last decade, the school has won 86 games, lost five and tied one.

Legend least of Bartow's concerns at UCLA

GENE BARTOW, UCLA's new basketball coach, receives congratulations from his predecessor, John Wooden (left) after Bruins' opening win Friday night over Australian National Team. All were smiles at Bartow's debut.

The first thing Gene Bartow noticed about UCLA was that it's the biggest city he's ever coached in. Not Los Angeles. Just UCLA.

The next thing he noticed was that the basketball players are a little taller than the ones he had at Greentop High.

People have wondered how J.D. Morgan, the big kahuna of Westwood, ever found Bartow. It would have been easier a few years ago. There were only 412 people in Browning, Mo., his hometown.

But by the time John Wooden withdrew blushing after his 10th national championship, Bartow had progressed into prominence, in spite of himself.

"I started out at a small high school," he says. "I had no great ambitions to be a major college coach."

But up he came from Greentop to St. Charles to Shelbina to Central Missouri State to Valparaiso to Memphis State to Illinois, collecting a state title here, a small college title there, some conference successes and even some international renown for his work with the Puerto Rican team that finished fifth in the '72 Olympics and the U.S. National team that swept through the People's Republic of China, 8-0, like Chiang Kai Shek in the good old days.

Just a smalltown kid with no ambition at all.

SUDDENLY, UCLA was calling him on the phone.

"My first impulse when J.D. talked to me," Bartow says, "was, is this the right thing to do—to try to follow John Wooden? Some people don't feel it can be done, with peace of mind.

"But then I got to thinking, here is the best basketball program in the country, and I'm a basketball coach. If you're a politician and somebody gives you the chance to be President, I think most people would go that route."

Actually, Bartow already has outstripped Wooden. John never won a national championship in the first game of the season.

Of course, it was the Australian national championship, which the Bruins may or may not claim after Friday night's warmup to their serious season opener next Saturday.

They'll be playing in St. Louis, Mo., the new coach's home state, against the University of Indiana, which represents the former coach's home state and is considered by those informed on such matters to be the best college team in the country.

The game will be on national TV. Clearly, Bartow has no cause to be nervous at all.

COMPARISONS BETWEEN the personal and coaching styles of Wooden and Bartow are inevitable.

RICH ROBERTS

Bartow believes in God. Wooden was God. But the "Clean Gene" image disturbs the new man.

"Some of my Valparaiso (Ind.) friends like it very much," Bartow says, faintly smiling. "I don't know when it started. Maybe some of the Memphis players called me that. I'd rather it not be used. Some people might infer the wrong thing.

"I try to attend church every Sunday with my family—the Methodist in Reseda. I don't drink, I don't smoke, I very rarely swear. No big deal. I think J.D. is concerned about this kind of thing, but I think J.D. hired me because he thought I could do the job.

"If I can't win I'll have serious problems. It won't matter whether I swear a lot or not."

MORGAN DID give Bartow one bit of advice.

"He emphasized," Gene says, "in his own way, 'I think you can do the job. Don't worry. You're your own man. Don't try to be somebody else.'

"There's no doubt I've studied John Wooden. As a high school coach I listened to him at clinics. We've used some of his drills for a number of years. At Valparaiso I used his 2-2-1 zone press, as he had explained it.

"We shared the office for five months. Certainly, he has not tried to get involved. When I ask him for advice he's very cooperative. He's interested. He recruited these players. He wants us to be successful.

"I've said to him many times, hey, come in to practice, walk on the floor and make yourself at home. So he comes, sits down and watches.

"If I had any hangups about John Wooden, I wouldn't have taken the UCLA job. John Wooden won't bother me. Losing a game or two might."

BARTOW, 45, seems to be geared low enough to withstand the heat when critics descend at the first sign of adversity with the admonishment that "John Wooden wouldn't have done it this way."

Bartow, who has settled with wife Ruth and three children in Northridge, ponders that moment in his relaxed Southern drawl.

"If I had any hangups about John Wooden, I wouldn't have taken the job at UCLA. John Wooden won't bother me. Losing a game or two might."

"The first time we lose a one-pointer and someone says John would have won that game by 10, I'll probably agree with him.

"This is one thing that worries me about being rated the No. 2 team in the country (behind Indiana). UCLA lost a great deal more than many people think. Back where I come from, we always figured John Wooden was worth 8 or 10 points on the bench. I believe that. I think he's the best basketball coach that ever lived.

"I think David Meyers will be rookie of the year in the NBA. That's quite a loss. Pete Trgovich, in my mind from reviewing films, was the best defensive guard in the Pac-8."

BARTOW DOES have two superb forwards returning in Marques Johnson and Richard Washington, plus some hot young freshmen he recruited himself. Wooden had a knack for suppressing the star system into a tight team unity.

"One of the great strengths of John was that he was able to have completely unselfish basketball teams," Bartow says. "Will our team be as unselfish as John's? I hope so. But I doubt that anybody can do it quite like John Wooden did it.

"On my real good teams I probably tended to give 'em a little more freedom. This may be a weakness."

Bartow, an easy man to like, leans back in his chair and laughs at the absurdity of his situation: the successor to a legend.

"I've joked about it," Gene says, "that this job has been great fun for the first eight months. I don't think John's been that difficult to follow. Of course, the games haven't started yet.

"If things don't work out, I can always go back to another small high school."

UCLA's Walker tips hat to Trojans

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Rich Walker wants to know what all the excitement is about. He says he doesn't understand this deep-seeded hatred between UCLA and USC fans.

It's a mystery to him why couples often won't speak to one another the week of the annual Bruin-Trojan war.

"I have a high school hatred," Walker admits, "but I can't relate to all these other things. Right now, the Trojans own the city and that gives them an edge in recruiting.

"They have an arrogance about them which they justly deserve. They've proven how good they are. If we beat them Friday night, we beat them... simple as that. All the pre-game talk doesn't mean a thing.

"I'd much rather talk about the game afterward than now because if we beat them, it'll be one of the most satisfying victories in UCLA history."

Walker is expected to play a large role in the Bruin game plan. As a tight end, he'll likely be on the receiving end of more than a few John Sciarra passes. He'll also do his usual share of blocking because the UCLA outside option game simply will not function without it.

UCLA's prize is the Rose Bowl, USC's is pride. Walker can tell you all about pride. His outgoing personality bubbles over with the stuff.

"If there wasn't a word mentioned in the newspapers or on radio or television all week, the Coliseum would still be packed Friday. It's that type of game. But how many of the people there are really loyal?"

Rick, who never attended a USC or UCLA home game until he was being recruited, recalls last year's Notre Dame-USC contest.

"I was sitting in the USC rooting section and you wouldn't believe the people leaving at halftime when the Trojans were down. Everybody else was at the concession stands when A.D. ran back the second-half kickoff. That's not loyalty to me.

"After one of our games this year I met a man in the dressing room who said he'd been a UCLA fan for the last 15 years. That's loyalty to me. I want to win for our team and for that man, not for the backslappers who are there one week and not the next."

"UCLA has all the ingredients to be a class situation. The basketball and track programs are already super and the rest of the athletic teams are at or near the top, too. If we beat USC, UCLA becomes the ideal place to play college football.

Besides being one of the Bruins' most ardent recruiters, Walker is also one of their most unselfish players. His relationship with fellow tight end Don Pederson is one of mutual admiration.

Lately coach Dick Vermeil has used the twin tight end formation for added blocking strength and it's meant more opportunities for Walker and Pederson to catch Passes.

"Don's caught seven passes and I've got nine. That's 16 catches out of 19 balls thrown to us which isn't a bad percentage. We've also accounted for three of the four touchdowns through the air."

While Pederson is a veteran tight end, Walker was switched over from split end this season and was slow making the adjustment. He incurred a number of penalties early in the year, but played a perfect game in the 31-9 win over Oregon State, catching four passes for 146 yards and one score. Those accomplishments earned the 6-4, 225-pounder the Pacific-8 Conference's offensive player of the week award.

No one was prouder than Doris Walker, who has been mother and father to Rick, his younger brother Derrick and sister Kisha since her husband died of cancer at age 44.

"My mother put tremendous pressure on me to make me a better young man and I love her to death for that," says Rick. "I've got a lot of respect for that woman. I don't know if I could have taken charge and raised a family like she did in the same situation."

Rick would like to give her some UCLA Rose Bowl tickets as a Christmas present. "I won't go myself unless I'm playing."

That means a victory over USC.

Husky spree clips Cougars

SEATTLE (AP) — Washington charged from behind to score on a 93-yard interception return and a 78-yard pass play in less than a minute of the fourth quarter Saturday to defeat cross-state rival Washington State, 28-27.

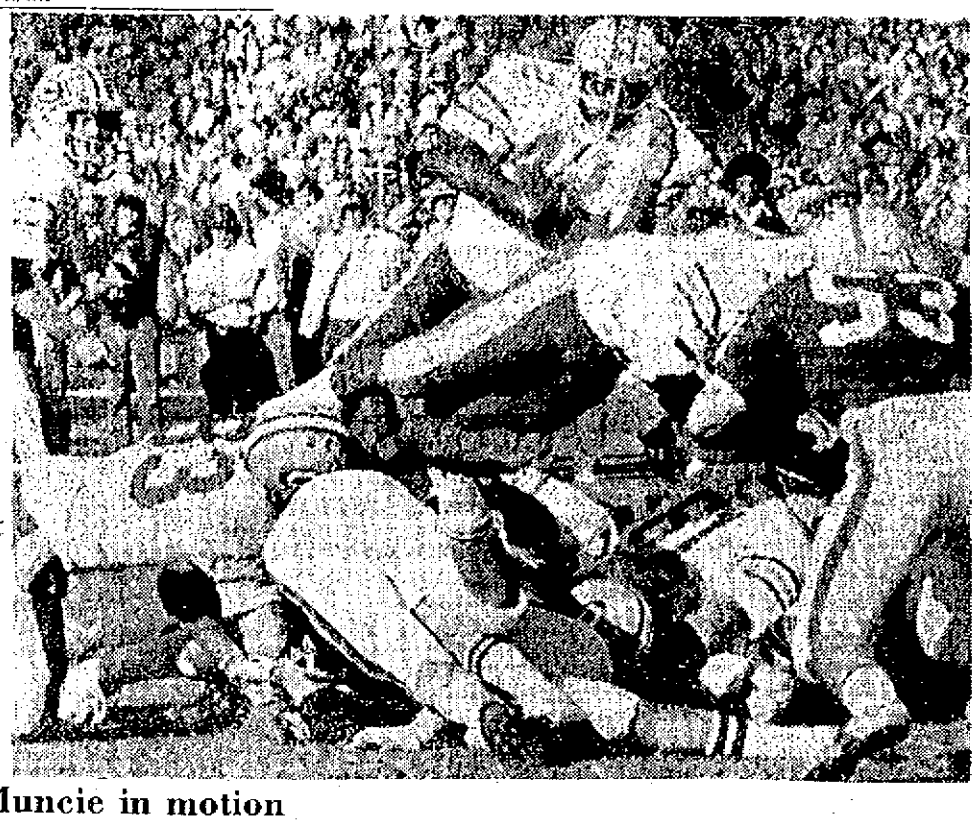

Underdog Washington State moved to a 24-14 halftime lead and picked up a second half field goal. The Cougars proceeded to dominate the second half and appeared en route to a clinching score in the fourth quarter.

Then, Al Burleson picked off a John Hopkins' pass and raced 93 yards to score.

After the ensuing kickoff, Washington State ran three plays and punted to Washington's 22-yard line. On the first play from scrimmage, Husky quarterback Warren Moon threw a pass that went into a crowd downfield. The ball was deflected into the hands of receiver Bob Gaines, who completed the 78-yard touchdown play that gave Washington the victory.

EUGENE (AP) — George Bennett rushed for 129 yards in 34 carries and Oregon returned an interception for a touchdown and recovered a fumble to set up another as the Ducks posted a 14-7 victory over the Beavers.

Oregon State's lone score came when Jay Locey stepped in front of Oregon's Tommy Garrett, picked up Jack Henderson's pass and returned it down the sideline 94 yards for the score.

Henderson, a sophomore who was fourth in the nation in passing going into the contest, completed just four of 18 passes for 36 yards and had two intercepted.

Arkansas still 'alive'

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas quarterback Scott Bull accounted for two touchdowns during a 96-second span and the Razorbacks scored a 31-14 victory over Texas Tech Saturday.

With Arkansas leading 10-0, Bull hooked up with tight end Marvin Daily on a 44-yard touchdown pass, then came back 1:36 later to score on a one-yard sneak. That made it 24-0 with 1:18 remaining in the first half.

The victory kept the Razorbacks in the Southwest Conference title chase and ended the Raiders' winning streak at four. Tech, in its first year under Steve Sloan, finished at 6-5.

Arkansas, already assured of a bowl bid, is 8-2 for the season and 5-1 in the conference. Arkansas would go to the Cotton Bowl if Texas A&M beats Texas Nov. 28 and Arkansas beats A&M Dec. 6. If not, the Razorbacks will play USC on Dec. 22 in the Liberty Bowl at Memphis.

TCU tips Rice, ends 20-game loss streak

FORT WORTH (AP) — Lee Cook threw two touchdown passes and scored once himself Saturday as Texas Christian edged Rice, 28-21, to end major college football's longest current losing streak at 20.

A meager audience of 12,875 watched the Horned Frogs end two years of frustration that dated back to 1974's season-opening triumph over Texas-Arlington.

Coach Jim Shofner's Horned Frogs had dropped 10 games in a row in 1975 before concluding this season on Saturday's high note.

Cook sneaked across from the one to tie the score at 7-7 in the second quarter and then hurled an 11-yard touchdown pass to Mike Renfro to lift the Frogs to a 14-7 halftime lead.

TCU blunted an Owl scoring threat shortly before the half, then turned Allen Hooker's third-period pass interception into a 21-7 cushion with Cook tossing three yards to Bobby Cowan for the TD.

Fullback Gerry Modzelewski bolted across from the one to climax a 51-yard TCU scoring drive late in the third quarter.

The loss was the Owls' fifth in succession in the Southwest Conference.

CAL—

"I'm going to be glued to the television tube Friday night," said Roth, the junior quarterback who finished the season with 1,880 passing yards and 14 touchdown passes.

"I'm just going to try and relax, maybe go up to the mountains," said Muncie, who likes to hike when he isn't in uniform running over tacklers.

"It's very satisfying to know you are on top," said White. "You can bet we'll be routing real hard for Southern Cal."

In Muncie's farewell performance, at least in the regular season, he went over the 3,000-yard mark in career rushing. Other final totals for the senior eagerly awaited by pro football include 37 touchdowns, 230 points and 4,188 yards all-purpose running.

Another Cal senior, wide receiver Steve Rivera, caught four passes to increase his school record career total to 138.

Sophomore place kicker Jim Breech scored 12 points, giving him a Cal single-season record of 72 points on kicks.

"Cal is a great football team," said Stanford coach Jack Christiansen. "I definitely think they're a Rose Bowl type of team, especially offensively."

The Bears were at their offensive best Saturday. Muncie made touchdown runs of one and 16 yards and caught a seven-yard scoring pass from Roth in the first half. In the final quarter, after Stanford scored a safety and a touchdown to pull within eight points, Muncie scored on a three-yard run and then fired a 46-yard bomb to Walker.

Stanford's offense, unable to move the ball on the ground, relied almost completely on the passing of Guy Benjamin who threw touchdown passes to Tony Hill and Jim Jenke but was victimized by three interceptions.

Phil Heck and Syd Lofton of the Bears intercepted Benjamin passes to set up Muncie's third touchdown and a 38-yard field goal by Breech, with both scores coming in the final two minutes of the first half.

Muncie carried the ball 30 times, and his 166 yards rushing gave him a total of 1,460 for the season and 3,052 for his career. Both totals are Cal records, along with his 37 touchdowns over three seasons.

Muncie's pass to Walker off a tailback option play was his third this season. He completed all three attempts for 146 yards and two touchdowns.

The California offense, ranked first in college football, compiled 487 yards.

LSU has easy time with Tulane, 42-6

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tackle Steve Cassidy and a glue-fingered defensive secondary set up four touchdowns to give Louisiana State a 42-6 victory over archrival Tulane Saturday night.

Cassidy and his defensive teammates stopped Tulane's running game with less than 10 yards for three quarters of the game, and kept intense pressure on Green Wave quarterback Buddy Gilbert.

Gilbert was intercepted six times, and four of them were converted into LSU touchdowns. Safety Mike Leonard picked off two of the errant passes, and Clinton Burrell and Ronnie Barber got one each.

Tailback Terry Robiskie scored two of LSU's touchdowns on one-yard plunges in the first and third quarters. Tight end Bo Dunphy took a 24-yard pass from quarterback Pat Lyons for the game's opening score and wide receiver Carl Trimble scored a second-quarter touchdown, turning a deflected pass into a 40-yard scoring play.

Wm. and Mary scores upset

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Keith Fimian plunged two yards for the winning touchdown early in the fourth quarter and Tom Rozantz fired a pair of first period scoring passes as William and Mary upset Richmond, 31-21, Saturday.

The Indians clinched the victory with 45 seconds remaining on Jim Ryan's 21-yard field goal.

The Indians finished 2-9 overall and 2-3 in the conference, while Richmond, which earlier had clinched the league title, ended at 5-6 over-all and 5-1 in the conference.

Irish ramble to 32-9 win

MIAMI (AP) — Defensive end Ross Browner set up a touchdown with a fumble recovery at Miami's three-yard line and gave Notre Dame a safety three minutes later as the Irish scored 16 points in the second period to post a 32-9 Saturday night.

The Irish, ending their first season under coach Dan Devine with an 8-3 record, got their other second-period tally after linebacker Doug Becker recovered another Miami bobble at the Hurricane's 19.

Browner pounced on a wild pitch by Miami quarterbacker Kary Baker at the start of the second quarter to set up a two-yard scoring run by Jerome Heavens that broke a 3-3 tie.

The safety came four plays later when Miami's Mike Archer, in punt formation in the end zone on fourth down, attempted to pass and was tackled by Browner.

Steve Niehaus's jarring tackle of freshman fullback Otis Anderson late in the half resulted in the recovery by Becker. Irish quarterback Rick Slager threw to tight end Ken MacAfee for 16 yards and then hit McAfee for three yards and the score.

A fourth-quarter fumble recovery by Notre Dame's Willie Fry at Miami's 41 set up a touchdown early in the last quarter on a four-yard run by Al Hunter. The Irish added another touchdown with 55 seconds left to play on a seven-yard pass from Slager to MacAfee.

Vols hold on, 17-13

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Stanley Morgan and Randy Wallace provided the firepower as Tennessee grabbed a 17-0 lead early in the second period, then held on for a 17-13 victory over Kentucky Saturday.

Tennessee's early lead was sparked by Morgan's 80-yard sprint on an off-tackle play with 2:48 left in the first period.

Wallace, a junior quarterback, provided the passing that led to a 32-yard Tennessee field goal with 7:55 left in the first period and a one-yard touchdown with 14:06 to go in the second.

Kentucky rallied with an 80yard march that ended with 2:41 left in the first half, when quarterback Derrick Ramsey rambled 37 yards for a touchdown.

In the fourth period, Ramsey hit sophomore end Dave Trosper with a short pass that turned into a 77-yard touchdown play.

However, Kentucky's try for a two-point conversion failed and the Wildcats could get no closer than the Tennessee 37 thereafter.

Duke, North Carolina settle for 17-17 tie

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Costly fumbles by Duke quarterback Mike Dunn and North Carolina fullback Bob Loomis halted long drives in the closing minutes as the two old rivals fought to a 17-17 tie Saturday.

It was only the fourth tie in the long series that dates back to 1888. Each team has won 28 times.

Duke appeared to be headed for a touchdown late in the fourth period, driving to the Tar Heels 12. As Dunn circled left end on a keeper, he fumbled, and Bobby Trott recovered for the Tar Heels on the nine.

Moments later, senior quarterback Billy Paschall then led the Tar Heels on a drive to the Duke 14. On the next play, Loomis fumbled, and Rod May recovered for Duke on its 12 with only seconds left.

If the Chicago Bears, 19-point underdogs, perform to expectations at the Coliseum today, one question sure to be asked of them is:

"How would you compare the Rams to the Dolphins, Vikings and Bears?"

One logical answer might be, "I don't know . . . how long was I out?"

The Bears are beginning to feel like the Scrap Iron Johnsons of the NFL, all because of a pounding schedule that finds them meeting their fourth division leader within six weeks.

They lost to Pittsburgh, 34-3; Miami, 46-13, and Minnesota, 13-9, but the last is thrown out because it was played on Monday night, when anything can happen. Didn't Fred Dryer score a touchdown for the Rams on an intercepted pass?

They might even have beaten the Vikings if their left cornerback had not left for lunch at a critical point. Fran Tarkenton spotted the vacancy in the Bears' defense and lobbed an easy TD to Jim Lash.

Linebacker Doug Buffone, who calls signals for the Bears and insists he didn't call a 4-3-3, votes for Miami.

"They're just awesome," Buffone says. "They've got more guys who can hurt you now. They're better than the Miami team we played a few years ago that won the Super Bowl."

To propose that the Rams would be courting the Bears' favor in Super Bowl speculation would be what coach Chuck Knox refers to as "a distraction" — like the late rumors that his secret desire is to coach the New York Jets.

But Ram fans will be interested to see how their club stacks up, since it's been difficult to tell against a lineup of opponents whose collective record is now 21-42, confirming pre-season suspicions that the schedule was less a test than the 12 labors of Hercules.

The fact that the Rams frequently have played it like The Perils of Pauline has not deterred them from their goal, which is to win the NFC West.

With a three-game lead and five to play, they can clinch their third consecutive title under Knox today if they beat the Bears and the Saints upset San Francisco in New Orleans.

But Knox is wary of the Bears, who have the league's lowest-scoring offense (87 points), even without the departed Bobby Douglass, and have been blistered for 241 points, even with the defensive expertise of former Ram linebacker Jack Pardee, their new coach.

The squad includes 15 rookies and only 16 players from the teams Knox used to see twice a year when he was an assistant at Detroit.

But right now the talent is raw meat, although rookie running back Walter Payton, the No. 1 draft pick out of Jackson State, broke loose for 105 yards against the 49ers last week and third-year defensive tackle Wally Chambers, who wears an earring, has been causing an uncommon bit of commotion.

The quarterback is Gary Huff, who inherited the job from Douglass, but with three rookies in his offensive line he is not yet working with a full deck of talent.

"Some teams," Pardee says, "are good enough to win when they're flat. We're not. We have to play with emotion every week."

It's clear from the Bears' schedule that the emotion is not fear.

GAME OF THE WEEK
Pittsburgh 23, Houston 17

Quick rematch between AFC Central powers. Steelers won two weeks ago without Joe Greene and little help from L.C. Greenwood.

Admittedly, the Oilers got some bad breaks in that game too, before falling, 24-17, and are coming off a big win over Miami.

Despite the fact that Houston is the most improved team in the NFL, the pick here has to be Pittsburgh. Terry Bradshaw has never been sharper and the Steelers are peaking just like they did a year ago when they started to smell the $$$.

Pittsburgh leads the over-all series, 8-3.

It not only goes faster than the others.
It gets there about $2,000 cheaper.

When we had an independent testing company test the new Fiat 131 against the Audi, the Volvo, and the BMW, we hoped the Fiat would manage to keep up.

After all, for a car that costs around $4,000 to just keep up with cars that cost around $6,000 would be quite a feat.

As it turned out, the three $6,000 cars didn't quite manage to keep up with us.

In four separate acceleration tests, the Fiat ran away from all of them. In fact, from 40-70 mph the Fiat beat the Volvo by the incredible margin of 157 feet.

The results of these acceleration tests were no fluke. In separate tests of cornering, steering, road-holding ability, and overall responsiveness, the Fiat proved itself to be every bit the equal of the Audi, the Volvo, and the BMW.

Does all this surprise you? It should. It surprised us.

Penn St. makes its point

Pitt can't kick and loses, 7-6

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Penn State's Steve Geise ran 29 yards for the winning touchdown with 8:18 remaining and Pitt's Carson Long missed three field goal tries in the last five minutes as the Sugar Bowl-bound Nittany Lions scored a 7-6 victory Saturday.

Chris Bahr's extra-point kick gave ninth-ranked Penn State, 9-2, the margin of victory, while Long had an point-after try blocked and missed field goal tries of 51, 23 and 45 yards down the stretch.

Long's 23-yard miss, wide to the right with 1:31 left, came seven plays after Penn State freshman quarterback Chuck Fusina lost a fumble at the Nittany Lions' 29.

HIS 51-yard miss came with 4:41 to play and his 45-yarder fell just wide and short with only nine seconds showing on the clock in the clash for the unofficial Eastern title.

Sun Bowl-bound Pitt fell to 7-4 despite 125 yards rushing by Tony Dorsett, who had his first 100-yard game in three meetings with Penn State.

The 17th-ranked Panthers, who haven't beaten Penn State since 1965, took a 6-0 lead midway in the second quarter when Elliott Walker burst 37 yards for a touchdown.

However, Long's extra-point kick was blocked by Penn State defensive back Tom Odell, snapping his string of 60 successive conversions.

PENN STATE, which didn't cross midfield the entire first half, drove 67 yards for the winning touchdown, led by Fusina, who replaced starter John Andress in the second half.

The score came when Geise, a sophomore halfback, bounced outside on a third-down, short yardage play and ran 29 yards untouched to the end zone.

Long had kicked 13 field goals this year, a Pitt single season record, and had only missed five attempts. He had not previously missed from less than 45 yards, but he missed in critical situations Saturday, twice in the last two minutes when it appeared Pitt might finally upset its arch-rival.

Yank skier lost for Olympics

VAL d'ISERE, France (AP)—Kim Mumford, 20, of Putney, Vt., is believed sidelined for the winter after fracturing her left leg in a fall while training with the U.S. ski team.

Miss Mumford, America's third-ranked woman downhill skier and a favorite to be selected to the 1976 U.S. Olympic team, was injured Thursday.

On his way

Pittsburgh's Elliott Walker breaks away from Penn State defenders Tom Odell, foreground, and Mike Johnson en route to 37-yard touchdown run. However, extra point was blocked and Pitt was beaten, 7-6.

Syracuse surprises West Va.

SYRACUSE (AP) — Syracuse upset bowl-bound West Virginia, 20-19, Saturday when Dave Preston stopped a two-point conversion attempt by the Mountaineers' Ron Lee in the final seconds.

Down 17-0 at the half, West Virginia battled back to 20-19 when Lee scored his second touchdown of the fourth quarter with 17 seconds showing on the clock. But his attempt for the winning conversion was stopped short, and West Virginia will take an 8-3 record into its Peach Bowl encounter with North Carolina State.

Defensive back Keith Moody sparked Syracuse (6-4) to its early lead, returning a punt 54 yards for a touchdown and setting up a first quarter scoring drive with a pass interception.

Dixon scored two second half touchdowns to lead Wyoming back from a 10-7 deficit. A 195-pound senior, Dixon scored his first touchdown on a 12-yard run late in the third period to put the Cowboys in front, 14-10, moments after Air Force had taken its only lead.

He scored again on a two-yard dive with less than three minutes remaining to give Wyoming an insurmountable edge and its second victory in eleven games.

Bucks' other Griffin gets the accolades

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A disbelieving Ray Griffin, the younger brother of Ohio State's record-shattering tailback, stole the glory Saturday.

"I've been waiting for this for a long time. I couldn't believe it," said Griffin of his first college interception that led Ohio State to victory over Michigan.

The 5-foot-9, 177-pound sophomore safety picked off a Rich Leach pass at the Michigan 33-yard line in the dying minutes and raced to the Wolverines' three. One play later, with just over two minutes to go, fullback Pete Johnson rammed in for the clinching touchdown as a record regular season college crowd of 105,543 sat stunned.

"I think the quarterback (Leach) underthrew the ball," said Archie Griffin's younger brother of the play which clinched a Rose Bowl trip for Ohio State.

Ray's performance helped erase some of the sting that Archie felt from the Wolverines' defense. The 1974 Heisman Trophy winner settled for 46 yards, ending his national record of 31 regular games of more than 100 yards rushing.

Woody Hayes, Ohio State's irascible coach, was nearly as startled as his little defensive star. "We thought we could get into field goal range after we tied it up. But we didn't figure on Ray intercepting and taking the ball to the three," said Hayes.

Hayes paid tribute to the Michigan defense, especially in shutting off the older Griffin, major college football's all-time rushing champion with 5,177 yards.

"That's the best defense Arch has seen in his career," said Hayes. "But it doesn't worry him that his streak was stopped, any more than it does me. All he's interested in is winning."

HAYES will be leading the undefeated Buckeyes to the Rose Bowl for a fourth successive year. Who would he prefer to play?

"I have no preference," he said. "Whoever they (the Pac 8) send will be a good representative."

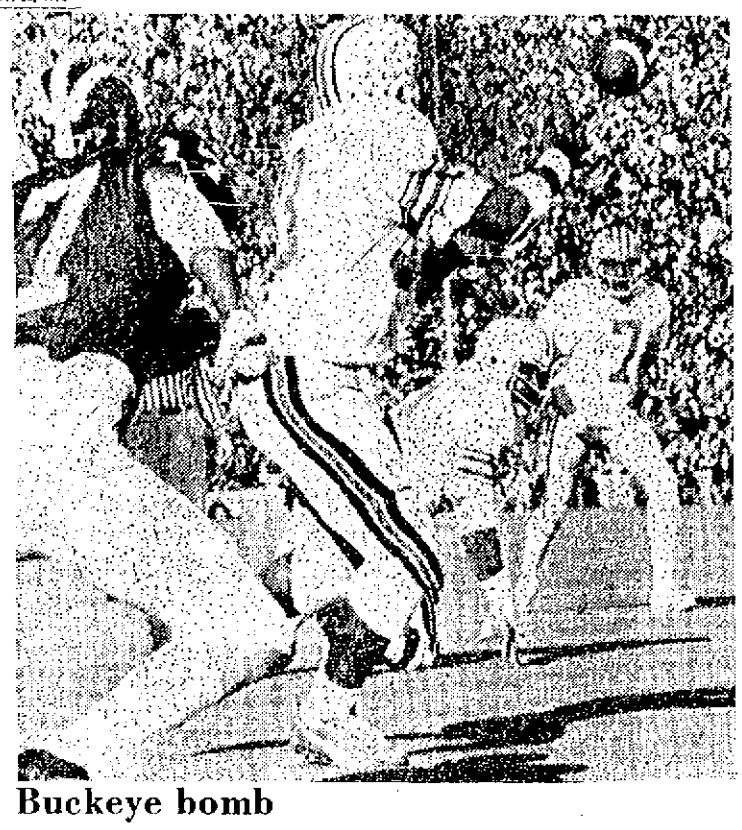

Hayes was asked if he thought Ohio State should still be ranked No. 1. "I think we should be," he said. "We beat the No. 4 team."

What about another national championship? "I wouldn't be against it," he said, looking up at his questioner with a smile.

Bo Schembechler, Michigan's coach, defended his strategy of having Leach pass after Ohio State's tying touchdown.

"We decided before the game we would not settle for a tie. Ties always seem to go against us. You either play conservatively or you play to win. We had to gamble late in the game and you know what happened when we had to go to the air," said Schembechler, who has lost only four games—all to Ohio State—in his last 70 regular season contests.

"No loss is easy to take, for me or my team. Not after that kind of an effort. Our team played one hell of a game," said Schembechler.

Buckeye bomb

Pete Johnson of Ohio State prepares to accept seven-yard touchdown pass from Cornelius Greene (7) for first Buckeye touchdown in Big Ten showdown with arch-rival Michigan at Ann Arbor Saturday. Johnson beat Michigan defender Dwight Hicks (17). Bucks came from behind with two late touchdowns to win, 21-14.

LAKERS HOST HOUSTON

The high-powered Lakers gun for their ninth Forum win without a loss tonight when they meet the Houston Rockets, a team they beat by eight points in Texas four nights ago.

Ed Ratleff, the former Long Beadch State star, will not be in his customary starting forward position for the Rockets due to a sprained foot which has sidelined him four games.

Houston will need all the offense it can muster against the Lakers, who are second in the NBA in scoring average at nearly 110 points per game. Their home average is even better, 113.

The Lakers have won by 16, 3, 8, 13, 16, 7, 17 and 12 points at the Forum, never scoring less than 105 points.

Balance has been the Laker trademark. Six players are averaging in double figures. Sub guard Don Freeman has netted 21 and 25 the last two games.

Ontario 500 dominated by good ol' boys

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

ONTARIO—For any auto race to be successful, it must have two elements: close competition and fan appeal. One, quite naturally, enhances the other.

Last year, the "good ol' boys" from NASCAR showed up at Ontario Motor Speedway after a two-year absence and gave their unmistakable brand of "Southern hospitality" to a record throng of 55,000.

Bobby Allison emerged the winner of the first Ontario 500, a three-hour marathon in which NASCAR scorers logged 39 official lead changes among five different drivers. Unofficially, there were more than 100 lead changes as Allison, A.J. Foyt, David Pearson, Richard Petty and Cale Yarborough formed a five-car nose-to-tail train throughout most of the race, utilizing spectacular drafting techniques in a constant ebb and flow for the top spot.

Most fans recall the race as the most thrilling ever held on the West Coast. The prospect of an "instant replay" of that type of racing looms today as an anticipated turnout of 80,000 awaits the 11 a.m. start of the 30th and final Winston Cup Grand National stock car race of 1975.

The five principals of last year's race have returned and all have qualified among the top seven in the two-abreast, 40-car lineup.

The field is further bolstered by two other legitimate front-running contenders—Buddy Baker and Dave Marcis.

Baker, winner of the Dixie 500 at Atlanta two weeks ago, qualified his Bud Moore-prepared '75 Ford on the outside of the front row at 153.421 mph. Only pole-sitter David Pearson exceeded that figure at 153.525, a track record.

Marcis, winner of one race and $115,660 this season, is the No. 3 qualifier in the familiar flame-red K & K Insurance Dodger belonging to long-time car owner Harry Hyde.

Baker believes the physical makeup and configuration of the $25.5 million racing plan, with its three-quarter mile front and back straights and wide aprongs in the turns, is conducive to competitive racing.

"The track is very wide and smooth all the way around," explains Baker. "If you are presented with the opportunity, you can pass anywhere. It's a far cry from Darlington and some of the other tracks we race down South, where you have to wait and pick your spots.

"Most of the guys realize we can play it a lot looser and take more chances here."

Baker also says that the art of drafting—using the vacuum of air created by a car in front to slingshot past—will play a tremendous role today.

"The long straights make drafting almost mandatory," he says. "If you can get behind someone and use his draft, it takes a lot of strain off the engine. That means a lot over 500 miles. You've got to be around at the finish to win."

Richard Petty, NASCAR's all-time career winner with 177 in 16 years on the trail, enters the $155,075 event with the opportunity to establish a record for money earned in a single season.

"King Richard" has collected 13 victories and $307,005 in official money through the first 29 races this year. He holds the current money record of $309,225 set in 1971 when he won 21 out of 48 races.

BUCKS BAG IT—

The Buckeyes stopped Michigan on the game's first series and then drove 63 yards in 15 plays on their first possession to score on Greene's seven-yard pass to Johnson. It was only the second catch of the year for Johnson and this was to be Ohio State's last major offensive thrust until the final minutes of the game.

Turnovers marred the rest of the first half, but Michigan did drive 80 yards in 11 plays to score on an 11-yard pass from tailback Gordon Bell to wingback Jim Smith 24 seconds before intermission.

On the ensuing kickoff, with a record, regular-season college crowd of 105,543 howling, the Wolverines recovered Archie Griffin's fumble and were poised to take the lead. But Bob Wood missed on a 37-yard field goal attempt on the last play of the half.

At one point, there were six turnovers in eight series in the first half, three by each side.

Michigan punter John Anderson, whose short kicks had been hurting his team all afternoon, managed a 33-yarder early in the fourth period that put the Buckeyes on their own six.

The Buckeyes were forced to punt and Michigan then drove 43 yards in nine plays to score on a one-yard sneak by Leach midway through the period that gave the Wolverines a 14-7 lead.

Behind for the first time all day, Ohio State suddenly snapped out of its offensive lethargy to come back on Johnson's two late touchdowns.

In the second half, Michigan's defense stymied the Buckeyes at virtually every turn. Archie Griffin was unable to break through the Wolverines' hard-charging defense which frustrated the option-type plays Ohio State has been so renowned for with Greene and Griffin.

The Buckeyes' initial first down in the march that tied the game at 14-14 was only their second in 35 minutes in which they had the ball.

The victory raised Ohio State's record to 11-0 and 8-0 in the conference. Michigan is 8-1-2 over-all and 7-1 in the Big Ten.

Miracle Baron takes feature

Miracle Baron led from start to finish to take Saturday night's featured Mira Loma Mile at Hollywood Park before more than 16,000 Western Harness Racing fans.

With leading driver Joe Lighthill in the bike, Miracle Baron outraced Broadway Bret for the early lead and then backed off the second quarter to win while holding a clear advantage throughout the stretch. Broadway Bret was second all the way and Kay Wave finished third.

Owned by Barton A. Holl of Logan, Ohio, Miracle Baron was a 3-5 favorite and covered the final half in a minute flat for the victory. It marked Lighthill's 43rd win of the meeting.

A bargain $5,000 purchase at the 1972 Northfield sale, Miracle Baron paid $3.40 in boosting his seasonal earnings to $58,602. Broadway Bret, handled by Joe O'Brien, paid $3 and $2.20 and Kay Wave, third with Jack Williams driving, returned $2.60.

Last year Miracle Baron turned in a remarkable speed performance at Lexington's famed Red Mile. He began by winning in heats of 1:56⅗ and 1:57⅘ to set a new two-heats record for pacing geldings. His 1:56⅗ clocking was only two-fifths of a second shy of Armbro Ontario's world record for pacing geldings.

Greatest win ever, beams Sooner coach

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — "It was the greatest win I've ever been associated with," said Barry Switzer after his Oklahoma Sooners had shattered second-ranked Nebraska's dreams of a national championship with a 35-10 victory here Saturday.

Switzer said the win "erases that loss two weeks ago to Kansas and a lot of other unfortunate things that happened to us. That victory was the season right there."

Oklahoma has been plagued all year with turnovers, including nine in its only loss to Kansas. But the Sooners took advantage of Nebraska miscues to score their five touchdowns. Nebraska lost four fumbles and had two interceptions.

"I think our football team had the edge today, but I've got to think they're both equal football teams," said Switzer.

Oklahoma suffered several turnovers in the first half but Nebraska could only manage a field goal and trailed at the half, 7-3.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, speaking from a silent dressing room, said, "Oklahoma is just a great team, and certainly was the better team today. I told the players I'm not at all ashamed of this team. I think they've probably played close to their potential all year, including today."

Osborne said he thought a fumble by Vince Ferragamo in the third period—which led to a Sooner touchdown and a 14-10 lead—was the turning point in the game. He singled out the play of Sooner quarterback Steve Davis, who had 130 yards rushing, and the Oklahoma defense, especially end Jimbo Elrod, as the difference in the game.

"Oklahoma is by far the best football team we've played," Osborne said. "They've got a lot of fine offensive and defensive players—just look at their All-Americans and All-Big Eight players."

Sooner defensive coach Larry Lacewell was understandably happy. "Our defense just played super when it had to," he said. "I think this is the greatest victory we've had in the last four years because it allowed us to go to the Orange Bowl. It'll be great to be on national TV again."

Davis, who had not lost a game on the collegiate level until Kansas' 23-3 upset of the Sooners, said he had "a good feeling all week during practice about this game. Everybody in Oklahoma was ready for this win. It's a great way to end a career."

LBSU wins PCAA polo crown

STOCKTON (Special) — Long Beach State captured the Pacific Coast Athletic Association water polo title Saturday with an 11-3 victory over San Jose State.

The 49ers erupted for five goals in the final period to break open a 6-3 game. Steve Shaw scored two of his three goals in the quarter.

Dan Matthies, who tied for the tournament's scoring honors with Pacific's Craig Schwartz with 10 goals, was voted to the all-tournament team. Matthies scored three goals in Long Beach's 4-3 victory over Pacific earlier in the day.

Mike Hollister, Randy Rados and Steve Shaw were second-team members.

The win gave Long Beach a 4-0 record in the round-robin tournament, followed by San Jose at 3-1, Pacific (2-2), San Diego St. (1-3) and winless Fresno St.

SOONERS' DAY—

touchdown run by Elvis Peacock was nullified by a penalty.

Peacock added an insurance touchdown, scoring from three yards out with 10 minutes remaining. The Sooners then added insult to injury, scoring twice in the final three minutes on runs of eight yards by Davis and four yards by freshman Billy Sims.

The final gun erased the last shred of Oklahoma's NCAA probation. And college football's defending national champions will meet Michigan in the Orange Bowl on New Year's night, their first bowl appearance in three years.

It was Nebraska's first setback in 12 games, since a 28-14 loss to Oklahoma in the 1974 regular season finale. Nebraska's defeat left Ohio State, third-ranked Texas A&M and eighth-ranked Arizona State as the nation's only unbeaten-untied teams.

Jubilant Oklahoma fans hurled oranges onto the field as the game ended to celebrate the team's bowl invitation.

Although Nebraska marched 67 yards to the Oklahoma 13 following the opening kickoff and recovered fumbles at the Sooners' 38 and 32 yard lines before the first period was over, the Cornhuskers managed only a 3-0 lead on Mike Coyle's 24-yard field goal.

Nebraska later forged ahead 10-7 on Monte Anthony's one-yard run after another Oklahoma fumble, but that was the Cornhuskers' last lead and the Sooners were soon in control.

The turnovers were welcome gifts for the Sooners, who had previously lost 21 of 54 fumbles and coughed the ball up three more times Saturday.

Nebraska stormed from its 20 to the Oklahoma 13 in 13 plays following the opening kickoff but Coyle missed a 31-yard field goal.

Joe Washington fumbled the ball away at his 38 on Oklahoma's third play from scrimmage and Jimmy Littrell bobbled at the 32 on the Sooners' next possession.

Nebraska's give-away program began late in the first period when Vince Ferragamo faded back to pass, was hit by Scott Hill and dropped the ball. Leroy Selmon recovered for Oklahoma at the Nebraska 42 and 13 plays later Steve Davis put the Sooners in front, 7-3.

Nebraska disdained a point blank field goal with seven seconds left in the first half and a dive by Anthony over left guard was stopped short of the goal line by middle guard Dewey Selmon.

Littrell gave the ball away again with a fumble on his 32 in the third period. Anthony scored Nebraska's touchdown nine plays later.

Ferragamo fumbled again at his own 47 late in the third quarter after Leroy Selmon shook him loose from the ball. Mike Phillips recovered for Oklahoma and seven plays later Ivory put the Sooners on top for good. Davis carried four times for 35 yards en route to a game-high 130 yards.

Nebraska had been averaging 32.3 points a game, but Oklahoma's stubborn defense, led by the Selmon brothers, end Jimbo Elrod, linebacker Bill Daike and an outstanding secondary, limited the Cornhuskers to 70 yards in 39 rushes and 175 yards through the air.

U.S. RACE ROUNDUP

AQUEDUCT—Given a second chance when Artfully bolted to the outside after taking the lead in the stretch, Free Journey ($15.60), ridden by Laffit Pincay, came on again to win the $85,350 Demoiselle Stakes for two-year-old fillies by a neck over the even-money favorite. The winner clocked 1:50⅘ for the 1⅛-mile test in a field of 11.

HAWTHORNE—Summertime Promise ($14.20) scored a front-running victory in the $59,100 Yo Tanbie Handicap. Victorian Queen, the 6-5 favorite, finished second in the mile turf race for fillies and mares on closing day. John Lively rode the winner to a 1:43⅘ clocking on a soft grass course.

CALDER—Ameri Flyer ($13.20) closed with a rush along the hedge to win the $32,000 Gold Coast Handicap. Auditorium, the 2-1 favorite, was in contention to the far turn of the mile grass test and then stopped, finishing last in the field of 14 three-year-olds. Gene St. Leon rode the winner, timed in 1:36.

BAY MEADOWS—Our First Delight ($3.60) and Miss Tokyo ($4.80), both favorites, were easy winner in the split divisions of the mile $16,650 Palo Alto Stakes for three-year-old fillies.

John to join L.B. Rockets

Dave Sylvia will open on the mound for the Rockets when the Long Beach team hosts Robinson's Mets this afternoon at Blair Field, 1:30.

Early-arriving fans may do a double take when they see one performer warming up, but their eyes will not be playing tricks on them. It will be Tommy John of the Dodgers.

John, out of action the entire '75 season after elbow surgery, started his comeback in the Arizona instructional league last month and will continue his conditioning with the Rockets.

Manager Jack Graham said John will only pitch an inning or two for the Rockets under game conditions "if and when he makes the decision. It's entirely up to him."

New DFG chief discusses outdoor goals, dangers

Charles Fullerton, director of the California Department of Fish and Game, was the guest speaker of the Southern California Sports Council at a dinner meeting in the Winchester Inn last week, and he reeled off facts and figures about the DFG so fast that it was almost impossible to absorb even the most pertinent facts.

Yet, when Fullerton finished his speech and answered a large number of questions, it was apparent that he is more concerned about the habitat of fish and wildlife than he is about the production. That is not to say that he wants to decrease the number of fish to be planted; he would like to increase that number.

CHARLIE FULLERTON
Definite ideas

He is most concerned, however, about where to put those fish; where the deer herds will roam, and all of the habitat of fish and wildlife that is disappearing so rapidly that by the year 2000 there may be no place to find fish and animals.

Also, Fullerton is quite concerned about the sportsman's dollars and getting the most results from such funds in the face of decreasing habitat, special interest groups' demands and the enormous rate of inflation.

He doesn't want to increase license fees because he thinks that the sportsmen are paying their maximum now for what they are getting, but he does want to see the public at large, not the fishermen and hunters, become involved in this state's outdoor situation.

FULLERTON LISTED major goals that he hopes to achieve in the 1976-77 fiscal year:

• Stretch the available funds (those that come from the people who buy fishing and hunting licenses) as far as is possible over the widest range of fish and wildlife.

• Seek additional money from the state's General Fund to care for nongame programs. Under that category he listed the special interest groups. Asked to define special interests, he named a few—those who want the sea otters protected, those who want special protection for the reptiles, the mountain lions, wild burros and wild horses.

• Reverse the 10-year decline in California's deer herds by improving the habitat. Deer will disappear from California unless such a program is undertaken and is successful. He discussed the "unit plan" at great length.

• Work to change the federal government's order that prevents stocking of fish in the high lakes of the National Parks. He feels that such a program is keeping people out of the parks and that trout plants do not degrade the environment such as the federal government charges. He feels that the people of the state and our visitors have rights to fish in all lakes if the environment is protected.

EFFORTS TO IMPROVE OCEAN fishing were listed as one of the main goals, not for the 1976-77 fiscal year, but immediately, and Fullerton told of some of those projects, such as the artificial reefs at Redondo Beach, Huntington Beach, Ventura Marina and even the Bolsa Chica program.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

About Bolsa Chica, he said that the department had acquired some rights to the marshlands from Signal Oil and Gas, and that immediate plans called for levees and water control to protect the now-degraded area. He foresees limited public use for some time when the preliminary work is done.

In the end, however, he thinks that Bolsa Chica should have an entry to the ocean, with certain types of fishing and a program similar to that of Upper Newport Bay, which he calls one of the most important projects that the DFG has undertaken in years. It and Bolsa Chica are the only wetlands between the San Francisco Bay region and the Mexican border.

When Fullerton was asked to define "special interests," he said: "We must not forget one special interest —fishing and hunting."

On offshore oil drilling, he said that the department was very much involved and also very much concerned and that the state and federal governments must proceed with extreme caution, particularly in the areas around such faraway fishing fishing grounds as those offered by the Cortes Bank and others.

ONE OF HIS MAIN CONCERNS is the recent opinion given by a federal judge that the federal government has the right to use the water in California's rivers and streams the way it sees fit. That means, said Fullerton, that the federal government could dry up streams in the north where steelhead and salmon run and eventually spawn. He is convinced that every person interested in the outdoors should let his Representative or Senator in Washington know that we don't want that.

He hammered away at the decreasing habitat for fish and wildlife, citing such figures as these: Thousands of miles of steelhead streams already lost; three million acres of wildlife habitat lost since 1900; 90 percent of the coastal marshlands lost for all time; 30,000 acres being lost each year to subdivisions, highways, farms.

This columnist would like to add a personal opinion of Charlie Fullerton, a man I have known for a long time. It took months for Gov. Brown to make up his mind on a DFG director. In the end, he picked the best possible candidate for the job. Charlie served as deputy director under Ray Arnett and he served well. He is as dedicated about keeping the outdoors and fish and wildlife on a high level as any person could be.

Heading for weekend regionals

Short holiday for 49er spikers

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Thanksgiving vacation will be cut short for coach Dixie Grimmett and her LBSU volleyball team if, as expected, the 49ers finish in one of the top four spots at the SCWIAC tournament this weekend at Fullerton State.

Taking only one day's respite, they will head for Grossmont Colleg in San Diego for the AIAW Western Regionals Friday and Saturday.

Once again, Long Beach State is expecting its strongest competition to come from its own division which includes UCLA and UC Santa Barbara. The 49ers' recent 15-10, 13-15, 15-12 win against USC cemented the division title with UCLA finishing second. LBSU and UCLA split two league matches, but an additional victory by the Bruins in the UCLA Invitational has given them a slight edge in the over-all standings.

Also participating in the regionals will be colleges from Northern California and Nevada. The University of Hawaii has decided not play in the regionals and will wait for an "at-large" berth for the nationals in December.

Incidentally, Dixie, who is also assistant basketball coach at Long Beach, will be among the guest speakers at the USA Women's Basketball Coaches clinic Dec. 6-7 at L.A. State. The Clinic will be geared for junior and senior high scool coaches and college students.

Other guest speakers will include the Lakers' Bill Sharman, UCLA women's head coach Ellen Mosher, Long Beach State head coach Dwight Jones and Darlene May of Cal Poly Pomona.

ONE OF the hottest league competitions around is between the undefeated coed tennis teams of Orange Coast and Golden West Colleges. The teams played to a 6-6 tie last week and will meet again Tuesday at Orange Coast.

Long Beach City College coach Benny Crigger, whose team dropped a 14-1 decision to OCC and suffered a 9-3 setback to Golden West, rates Orange Coast as the stronger team.

"They are the two best teams in Southern California," Crigger said. "They have super girls on their teams. Most teams have good guys because of their varsity teams. The question is, 'Who has the best girls?'"

LONG Beach City College's basketball team continues as the league leader followed by Cerritos College. Mt. San Antonio College proved an easy 65-35 conquest Monday with coach Donna Prindle giving equal playing time to every varsity team member.

Toni Bell, top team scorer, hit for 20 points. Brenda Pinesett had nine, and Carol Dellavalle and Shannon Murphy each netted eight.

Although the junior varsity team only allowed 12 points in the first half Wednesday against College of the Canyons, the Vikings ended up on the short side of the final 32-28 score.

Upcoming for LBCC is Monday's match at San Bernardino College and a home game Wednesday with Los Angeles City College.

LISA Hall of Los Alamitos High went into the CIF-SS girls tennis individual sectional playoffs at Lowell High School this weekend seeded fourth. Also competing from this area are Melaine Stout of Kennedy, Erin Hirsch and Marta Sheehan of Warren and Ellen Turbow of Garden Grove.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

A satisfied Marilynn Tom watched her AA and A coed volleyball teams turn in a "total team effort" to down Orange Coast, 4-15, 15-7, 15-9 (AA); 15-11, 15-7 (A).

On the undefeated AA team are Ralph Smith, Patty Linza, Rocky Clarelli, Dina Lopez, Mark Pick, Dracy Laurin, Mike Blanchard, John Gipp and Dana Avery.

LBCC hosts Fullerton College in its final league game Tuesday at 3:30.

LBCC's field hockey team easily handled Pierce Colleg Thursday 4-0 in a post-season game. LBCC, coached by Anita Miller, recently tied Long Beach State 1-1 in a practice match. The Vikings finished fourth in league play.

Moore teams in x-country CIF finals

Moore League champion Wilson and runnerup Lakewood qualified for the finals of the CIF, 4-A cross country championships at Mt. San Antonio College Saturday.

Wilson finished fourth in heat one with 144 points while Lakewood was fifth in heat two with 129 points. Crescenta Valley's Don Moses won heat won in 10:08; Foothill's Mark Spilsbury heat two in 10:11.

Finals are Saturday at Mt. San Antonio.

HEAT ONE: Edison 47, Palos Verdes 75, Bishop Amat 129, Wilson 144, Canyon 148. HEAT TWO: Costa Mesa 53, Foothill 70, Marina 91, Burbank 98, Lakewood 128.

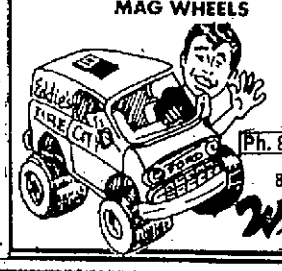

Hill, Lindbergh win flag titles

Mark Hayworth passed and ran Hughes to the ninth grade All-City flag football championship Saturday with a 19-7 win over Hill at Millikan High.

Lindbergh, paced by quarterback Lynn Koehmstedt and the running of John Barber and John Lee, won its first city title in more than 20 years with a 40-13 thumping of Rogers for the eighth grade crown.

Adams gets smart, offers something new in TV comedy

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

DON ADAMS . . . with Connie Stevens in 'Screen Test'

When Don Adams was a boy growing up in New York City, he was crazy about movies and dreamed of becoming a film star himself.

"I spent as much time in the movie theaters as I did in school," he told me the other day at lunch in the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel. "The truant officers knew where to look for me.

"I used to dream that maybe someday I'd get to make a screen test and would become another Errol Flynn or somebody like that."

Adams rose to fame in television rather than the movies — he is best known for his portrayal of the bumbling Agent 86, Maxwell Smart, in the "Get Smart" series for five years — but he remains a movie nut.

And he has parlayed his love of films and his TV comedic talents into a new television series this fall, "Don Adams Screen Test."

ON THE SHOW, which is meant to be funny but also has a serious purpose, Adams provides amateur acting hopefuls the opportunity to win a role in the movies or on another TV show.

The series, taped at Universal Studios, is a nationally syndicated show — rather than a network offering. In the Los Angeles-Long Beach area, it airs on KNBC (Channel 4) on Saturdays from 7:30 to 8 p.m. In other cities, it might be telecast on a different day and in a different time period.

"In New York, we've been No. 1 in our time period for five weeks," Don told me. He admitted it hasn't been doing that well in Los Angeles, where it is up against "Space: 1999," "Wild, Wild World of Animals," "Lawrence Welk Show" and "Let's Make a Deal," among other things. The show is being preempted this week, incidentally, by a special on Channel 4.

At least it's not up against "Get Smart," a former Emmy-winning comedy series that still is being carried twice a day on Channel 13 in syndicated reruns.

ADAMS, WHO got his own first big show business break in 1954 by auditioning on the "Arthur Godfrey Talent Scout Show," offers novices the chance to do a screen test with a famous performer in re-creating a famous scene from a movie.

The series was Don's idea, and he is the executive producer, host and on-camera "director." He talked noted director Marty Pasetta into taking over the job of producer-director.

"I got the idea from the out-takes that all TV shows have," he said. Out-takes, he explained, are the goofs and flubs that occur during the taping of a show but are never seen on the air.

"These out-takes are often funnier than anything on the show," he pointed out. "They're funny because they're not written, they're not contrived.

"It's human comedy. It's people without their masks on—goofing up."

The three-time Emmy Award winner said "Screen Test" lends itself well to out-takes because there are no rehearsals.

"The performers do it cold turkey," said Don. "They have cue cards, but don't even have to use them. I direct them on camera, shooting a show within a show. It can be pretty hilarious — and lots of fun."

DON LOOKS upon the show as "sort of a combination of the old Sid Caesar movie routine, 'Candid Camera' and 'Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts'" all rolled into one.

He ran newspaper ads last April asking: "Do you want to be a movie star?," with forms for contestants to fill out and mail in. From more than 5,000 responses, about 2,200 unknowns were invited to the Universal Studios back lot one Saturday in May to be interviewed by 20 casting directors. After studying reports by the casting directors, Adams and Pasetta winnowed the list to 400 semifinalists, who were given follow-up auditions and interviews.

Then in May and June and early July, the first year's 24 shows were taped before audiences at Universal. Six of the amateur thespians were notified to be in the audience for each show as finalists, and the two chosen to perform on each show—working separately with a different celebrity—didn't know they would be picked until their names were called out.

After being introduced to his or her professional costar, the novice then viewed a three-minute film clip from an old movie before being asked to re-create the scene.

AFTER EACH of the two amateurs selected to compete on a particular show has performed, a prominent director selects one as the winner—and that person gets a role in a movie or TV show. Both the winner and the loser get a tape casette of his or her screen test, plus movie equipment.

Stars taking part in the shows—two to a show—are Zsa Zsa Gabor and George Kennedy, Phyllis Diller and Peter Lawford, Jackie Cooper and Sheeky Greene, Danny Thomas and Doug McClure, Ernest Borgnine and Barry Newman, Lyle Waggoner and Barbara Feldon (Adams' spy partner on "Get Smart"), Shirley Jones and Bob Newhart, Totie Fields and Edward Asner, Jack Cassidy and Jan Murray, Mel Brooks and Loretta Swit, Don Rickles and William Shatner, Steve Lawrence and Carol Wayne.

Also, Ruth Buzzi and Dick Gautier, Sally Struthers and Milton Berle, Leslie Nielsen and Ross Martin, Jane Russell and Robert Wagner, Miss Struthers and Bobby Morse, Jo Ann Pflug and Martin Milner, Debbie Reynolds and Dick Martin, Darren McGavin and Lucie Arnaz, Buddy Hackett and Ricardo Montalban, Red Buttons and Frank Gorshin, Jim Brown and Lee Meriwether, Greg Morris and Robert Conrad.

In the 60-minute pilot, the guest stars were James Caan, Connie Stevens, Jason Miller and Patty Duke Astin.

"Did you have any trouble getting the stars to participate?" I inquired.

"No, not much," replied Don. "Peter Lawford just wanted to know if he could compete for the part in the movie."

ADAMS, WHO contributed two famous catch-phrases to the American language as Maxwell Smart—"Would you believe?" and "Sorry about that, chief"—is hopeful but not yet sure that the series will go into a second season. And would you believe there's a possibility it may return next season not only as a weekly evening show but also as a five-times-a-week daytime program?

If "Don Adams Screen Test" does continue as an evening show next fall, auditions will be held in various cities across the country, the producer-host said. And if it becomes a daytime series, he added, the amateur participants for those shows would be chosen from the audience, without auditions.

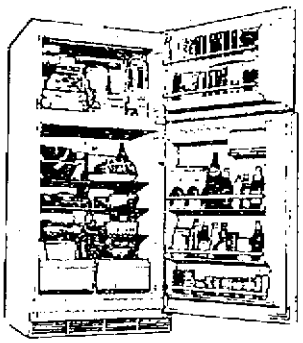

See you in the movies.

"NBC SUNDAY MYSTERY MOVIE" sleuths have their own mode of operation in solving cases. Peter Falk, as "Columbo," gets to the bottom of things even if it means getting on his hands and knees to look for clues. "McCloud" star Dennis Weaver often goes undercover with a pretty lady like Angel Tompkins. Rock Hudson and Susan St. James put their heads together in "McMillan and Wife." And Tony Curtis, in "McCoy," cons the unscrupulous con artists.

"Hee Haw" getting the last laugh

Archie: "You know, I believe this country's always been crowded."

Grandpa: "How's that?"

Archie: "Why, even in the olden days, the Indians had to have reservations."

By GARY DEEB
Chicago Tribune

The name of the program is "Hee Haw." For seven seasons, would-be intellectuals have called it everything from "barnyard prattle" to "the scourge of national dignity."

But "Hee Haw" has persevered — first on CBS, now in nationwide syndication — as a fabulously profitable show with an enormous, loyal audience.

What "Hee Haw" offers the non-silk stocking crowd is a pair of fundamentals currently in great demand: (1) lots of fine country music, which is rapidly becoming America's favorite sound, and (2) an unpretentious, admittedly corny brand of humor, skillfully performed by an experienced cast of funnymen.

IT MAY BE heresy to say it, but "Hee Haw" comics like Archie Campbell, Gordie Tapp and Grandpa Jones boast the same show business tradition and split-second timing that have made legends of Johnny Carson, George Burns and Groucho Marx.

But Campbell, Tapp and Jones are rural folks, not city slickers, and so their considerable talents have been derided for years by pseudo-sophisticates.

Which means the urbanites who call "Hee Haw" a hillbilly show are going to be more than a little shocked when John Henry Faulk joins the program in January.

That's right. John Henry Faulk — the witty folklorist, all-purpose raconteur, and self-styled "kamikaze liberal" who was blacklisted 10 years ago by right-wing witch hunters — is the newest addition to the "Hee Haw" cast.

I PHONED Faulk down in Madisonville, Tex., and asked him how things were going.

"Well, a lotta people have called me and said, 'You're not really goin' on that bucolic 'Hee Haw' are you? Say, I told them folks: 'If you all knew the mystique of 'Hee Haw', then you'd know why I'm on it.

"And you'd also know why George Wallace keeps winning bigger majorities all the time. Because Madison Avenue and Washington and Hollywood just don't know where the people are.'"

WHAT ABOUT this "mystique" of "Hee Haw"?

"People say the show is stupid and backward and all that. But 'Hee Haw' is really what America's about. The stars and producers and writers know what makes folks in Spokane, Wash., and St. Petersburg, Fla., tick. It touches people in the heart, and this is what the boys on Madison Avenue don't understand."

Nevertheless, some of the down-home, good-ol'-boy tales that John Henry will weave on "Hee Haw" will sport a heavy sociopolitical flavor — an area the program never has ventured into.

For instance, in one segment already taped in Nashville, Faulk tells about his Texas buddy, Peavine Jeffries, who says: "Y'know, Lyndon Johnson lied 'bout Jerry Ford when he said that Ol' Jerry played too much football without a helmet. Jerry wore a helmet, all right. It's just that he played center, y'see — and he got used to lookin' at the world upside-down, between his legs, backwards."

PRETTY GIRLS, combined with country music and bucolic humor, attract viewers to the nationally syndicated "Hee Haw" TV series. And here are three of the girls: Barbi Benton, Lisa Todd and Marianne Gordon. The show airs Saturdays from 8 to 9 p.m. on Ch. 11.

Do sports need television more than TV needs sports?

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press

Could television survive if it never carried another sports event? Easily.

But it isn't at all certain that the sports establishment would exist if television coverage suddenly evaporated — not in its present form, anyway.

"Television money is so important," says ABC sports czar Roone Arledge, "that if it were withdrawn, the whole structure would fall apart."

That isn't network hyperbole. The fees paid by television for the right to place cameras at sports events provide millions of dollars to sports.

"There isn't a single NFL team that could operate in the black without TV income," states Jim Kensil, executive director of the National Football League. Commissioner Pete Rozelle has said each of the 26 NFL teams receives more than $2 million a year from the league's sale of TV rights.

Executives in other sports sing a similar tune. A national television contract often can spell the difference between success and failure for a new organization — not only because of the financial implications but also because of the fan interest generated through mass exposure of the game.

NBC, for example, is generally credited as the savior of the old American Football League. Back when the AFL was floundering in 1964, NBC paid $42 million for a five-year contract.

That money — five times more that what ABC had been paying for AFL television rights — helped make it possible for AFL clubs to lure top college draft choices from the NFL. It kept them functioning until the NFL finally gave up in 1969 and agreed to a merger.

When the World Football League blasted off last year, NBC, CBS and ABC already were glutted with professional and college football, and the financially pressed league could only attract a $12 million national contract. This year it didn't get any, and WFL officials said the lack of that kind of insurance definitely contributed to the league's collapse on Oct. 22.

E. M. (Bud) Erickson, executive director of the Ladies Professional Golf Association, says the occasions they've had national TV coverage have made noticeable differences.

Besides providing extra cash to boost the prize purse, Erickson reports, it focuses new attention on the women — from people who decide to attend the next LPGA event in their area, from groups that offer to sponsor a new LPGA tournament now that they've seen the caliber of play, and from advertisers who realize the potential in tying in with the lady golfers.

That's how dependent the sports world has grown on television. And for its part, the television industry, while it could survive without sports, isn't about to try. Sports events generated an estimated $284 million in advertising sales last year at ABC, NBC and CBS alone. And there were millions more for local TV stations.

So the relationship is rather complex and delicate. From the outside it might be said that television is subsidizing many of the sports it covers, but on the inside it is accepted by both TV and sports executives as simply the way their businesses operate.

Carl Lindemann Jr., head of NBC's sports department, says the approach isn't much different than that of the networks' entertainment divisions, which pay the studios and independent producers to make dramatic and comedy programs for them.

The NFL's Kinsil says: "If you say 'subsidize,' you're putting the cart before the horse. Football didn't get where it is because of television. It got where it is because it's a quality product.

"But because of rising costs and the increased success, that income becomes a necessary item ... It becomes vital for the sport if it wants to continue to operate at the level it does now."

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

PREMILLENNIALISM NO. 7

In our last article we found that Isaiah prophesied in Isaiah 2 that the kingdom was to be established in Jerusalem.

Also, in Daniel 2 we read where Daniel prophesied that the kingdom would be established during the days of the Roman kings. So, we have the where (Jerusalem) and the when (during the days of the Roman kings.)

JOEL SHOWS "WHAT"

Just as Isaiah prophesied where and Daniel prophesied when, so Joel 2 tells us what was to take place. Peter quotes from Joel in Acts chapter 2. Christ said after his resurrection, "Wait in Jerusalem until the power comes" (Acts 1:8). When the Holy Spirit came and the power thus came, Peter says that what they were seeing and hearing was a fulfillment of Joel 2. But, do you remember what Christ said would happen when the power came?

Why, he said the Kingdom would be there, for it was to come with power. Thus, all three of the prophesies mentioned above were fulfilled in Acts the second chapter. They were in Jerusalem during the days of the Roman Kings and they began (under the direction of the Spirit) to speak in different languages and prophesy just as Joel said they would. The inescapable conclusion is that according to the prophesies of the prophets and according to the prophesy of Jesus in Mark 9:1, the kingdom came with power on the first pentecost after the resurrection of Christ.

DANIEL TELLS US "WHEN"

In Daniel 7:13-14 we read where One like the Son of Man came to the Ancient of Days and presented before Him. And there was given to Him dominion, glory, and a Kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and men of every language might serve Him. When we compare what Daniel saw in his vision with Acts 1:9 we see when Christ received His kingdom. Not when he came to earth, but when he came to the Ancient of Days — which was what happened in Acts 1:9.

Caroline approaches 18

By LESTER DAVID
New York Times Special Features

At the threshold of 18 — her birthday is Thursday — Caroline Kennedy is a quixotic mixture of personalities. She is a sensitive teen-ager, pathetically seeking the approval of her friends. She is an uninhibited young hoyden, acting silly and engaging in uproarious stunts when the mood comes upon her. She is a serious-minded young woman who thinks deeply about the world and her place in it.

But she is not yet ready to enunciate her views about herself and the world in a formal interview. On the telephone, she tells why, simply but poignantly: "I've never been interviewed before." There is a pause and she continues: "I'm afraid the questions will bring up memories from the past."

Her voice is low and strong with a cultivated Eastern prep school accent which bears no trace of the flat Bostonian tones of her father or the little-girl breathiness of her mother. She appreciates being asked but she declines and in her brief explanation there is a hint that the world will some day hear from her: "I have nothing to say," she says, and pauses again before adding: "right now."

In private, however, Caroline has strong views and feelings which she does not hesitate to express and, in fact, acts in a manner that has to shatter, once and for all, the legend of "shyness" and "reserve" that has grown up with her.

Actually, at times she is astonishingly uninhibited. ("A pure nut!" one friend says admiringly.)

Caroline and her brother John have been among the most closely guarded children of our times, but for her the sheltered days are over.

AFTER GRADUATION from Concord Academy, Caroline went to England for a year's study at the London art auction house, Sotheby's. With 49 other students, she will spend the year in an art-appreciation course which includes visits to galleries and museums in England and on the continent, attending lectures and learning how to appraise the value of works of art. Caroline had applied and been accepted at Radcliffe College, the women's division of Harvard University, but decided to put off college in favor of a year's art study.

Her stay in London has not been without incident. On Oct. 23, a bomb exploded outside the residence of Hugh Fraser, a member of Parliament with whom she was staying. One man, a leading British cancer specialist, was killed in the blast. No motive has yet been discovered for the bombing, but police said they did not believe Caroline was the target.

If there are many sides to Caroline, the facet that gleams brightest, and is inescapable to anyone who knows her, is her abiding interest in and love for John F. Kennedy.

There is a special relationship between all fathers and daughters but, given the tragic circumstances of his death and his place in history, Caroline's attachment to the memory of the murdered President is deeper than most.

"I really loved him," she told young Juan Cameron. A tall youth from Washington with shoulder-length brown hair, Cameron was Caroline's boy friend during much of her final year at Concord Academy, an exclusive prep school where she studied during the past three years. They saw each other nearly every day, taking long walks, having dinner often, playing outrageous pranks — and talking endlessly. Juan, a 180-pound varsity football and lacrosse player, met Caroline in the fall of 1974 at Hickory Hill, the home of Ethel Kennedy. They were introduced by Michael, one of Ethel's sons and Juan's best friend.

NOW 17, Caroline Kennedy is participating in the night life and social scene during stay in London. Here, she leaves a party given for Andy Warhol. With her is Thomas Alexander Fermor-Hesketh, 25, third baron of Hesketh and one of England's most eligible bachelors. On top of stairs is Mark Shand, 24, whom newspapers call the favorite boy in her life.

"We'd talks about very personal things," Juan says in Dana Hall, his dorm at Middlesex, "like how we each are doing, what we feel, things like that about ourselves. Her father is supreme to her. He's on the top of her list of all the men she ever talks about. He was the best President the country ever had, she says, and because of him there's no doubt in her mind that she wants to spend her life doing some kind of public service work to carry on his traditions. She's made up her mind that she wants to follow in his footsteps."

In an elective office? Does Caroline plan some day to enter politics, perhaps become the country's first woman president? Juan laughs. "She might work in politics," he says, "but probably through the organizations that were his main interest while he was alive."

HER FRIENDS, sensitive, educated young people in college or college-bound, will rarely bring up the name of John Kennedy in her presence for fear of

Women excel in ROTC

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

Is it true love? Or mere infatuation?

That's a big question in military circles these days as increasing numbers of women seem to be losing their hearts to the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

According to statistics released by Army National ROTC headquarters in Monroe, Va., the number of women cadets has more than doubled since campus ROTC programs first began accepting women three years ago.

At many schools, an Army spokesman said, women comprise more than 30 per cent of this year's freshmen classes. The percentage at individual colleges may run higher, he said.

"Our percentage is going up all the time," said Mark Kodama, an information assistant for the Army ROTC program at UCLA.

"The first two years we made special efforts to recruit women," he admitted. "But this year we haven't done much at all."

The same kind of increased participation was reported by Maj. Isadore Washington Jr., a recruitment officer for the Air Force ROTC program at USC.

"As of 31 October 1975 we had 15 women enrolled in our program," Maj. Washington said. "This compares with eight women enrolled as of 31 October 1974."

Total enrollment in USC's AFROTC program, which involves students from 41 colleges and universities in the Southern California area, is 240 students, Maj. Washington said.

Maj. Washington, who is also a professor of aerospace science at USC, explained that the Air Force has long been an advocate of female participation in its officer training programs.

Women first participated in an AFROTC experimental program in 1956 and have been admitted to campus programs on a regular basis since 1970.

"In fiscal 1970 there were six women nation-wide in Air Force ROTC programs," he said. "This year there are 2,246 women participating in programs at 168 colleges."

WHY THE SURGE of interest among women in ROTC programs?

There are several reasons, military spokesmen agree. A major factor — or at least the most immediate one — is that participation in ROTC offers a way of financing the ever spiraling cost of higher education.

"I read about the four-year scholarships that were available if you got in the ROTC," said Gale Wuchner, a Long Beach State University freshman who is enrolled in UCLA's Army ROTC satellite program at LBSU.

"I didn't get the scholarship," the 18-year-old pre-medical student explained. "But I thought I'd try it out anyway to see how I liked it."

In addition to the four-year tuition and expenses scholarship, Army ROTC offers three-, two- and one-year scholarships for qualified students. Air Force ROTC cadets may compete for four-, three- and two-year scholarships.

Participants in advanced programs of either service (juniors and seniors) receive a $100 a month stipend. Scholarship recipients and those who receive the monthly stipend must agree to a period of active duty service upon graduation.

No commitment is required of freshmen and sophomore ROTC participants.

"Our experience has been that women compete favorably with men for scholarships," Maj. Washington said. "Of the 15 women now participating in our program, two are on three-year scholarship programs."

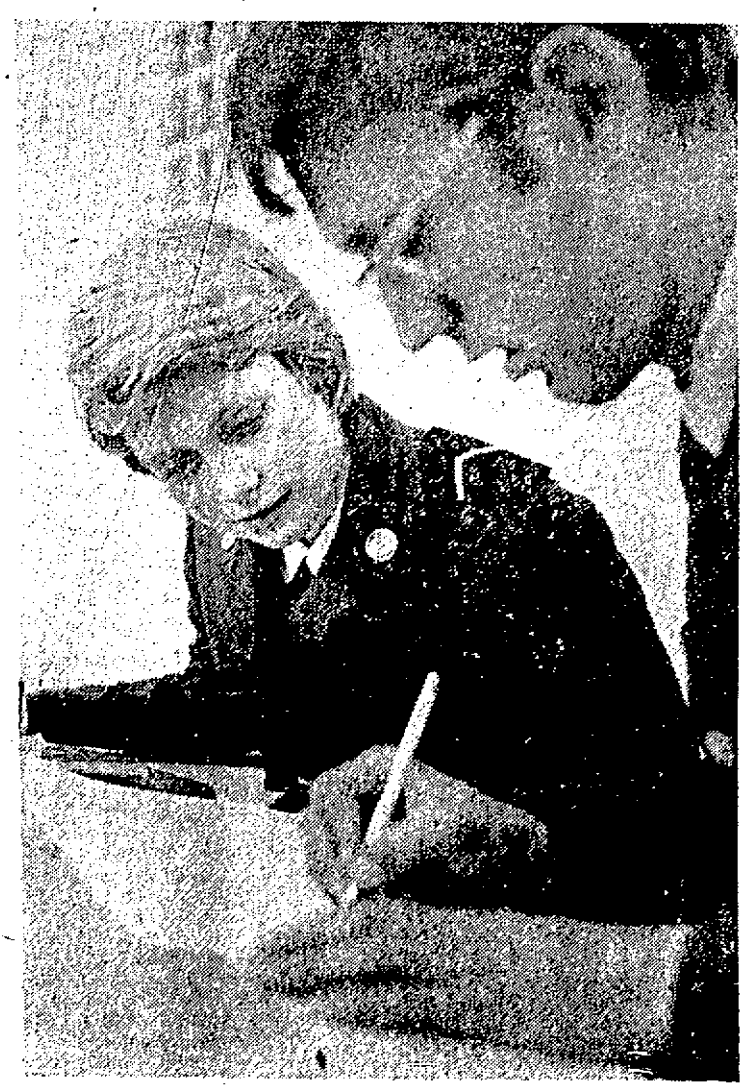

Military spokesmen believe that favorable publicity about the military as an equal opportunity employer and expanded opportunities for women also have contributed to the increased participation of women.

They explained that women are now fully integrated into the military service, barred only from flying planes (other than helicopters), serving aboard warships and bearing arms in combat.

Another factor, they added, is that the service is viewed as a good job in an uncertain economy.

HOW DO WOMEN PERFORM in comparison with their male colleagues?

COWBOY star Roy Rogers and his famous horse, Trigger — Trigger still resides at ranch, thanks to taxidermist.

Glad you asked that!

hy gardner

Q: When he was an eligible bachelor, was Henry Jackson ever in love with Princess Margaret? — Mrs. R. Layton, Seattle.

A: Such a rumor made the rounds of Washington society. Started by a local socialite, it stopped when the handsome Senator squelched the scoop. A would-be match-maker had suggested the pairing would "solidify relations between the U.S. and Great Britain." The "match" never ignited and Jackson married Helen Eugenia Hardin in 1961. They now have a son and a daughter.

Q: Some time ago Ray Charles told you he drove a car, sometimes flew a plane, despite his blindness. Isn't it dangerous to issue a blind person a driver's license? — L. Peabody, Philadelphia.

A: Definitely. Which is why the state of Tennessee recently issued "drivers licenses" to some 10,000 persons — provided they weren't used to drive! Human Service Commissioner Horace Bass explained that carrying a license would help such persons to cash checks and identify themselves, etc. Insofar as Ray Charles is concerned, he made it clear that nobody should try to do what he did — that it was foolhardy and dangerous.

Q: Robert Blake, who plays our favorite TV detective Baretta, even looks and acts like a real officer. Was he ever? Also, didn't he, as a kid, appear in "The Little Rascals"? — Pat Fasching, Pittsburgh.

A: No. Though Blake admits he was a little rascal, personally, he was not in that series. However, he played Mickey (opposite Spanky McFarland) for five years in the "Our Gang" comedies. He also played "Little Beaver" in the "Red Ryder" series.

The only time he was in a police uniform was when he was a motorcycle cop in the 1973 movie 'Electra Glide in Blue." His real name is Michael James Vijencio Bugitosi. "My father," he told a reporter, "was a frustrated show nut. And my mother was a plain neurotic, which made for a very crazy house."

Q: Is Roy Rogers' famous horse, Trigger, still alive? — Arthur Nardin, White Plains, N.Y.

A: No. Trigger died at a ripe old age a decade ago. Stuffed by a taxidermist, he now occupies a glassed-in cubicle in the Dale and Roy Rogers ranch in Apple Valley, Calif. Trigger's constant companion, the movie dog known as Bullet, shares the "stall."

Q: What was the epitaph Paul Newman once predicted would be on his tombstone? — Ms. Gladys Gallagher, Astoria, N.Y.

A: "It will probably read," smiled the blue-eyed superstar, "he was a terrific actor — until one day his eyes turned brown!"

Q: Following on the heels of daughters Zsa Zsa and Eva, I hear their mother, Jolie Gabor, has now written her life story. When will it be out? — Mrs. Cyril Burton, Philadelphia.

A: In the spring. As told to Cindy Adams. The gabby Jolie will relate how she raised her much-married maidens, Magda, Zsa Zsa and Eva. Mama admits she was very unhappy when Zsa Zsa divorced the late George Sanders and told him: "I like you so much as a son-in-law, I'll marry you to another one of my daughters." Sure enough Sanders later married Magda.

When Jolie's ship docked in Philadelphia, straight from Europe, she called Zsa Zsa to tell her, gleefully, that she had $100 with her. "That will buy you exactly two hats," was the girl's realistic reaction. Whereupon, with typical Gabor extravagance, Jolie tipped the ship's purser the $100 and launched her glamorous life in the new world flat broke — her only assets were her daughters!

ACTOR Robert Blake — star of television series "Baretta" was never real cop, but did start acting young.

SINGER Ray Charles — blind performer has done some scary things.

THE GABORS, Mama Jolie, center, Zsa Zsa, left, and Magda, right — Jolie's autobiography will soon tell more about the family's exploits. She liked one son-in-law so much, he married two of the daughters.

BLUE-EYED Paul Newman — wonders about value of eye color to acting ability.

Gershwin tunes bring audiences to his feet

If music is the stuff of life, the fiddlers are playing loud and clear. With any luck, rock and roll will get a decent funeral and we'll all be singing and humming and tapping our feet to good music again if the current craze for beauty continues in the upwardly mobile direction it's going. At least that's the way it looks in New York.

I can offer no better proof than the positively spectacular evening that took place in Lincoln Center as a tribute to the genius of lyricist Ira Gershwin. Mr. Gershwin will be 80 years old on Dec. 6. He is in such frail health that he couldn't travel. But he must have heard the applause and the beauty of his songs way out in Beverly Hills. It was a night to remember.

rex reed

Movie stars rubbed elbows with elderly dowagers lugging their last million in unhocked diamonds, while the cultured and the wise sipped champagne with Bette Midler freaks — proving, for always, that genius spreads to all ages and all persuasions when it has longevity.

What happened at Lincoln Center was as much a tribute to taste and intelligence as it was to Ira Gershwin, whose name and career have always been synonymous with both. Dolores Gray got everything off to a blazing start with "Fascinatin' Rhythm" and "I Got Rhythm," and there was no place to go from there but straight ahead. This woman lights up a stage like the Fourth of July, and if somebody doesn't get her back on Broadway, the world is in a sorrier state than we think.

She's a hard act to follow, but Harvey Evans and two delectable chorines brought down the house with "The Real American Folk Song Is A Rag," and the brilliant Anita Ellis sent electric shocks down the spine with "Someone To Watch Over Me" and "I Loves You Porgy." Chita Rivera sailed through the night in ostrich feathers and peach chiffon like the reincarnation of Terpsichore (Ginger Rogers, eat your heart out), and people like John Raitt, Sandy Stewart and Barbara Cook sang medleys of Gershwin that reddened a thousand eyes with tears and a thousand hands with applause.

IT WAS A NIGHT of show-stoppers, with each successive performer trying to top everybody else. But one major surprise that knocked the audience off its feet was the unexpected appearance of that saucy, sexy, Southern spitfire Elizabeth Ashley, wrapped in a black satin slip cut up to her Christmas decorations, swinging and saying the Gershwin-Kurt Weill "Saga of Jenny" while six chorus boys tossed her toward Heaven. The screaming crowd went berserk, and that was only the first act.

After intermission, during which voices came from everywhere echoing approval ("They should have recorded this night!" "It makes me feel alive again!"), Barbara Cook, who has one of the most beautiful voices ever heard by man, electrified the stately old Avery Fisher Hall with her moving rendition of "The Man I Love." Elizabeth Ashley got sawed in half by Doug Henning of "The Magic Show" while singing "Do Do Do What You Done Done Done Before," Kitty Carlisle Hart made one of her rare, magic appearances shimmering like a summer sundae in pink lemonade chiffon while her still gorgeous, lyric soprano voice hauntingly recreated "My Ship" from "Lady in the Dark," a show Ira Gershwin worked on with Kitty's late husband, Moss Hart. As I said, it was one of those nights that made history and made you wonder where all that beauty and genius and wit has gone in the declining years of musical theater.

We soon found out where it went when they brought out Jerry Orbach, a tone-deaf mediocrity who appears in the current musical, "Chicago." This was the kind of evening that separated the men from the boys, and poor, ossified Orbach proved what league he belongs in by turning out to be the night's only non-professional embarrassment. For some mysterious reason that can only be explained by the producers, Orbach was handed a plum in two of Gershwin's greatest triumphs, "How Long Has This Been Going On" and "S'Wonderful." He turned them into dirges, his voice wandering unsteadily through several keys beyond his range and ability.

BUT IT WAS ALSO the kind of night in which even a grave error like that could be forgiven. Quickly dismissed by mild, polite applause, he was immediately replaced before the audience whispers of astonishment could accelerate by the magnificent Chita Rivera, who woke everybody up to a standing ovation with her splashy production number, "Sam and Delilah" from "Girl Crazy."

And there was more: Bobby Short, demonstrating the ease and polish that has crowds filing in to hear him nightly at the Cafe Carlyle, waxing "I Can't Get Started" to a thrilling sheen. Gotham, that daffy singing trio, appeared in safari suits and pith helmets doing Gershwin's pastiche, "Sunny Disposish," and then the fireworks exploded. Another big-game hunter skated forth from the wings to tumultuous applause. Her name was Bette Midler, and if anybody still needs proof that Ira Gershwin is just as relevant and applicable to 1975 as he was to the music of the better musical years, she sealed the legend in gold.

After setting off a few kegs of her own dynamite with the obscure comedy tune "My Cousin From Milwaukee," she gleefully chided the audience ("This is the classiest night I've ever been associated with") and the orchestra ("We're all working free tonight except the band — right, fellas and gals?"), and paid her own rhythmic tribute to Ira Gershwin by singing, with great feeling and emotion, her own contemporary arrangement of a song that could well be the theme of all artists who have achieved individuality and originality. The song was "They Can't Take That Away From Me," and until you hear Bette Midler sing Ira Gershwin, you don't know what love is.

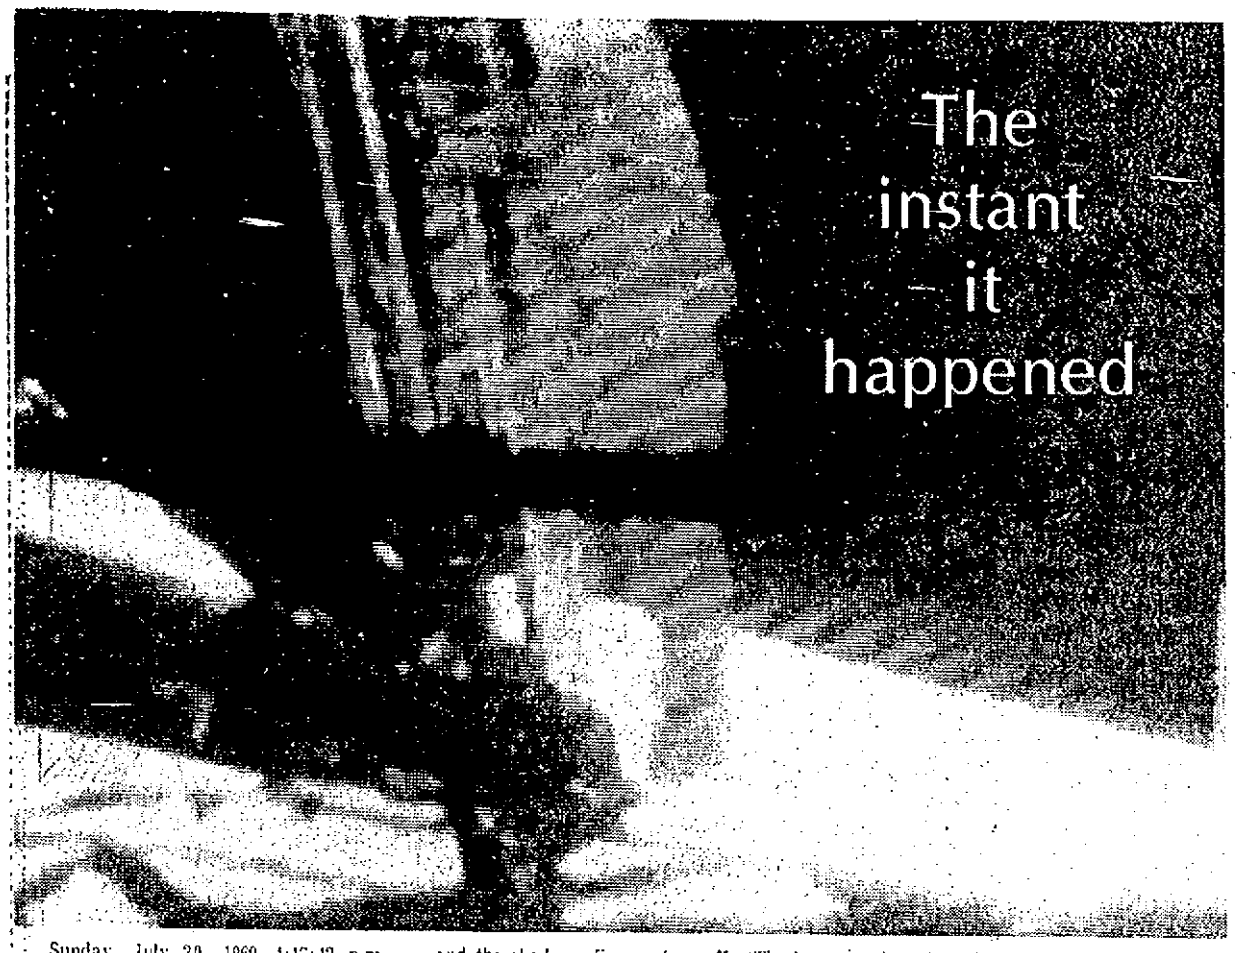

What seemed like 10 high school marching bands suddenly descended upon Lincoln Center at that precise moment, playing "Strike Up The Band" while baton-twirling nymphets and acrobats and cheerleaders turned the night into a cheering, screaming, riotous circus of joy and happiness. And above it all, the smiling caricature of Ira Gershwin beamed down from the massive stage with amusement and pride. A great night for a great man, and long may his cherished lyrics reign supreme.

ANOTHER KIND of patchwork quilt musical evening is currently packing them in on Broadway. It's called "A Musical Jubilee," and while it is not especially well directed or interestingly choreographed, it does provide a cornucopia of enchanting musical memories performed by a first-rate cast of troupers — Patrice Munsel, John Raitt, Tammy Grimes, Dick Shawn, Cyril Ritchard, Larry Kert and the indefatigable Lillian Fish who is older than Santa and

IRA GERSHWIN ...his music is still magic

Sunday, July 20, 1969...4:17:42 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time.

"Houston. Tranquility Base here. The Eagle has landed."

"Roger. Tranquility. We copy you on the ground. You've got a bunch of guys about to turn blue. We're breathing again. Thanks a lot."

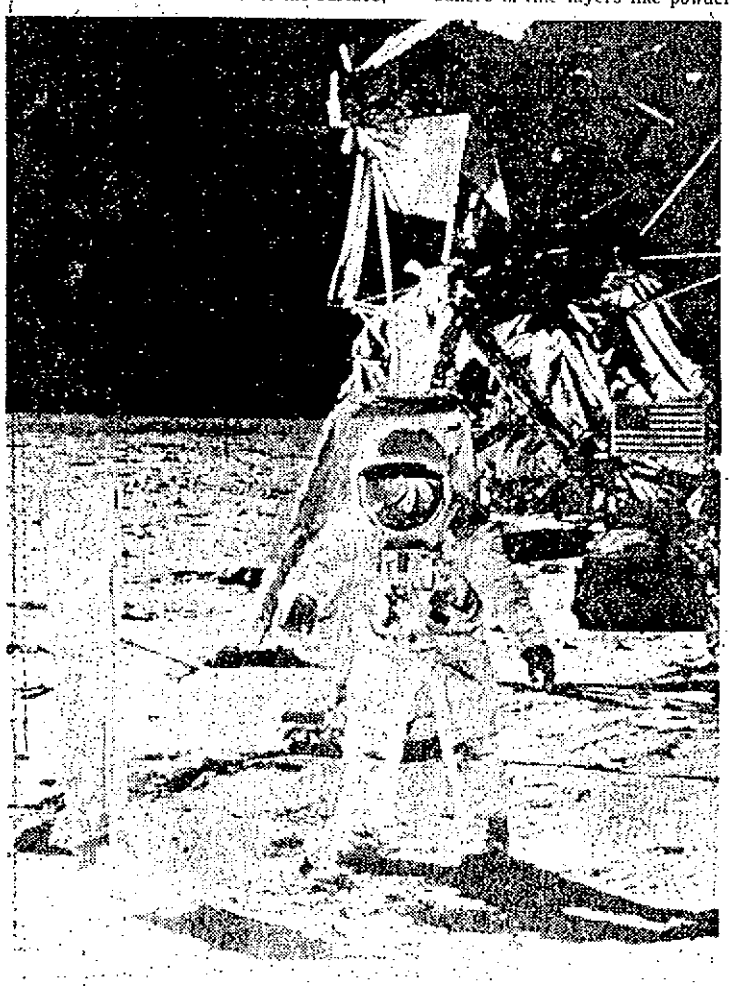

The culmination of centuries of dreaming: a ten-year, $20 billion drop in the bucket of time.

Now it is 10:56:20, the same day. A cautious left boot searches for the surface, and the shadowy figure steps off. "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

The staticky voice presses across 238,000 miles. And almost all the world watches and listens. Neil Alden Armstrong, 28, from a place called Wapakoneta, Ohio, on the planet earth, a man with an ordinary size 9½ foot, takes the first step on the moon.

"The surface is fine and powdery. I can pick it up loosely with my toe. It does adhere in fine layers like powdered charcoal to the sole and sides of my boots...I can see the footprints of my boots and the treads in the fine, sandy particles."

Vanguard, Explorer, Shepard, Grissom, Glenn, and always behind the Russians. Trailing the Sputniks, the Gagarins, the Titovs. Three men dead in a burning moon ship. But now, suddenly, the race is over. An American flag is unfurled on the moon. President Nixon says, "As a result of what you have done, the world has never been closer together."

Odd the way it happens. A picture taken by a robot television camera aboard a disposable landing craft named Eagle records the imperishable moment. Later, like tourists everywhere, the moon visitors photograph each other and Armstrong snaps his co-pilot, Edwin E. Aldrin, setting up a solar wind test. And man wins a new planet to walk on because two nations are locked in a contest for prestige on earth.

Ole, Acapulco! say L.B. Yacht Club Anglers

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN
Life/style Editor

WITH CAROLYN nursing the painful wounds of bursitis, comes an opportunity to fill this space with a few vacation reminiscences of last week's visit to Acapulco with 52 ardent anglers from Long Beach Yacht Club.

Well, those who weren't ardent anglers were ardent shoppers, and everyone got what they bargained for.

Festive mood began with a champagne flight, courtesy Western Airlines, aboard one of the city's finest Big Blue Buses, to L.A. International and the flight South of the Border.

Norm and Iola Masterson were trip chairmen, with an able assist from co-chairpersons Perry and Bernice Maxson, and travel service director Jim Worsham and Pauline, who had on-going hospitality hour in their adjoining rooms at Hotel Fiesta Tortuga.

So successful was the angling, a sailfish was the prize for anyone interested in dropping a hook into the water. A new, and welcome practice from previous fishing forays into Mexico, is the thrill and skill of fighting the good fight, then freeing the fish to swim again instead of being brought ashore for photographs and then carted off to the local fertilizer factory.

Ranking in first place in the ardent fishing class were Dr. Gordie and Dr. Olive Bateman who fished four of the six days. First day out, Dr. Olive fought and won a 100-pound sailfish on 12-pound test, and did as well on following days.

First place in the shopping class went to Hope Cunningham and Middie Masterson who waved farewell to Bob and Mel from shore and lit out for the shops, finding original Mexican designs to carry them through all the holiday parties to come.

In search of silver, Jerry and Corrie DeWit, Dick and Vera Brookins, Les and Mary Alice Dahl, Hal

Bower and Elaine Kaylor and the Worshams made a speed run to Taxco to sightsee and spend.

Unfortunately, the trip was not as speedy as anticipated and they missed one of the trip highlights, a ceviche (for the uninitated, fabulous seafood cocktails) and margarita party hosted by the tour's traveling bachelor-types, Don Gillespie, Jim Pine and Ray Hagan. Polly Merrill, felled by Montezuma, missed the party, too, and sent Jack to enjoy her share of the goodies.

Last night out was a gala fiesta, with the women resplendent in their Mexican purchases, and the men handsome in thir embroidered Yucatan shirts, the "in" apparel for tourist and native alike. A personal alas. My tree of life skirt languished on its hanger, my 140 peso hairdo languished on the pillow and husband Harry, after seeing my needs were met by the Drs. Bateman, went off to mariache on his own with traveling buddies Frank and Ann Wade.

The group continued its fiesta mood the following Tuesday when Anglers met for their monthly dinner at LBYC and again on Thursday night for the Yacht Club's annual meeting when one of their number, Ron Dean, was elected port captain, while wife, Van, beamed.

And, thanks to the talents of Official Trip Photographers Lyle and Jo Abbott and Dr. Bob and Muriel Hastings, the colorful memories live on.

LAST SATURDAY was a day harpist Harriet Woods won't soon forget. Not that she'd want to, but she may still like to catch her breath.

Harriet, who likes to play her harp morning, noon, and night, set it aside the other Saturday afternoon to play hostess at a wedding shower for Linda Swanson.

Linda is the daughter of former Long Beach residents Bob and Pat Swanson. The Swansons moved to the high and mighty Mt. Washington area of Los Angeles only last year.

Harriet played her harp earlier in the afternoon at a fashion show in Costa Mesa before rushing home just 15 short minutes before her shower guests began to arrive.

She had gotten up at 6 a.m. that morning to make a batch of bread dough so that all shower guests could have the fun of making bread dough ornaments, paint them, and present them to the guest of honor.

With little time to relax after the last guests had departed, Harriet had to hasten down to the University of Irvine to play her harp that evening with the orchestra for the production of "My Fair Lady."

Never fear, however. Harriet will have time to take a few deep breaths before Linda's wedding to Gary Jackson at the Mission Inn, Riverside, on Dec. 27.

IT'S NICE to be remembered — something Vera Swope came to realize very pleasantly the other day when her two daughters, Marilyn Shirley and Marcia Foley, helped her celebrate her 75th birthday with a luncheon at Marilyn's home.

Vera had a chance to do some remembering of her own when the party turned into a reunion of teachers with whom she had worked years ago at Jefferson and Rogers Junior High Schools.

Party-goers were Lea Hunt, Hazel Liff, Margaret Parsons, Ethel Johnson, Vera Jackson, Mary Grant, Bernie Graham, Mary Jane Parker and the honoree's sister, Genevieve Fisher.

ANOTHER BIRTHDAY party had Pamie Cincola all at sea when her husband Mike gave her a surprise steak dinner party aboard the charming Bucaneer Queen. Not a bad way to turn 30.

Pamie, by the way, is PTA president at Minnie Gant Elementary School where everyone is paying attention to the Bicentennial. So naturally, the cake Mike ordered was in the shape of a Betsy Ross flag.

Besides her in-laws, Pauline and Mitt Cincola, Pamie was toasted by Jean and Dr. Gus Rose, Audrey and Jack Cardall, Trudy and Bill Cheney, Toni and Bob Ball, Lois and Dr. Ed Stemmer, Judy and Drew Ebright, Dottie and Tom Beck, Marie and Chuck Baughman, Barbara and David Heald, Virginia and Homer Davis, Sue and Clovis Putney, Ellie and John Eastman, Gracia and Ron Foster, Sylvia and Bill Fedak, Marge and Mel Harbert, Cynthia and Al Muir, Nina and Lew Berg, Jean and Dwayne Studer, and Pat and George Rory.

AT WIT'S END

Ode to the peanut

A young student wrote me this week, "Thank you very much for your biography which I was going to use for a term paper on persons I most admire. However, it arrived too late, so I did one on Fidel Castro."

There isn't a parent reading this column who will not understand that letter.

A "paper" at our house isn't just an assignment from a teacher, it's a "sentence" for the entire family.

The drama usually unfolds on a Sunday evening when, right in the middle of "Kojak," our son will ask out of left field, "Dad, who invented peanuts?"

"Planters. And turn the TV set up if you're going to carry on a conversation."

"What influence would you say peanuts had on the western world?" he pursues.

The entire family gives him their attention. "Why do you want to know?"

"I am doing a paper on the physical and psychological significance of peanuts on western civilization."

"WHAT HAVE YOU got so far?"

"Planters. Source of Ref: Dad, 1975."

"Get those reference books off the shelf," says his father, swinging into action. "Let's see now, peanuts . . . see Goober."

"I remember him from 'Mayberry, RFD.'" said our daughter.

"That has nothing to do with peanuts."

"Maybe Charlie Schulz . . . "

"Aha! Carver. Did he discover peanuts or was it soy beans?"

"Call the Bruners. They have a dictionary."

"Did you taste that meat loaf where Pat put in soy beans? It was delicious."

"Mom! Forget the meat loaf. My future is at stake. I have to trace the entire history of peanuts from Biblical times right up to present day. We're talking about 80 pages with a bibliography and table of contents!"

"When is it due?"

"Tomorrow morning."

Hours later, as we're all poring over every scrap of reference in the house on peanuts, he announces, "I've changed my mind. I'm doing a paper on how John Wayne changed the face of the West."

Seek ROTC's educational advantages

For the most part, spokesmen agree, women do as well if not better than men participating in ROTC programs.

"One of the highlights for AFROTC cadets is nomination for and appointment to cadet commander," Maj. Washington said. "Of the eight nominated for cadet commander for this spring, three are women."

Maj. Washington continued:

"We have found women to be competent leaders . . . they have successfully performed most leadership functions . . . all possess leadership, creative ability, initiative, aggressiveness, self-confidence . . . all the qualities found in a successful Air Force officer.

" . . . they prove men do not have a monopoly on these qualifications."

Both Kodama and Capt. Michael Thompson of the Army ROTC agreed that the 16 women enrolled in their program compete very well with men.

"Women are competing equally if not better than men," Capt. Thompson emphasized. "And that's not just academically. That's across the board. We've got a couple of supergirls at UCLA."

Maj. Washington and Capt. Thompson also agreed that thus far, women drop out of their programs with no more frequency than men. For both sexes, the attrition rate is high — between 50 and 60 per cent nationally — "but that's just a problem we have," Maj. Washington said.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Discover new use for gout medication

A RARE BUT DISABLING illness for which there is no known effective treatment may now have a remedy, researchers report.

The disorder is Mollaret's meningitis.

And the remedy is colchicine, a medication ordinarily used in the treatment of gout.

Four doctors in London, England, describe the case of a 63-year-old man who has had recurrent bouts of meningitis since January, 1972.

Mollaret's meningitis is characterized by attacks which recur at regular intervals of several weeks or months. A virus is suspected to be the cause of the disease.

This particular disorder begins as sudden attacks of recurrent fever, associated with headache, nausea, vomiting, neck rigidity, muscular pain and general discomfort.

ben zinser

The patient had suffered monthly recurrences.

Given colchicine, he has had only one attack since July, and it was much less severe than previous episodes.

Colchicine has a stabilizing effect on white cells, the doctors say, and Mollaret's meningitis is marked by an increase in white cells in the cerebrospinal fluid.

The report is in the Lancet, a medical journal.

Immunity levels among children one to four years old in the United States are still low enough to permit substantial spread of various diseases, reports the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Immunization levels among American children are no longer declining, but they are still dangerously low.

Immunizations increased last year for polio, measles, rubella (German measles), diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and mumps among those one to four.

But a national survey indicates that some 5.3 million children of nearly 13.2 million in this age group still are inadequately protected against all these diseases. About eight million are still susceptible to mumps.

THE WORLDWIDE incidence of smallpox has fallen sharply this year, notes the World Health Organization.

Only two countries, Bangladesh and Ethiopia, have been reporting active smallpox cases during the past few months.

But the number of new smallpox cases in Bangladesh has decreased greatly compared with the number of active cases reported during 1974.

In Ethiopia, 117 villages in 13 different geographic locations have reported smallpox.

Details are in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

YELLOW FEVER poses a threat in Bolivia.

Nearly 150 cases of jungle yellow fever, including 75 deaths, occurred in Bolivia during the first part of 1975.

Practically all of the reported cases occurred in persons who had not been vaccinated.

Newcomers to jungle areas have been especially vulnerable to yellow fever infection, according to the National Institute of Communicable Diseases, Bolivian Ministry of Health.

A NEW STUDY conducted in Great Britain shows that the drug sodium valproate can significantly reduce the frequency of both major and minor epileptic seizures when added to other anticonvulsive medications.

The drug is also known in Europe by the names Epilim and Depakine.

Details of the study are reported in the British Medical Journal.

THE PAIN RELIEF obtained with acupuncture may be merely a placebo effect, says a doctor.

Both acupuncture and a placebo (dummy pill) were effective in relieving shoulder discomfort in most of 42 persons tested.

A slightly greater number of the placebo group improved than did the acupuncture group, says Dr. Mary E. Moore of Temple University School of Medicine.

A HOT DOG, hamburger or even ice cream is a far better breakfast for the American worker than no breakfast at all.

So says Muriel S. Pappert, a member of the American Association of Industrial Nurses.

Mrs. Pappert, coordinator of health education for American Telephone & Telegraph, says that employes who eat breakfast tend to make fewer mistakes, have fewer accidents, are less irritable and get along better with co-workers.

"The body needs something to break the fast of the night before," she explains.

PHYSICAL FITNESS is directly related to reduced risk of coronary heart disease, says a noted authority on the topic, Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper.

In a study of 3,000 persons, blood pressure and blood-fat levels were found to be lower in physically fit individuals. These risk items were higher in persons in very poor physical condition.

Dr. Cooper, director of the Cooper Clinic, Dallas, Tex., devised in 1964 an exercise system for the astronauts. The system, called aerobics, builds the cardiovascular system. He has written best-selling books on the topic.

His latest report on fitness and coronary disease appears in Family Practice, a newspaper for physicians.

'Quality of life' at stake

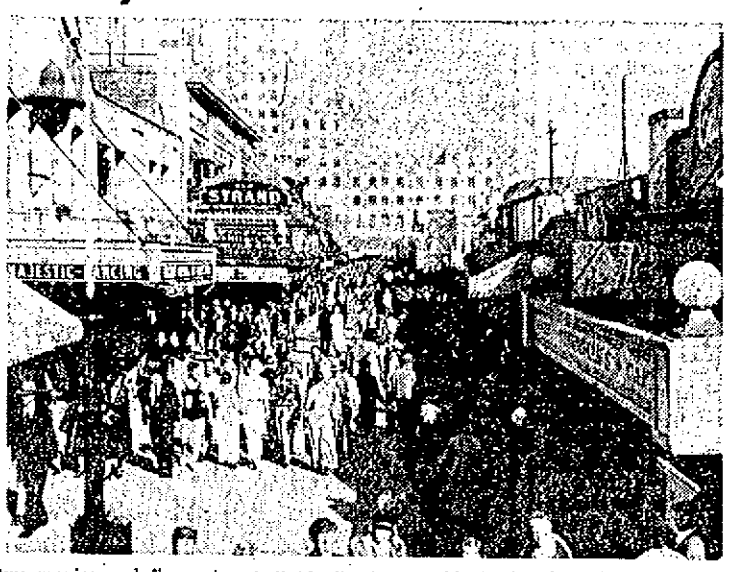

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

"The level of the 'quality of life' in our city is the overall question posed by the presentation of this exhibition," says Jan Adlmann, director of Long Beach Museum of Art, about the show which opens next Sunday.

But "Long Beach Lost and Found" should be fun, as well. Assistant curator Helen Morgan has assembled a two-part exhibition of photographs, props, furnishings and memorabilia. One part brings back memories of movie palaces that were magnets in the 1930s. The second part is a photographic survey of more than 75 homes located in the Bluff Park community of Long Beach.

The exhibition will remain on view at the museum, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., through Jan. 4.

For the movie palace segment, Morgan relied heavily on the collection of Joseph J. Musil. He is a local designer who has created unusual wine shops and restaurants in the area and now is dedicated to preserving Long Beach motion picture theater architecture.

Trained as a set designer, Musil knows how much impact and imagination are needed to create for theater, either stage or motion pictures. When he was very young he began to collect photographs and memorabilia of Long Beach theaters — most of them long gone.

As guest curator, he writes that he hopes the viewer will find the exhibition an unusual, exciting experience as well as one of warmth and nostalgia. "Especially," he says, "for those who remember the 9 cent Saturday matinee at the Ritz or the 37 cent general admission to the Strand on the Pike for two movies and five acts of headline vaudeville.

LUANNE PRYOR is guest curator for the display of Bluff Park homes. An eight-year resident of Long Beach, Mrs. Pryor's interest in historic preservation began many years ago in her native Denver where she grew up in an English Norman mansion. Later, in New York, when she was involved in a 10-year career in photojournalism with Look Magazine, she and her husband bought the famous Juilliard estate at Tuxedo Park. Although they abandoned restoration plans, she saved fixtures and paneling reminiscent of turn-of-the-century aristocracy.

Ever since, she has been deeply interested in preservation. In fact, she will appear Tuesday before the Long Beach City Council's Environmental Quality Committee to formally request that the city establish a Cultural Heritage Commission.

She notes, "Historic preservation is no sentimental adventure. It is a movement to preserve individuality in a world of sameness. What we have been, what we are now and what we can be in the future may all be merged together. Each person, each city and each nation must set its own priorities. However, we should well remember that the environment in which we live affects our everyday lives.

"In Long Beach, the number of structures of historic value already destroyed is considerable. The best of what we had is gone. The time has come to take a close look at what is left. The photographic exhibit of houses in the Bluff Park area illustrates a neighborhood with great character. There are others still left throughout the city. But if they aren't preserved, like those before them they will disappear, taking with them the very heart and character of the city."

THE ARTS were discussed from many points of view at the Quarterly Congress of the Arts at Golden Sails Inn. The luncheon meeting mainly concerned a panel discussion on "Government in the Arts — State, County and City". Panelists were Daniela Quinn, special consultant on the arts for Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.; Jule Foster, administrator of Los Angeles County Music and Performing Arts Commission; and Mayor Thomas Clark of Long Beach. John Watts, associate dean of the school of fine arts at Long Beach State University, was moderator.

In his introduction, Watts said that government in the arts is not new, that in fact, it dates back to 1628 when Miles Standish took one Thomas Morton in custody for arranging a community maypole celebration with poetry, music, dance and public participation. He added that despite the creation of the National Endowment for the Arts and other agencies, there remains an atmosphere of "confrontation, collision, suspicion and distrust."

Quinn explained that when Gov. Brown took office he had plans to change state support for the arts but first wanted ideas and reactions of arts groups. After many meetings, he and his staff found no consensus among artists. "The arts community was splintered as no other group in the state. Four arts bills were in committee. Finally, the governor compiled his own bill and on Sept. 30 the new California Arts Council was created. It will become effective Jan. 1."

FOSTER reviewed the role of the County Music and Performing Arts Commission which has been active for 27 years. "Of the $1 million the board of supervisors this year allocated for the arts, only five per cent went for administration. Some 58 organizations benefited, including 27 community orchestras. "Our policy is the reverse of the usual process where money first is granted, then distributed. We recommend the amount we believe is needed to the supervisors, then they make the grant."

This year, the mandate outlining uses for the money has been broadened and with the new guidelines of the California Arts Council, Foster said many more activities can expect help.

Mayor Clark talked about the city's contribution to the arts, plans for Pacific Terrace and its facilities which will include a large hall with seating for 3,000 on the ground floor and for 2,000 in the balcony. A smaller hall will accommodate 850. He compared the new complex to the Los Angeles Music Center. "Long Beach has made a definite and successful effort to remain a community — not a suburb of Los Angeles."

He also noted that the Municipal Arts Commission, relatively ineffective in the past, will be restructured by the City Council for a more active role.

After a question and answer period and a slide presentation on "The City of Long Beach" by Robert C. Benson of the Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce, Jerome H. Leff, president of Long Beach Regional Arts Council, and Doris Stovall, executive director, reported on the arts council's plans for the "Great Bicentennial Congress of the Arts Fair" to be held in Recreation Park July 3 through 6.

'Amahl' opera Christmas benefit

Long Beach Symphony Association has completed plans for its Christmas Benefit Concert — a concert which it hopes will be a source of gifts to Long Beach through the years.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," staged by the Pacific West Coast Opera Company, will be given Sunday, Dec. 14, at 2:30 p.m. in Lakewood High School Auditorium, 4400 Briercrest Ave. Pre and post concert music will be a contribution of the Long Beach Municipal Band.

Tickets, at $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children 14 or younger, may be purchased in person or by calling or writing to the symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

Since the gentle opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti first was performed on Christmas Day, 1951, it has become one of the most beloved holiday traditions. Its tender story of the little crippled boy, his encounter with the Three Kings seeking the Christ Child and his own generous gift to the babe embodies the true meaning of Christmas.

Beau Palmer of Los Angeles plays Amahl. Others in the cast are Gordon Ewing, Robert Swedberg, Anne Eagle Machamer, David Pittman Jennings and Richard Sisson.

AS FOR THE continuing gifts to Long Beach that this concert may generate:

In June, the Symphony Association established an Education and Performance Endowment Fund and all previous memorial gifts were transferred to this account.

Mrs. Edward A. Killingsworth is chairperson of the fund. She said, "It is my firm belief that this fund shall play a very important part in the symphony's plans to bring every conceivable opportunity for the people of Long Beach to hear and participate in live symphonic performances.

"For instance, through this fund, we hope to reestablish awards to young aspiring musicians, to help finance free concerts in the schools, to provide means to finance special worthwhile projects which might otherwise be left undone and, lastly, to provide a perpetual means of assuring the orchestra's continued existence.

"Gifts to the Endowment Fund are specially significant since each donation, no matter how large or small, will be placed permanently as a part of the fund. Only the interest from this investment will be used by the association for programs and projects.

"IT IS INDEED comforting for those of us who have worked over the years to see the successes of the Long Beach Symphony, to know that in future years this fund will become one of the major sources of revenue for the symphony."

Therefore, attendance at "Amahl and the Night Visitors" can provide not only a delightful musical experience — it can contribute to future musical development since proceeds will swell the Endowment Fund.

Mary Costa to sing in concert Friday

Mary Costa, Metropolitan Opera star, will appear in concert Friday at 8 p.m. in Garden Grove Community Church Auditorium, 12141 Lewis St. The 1,700-seat glass sanctuary is located at the intersection of Chapman Avenue and Lewis Street, one-half mile west of the Santa Ana Freeway.

This will be Miss Costa's only Orange County concert this season. It is presented in conjunction with Artist Series '75-'76, sponsored by the Christian Development Center for the Performing Arts and the Orange County Cultural Center, Inc. Tickets, priced at $6, may be purchased at the auditorium.

In addition to her roles with the Metropolitan Opera, Miss Costa has sung at Covent Garden, with the Bolshoi Opera in Moscow, and has given performances in Geneva and Lisbon. She has performed with virtually every major orchestra and opera company in the United States.

Widows pay price for over-protection

By DARRELL SIFFORD
Knight News Service

Back in the summer I interviewed a widow of 10 months who talked about the agony of readjustment and how ill prepared she was for it.

Among readers who responded was Mrs. Hertha Hahne of Philadelphia, who is in her 70s and who was widowed in 1949.

She wrote:

"My advice...to all wives of still loving and living husbands is: Don't let him be overprotective and shield you from all unpleasant affairs. You may pay a bitter price for it.

"Be aware of what he earns, of his pensions and insurance. And most of all — pamper his body, care for his health and preserve him for a ripe old age as much as you can by providing a peaceful home, with no nagging, no pushing for higher achievements and promotions. Enjoy the bliss of a good marriage as long as possible.

"Our men are made of frailer stuff than we are and they need pampering and coddling all their lives to survive the struggle of a cruel business world."

Mrs. Hahne is a native of Germany, came to the United States in the late 1920s. She has three children, including a daughter who is a professor of economics at Temple University, and nine grandchildren. Her husband of 30 years, at the time of his death at age 60, was an engineer and vice-president of a fabric company.

In an interview she talked about American marriage as she perceives it:

"THERE IS MUCH pressure on the typical businessman — the worries of running a business, of trying to get higher on the corporate ladder. He takes his worries home, but he rarely talks about them — because he doesn't want to bother his wife. By training he is made to feel that a husband should be all-knowing and all-protective.

"So he worries in silence. His wife, because he doesn't share his worries, thinks he is happy in his work. Then one day he suffers a heart attack, a stroke or develops pneumonia. And the wife wonders why."

Question: What would you suggest that the wife do — before the heart attack strikes her husband?

Answer: She ought to leave him be, not insist that they go out so often if he's tired. She should let him stay at home and enjoy an evening nap.

She should back off and let her husband proceed at his own pace in business and not put her own personal need of status so high that he must double or triple his income to satisfy her ambitions. American women, I find, tend to push husbands to achieve. And often they don't notice that the health is being broken in the process. So they are losing the goose that lays the golden egg.

Men are made of frailer stuff than women. I could see that in my baby boy in contrast to my baby girls. They need much more attention and care even when they are very young.

Men, beginning in their 50s, usually show signs of wear and energy drain from all their years of toiling. You can look in the obituaries every day and see how many businessmen have died at the peak of their careers — 45, 51, 60.

"You can look in the obituaries every day and see how many businessmen have died at the peak of their careers."

TO ANY WOMAN — no matter how young or how healthy her husband is — I would say: Prepare yourself to know enough to take your place in the business world. If you're faced with it, be sure you have the ability, strength and power to make a life of your own.

Q. How dies a wife prepare herself?

A. If she has no training, then she needs to go back to school — a business school or whatever. Maybe she can train to be an interior decorator if she has an interest in that. I had a friend who tried the landscaping business — because it always had appealed to her. A woman needs to draw on what she has been doing and add to it.

In my case, at one time, I trained in cosmetology, opened a special salon. Maybe because of my personality and foreign accent it became a hit.

Q. What happens if the wife has a husband who's threatened by all this?

A. It happens. No man would like his wife to put him in the shadows or question his ability to take care of family needs. It all depends on how the wife explains it to him. It can take a great deal of tact.

In my case, when I went to work, my husband didn't object because we could use the extra money to help finance his new business.

But a husband must understand that there is no shame connected with his wife's working. If a man likes his wife's looks, her personality, her graciousness as a hostess, well, then he also should like her ability to succeed in a job and make money. It's not taking anything away from him.

Q. What advice would you have for the wife whose husband is overprotective, won't discuss financial matters with her?

A. She must convince him of the need to share these matters with her. If the husband is overprotective, the wife has no idea of where she stands. She doesn't know her assets, where the important papers are filed. She may not even know how to balance a checkbook.

The husband may think he's doing her a great favor by shielding her from these realities. But, if he dies, she's left floundering. If a wife isn't in the know on family assets, she's like a business that makes a budget on non-existent capital.

Women are asking...

"How can I customize my pantsuit so it doesn't look like everyone else's?"

By REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL

A pair of patches can do wonders for personalizing a pantsuit. If you use more appliques in forming a pattern or scene, you're on target for some fall fashion fun.

Since the Bicentennial is upon us, many are using appliques in red, white and blue. Others go the sew-on route and select ready-made appliques. Stars, fruits, vegetables, animal shapes are available so you can dress up the yoke of a jacket, decorate a sleeve, or trim the pants and cuff. Still others, with needle know-how, are embroidering their own style signatures on the apparel.

Everything from handbags, to hats, to skirts, to parkas is getting the patch treatment. Recently, a group of college students completed a cross-country tour and saluted this fact with an iron-on bike patch decorated in red, white and blue stars and stripes. To secure to fabric, they used a dry iron at the wool setting, pre-warmed area where patch was to be applied, covered patch with pressing cloth, held iron on cloth 10 to 15 seconds, then allowed to cool.

If you would like a free iron-on patch, saluting the All-American bike tour (only one request in each letter), send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Reba & Bonnie Churchill, Independent Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

The Aces on Bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

We have a player who is always disorderly in placing the dummy. Who is authorized to rearrange some of dummy's cards?

Co-Defendant
Denver

Answer: A defender should not touch dummy's cards, but may ask the dummy or declarer to arrange them properly.

In the Summer Nationals held in Miami, declarer said to dummy, who had accidentally covered some cards with cigarettes, "Please uncover the diamonds." Dummy did so, showing the J-9-7-5-2. "Ugh," said declarer, "cover them up again."

Dear Mr. Corn:

We reached a slam, down one, on these cards.

Who gets the blame for over-bidding?

Wrong Ace
Milwaukee

Answer: Both of you. East was not strong enough for an initial two over one response and West didn't have to jump to four clubs since three clubs would have forced to game.

West was unwise to ask for aces with a void suit because the information might prove valueless, as it did. I would estimate the fault as West 75 per cent; East 25 per cent. I suggest this bidding.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened and I made a jump shift. The next player bid and partner passed. I say partner was forced to bid; others say not. Who is right?

No Agreement
Pacific Grove, Calif.

Answer: Your partner was not forced to bid since the opponent's bid kept the bidding open for you to continue. The pass should show a minimum hand, no great support for your suit and a willingness to defend if responder chooses to double the opponents.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I dealt and opened three spades. Next player bid four hearts and partner doubled. Was I right in passing with this hand?

Bad Results
Montgomery, Ala.

Answer: I have little criticism of the three spade opening, although my preempts are much weaker in high cards. Given the preempt, the pass was certainly clear cut since opener had much more defensive strength than could reasonably be expected.

It's an easy and inexpensive project, something that will last a lifetime. The well shown was made of standard lumber sizes available from all lumber dealers. Redwood or red cedar are recommended, as either of these require practically no maintenance over the years.

Everyone knows that "clothes make the man," but let's twist that time-honored saying a bit to add..."accessories make the yard." You don't have to be a buff of early American antiques to appreciate the handsome wishing well shown here.

In addition to its decorative and rustic charm, it can also be a very practical garden center. The bucket may be planted with flowers or the artificial variety may be used.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Spotlight on melton coating

frances dietrich

The word "melton" evokes a mental picture of a man's overcoat of many years ago, heavy, elegant and practically indestructible. The fabric was phased out to make way for lighter weight more casual topcoats.

Now, melton is being reintroduced; recognition of one of the all-time classic wool fabrics, which is just the ticket for today's smart sports outerwear for women and men.

There has never been a time when cold-weather sportswear was more in demand, whether in spectator styling or designs for rugged, active wear. Melton is also favored by designers of women's wear, who use it in long roomy coats, pea jackets, duffel coats and in wrap styling.

Mundane "overcoat" colors have given way to orange, bright blue, camel color, red, green and bright plaids.

THE ORIGINAL melton was designed with a purpose: to provide the fox-hunting gentry of wooded Melton Mowbray in Leicestershire, England, with a sturdy, warm cloth for riding habits, which could be superbly tailored.

Melton is still created in very much the same way. There are varying weights, and quality depends upon the richness of the wool used. It is a plain woven woolen cloth, which is deliberately felted.

The newly woven cloth is run through warm, soapy water, then pounded and twisted to make the fuzzy woolen fibers interlock. After a cold rinse, which shrinks the weave and tightens the interlacing yarns, it goes through another torturous process. It is drawn through a series of rollers covered with fine wire hooks, which pluck up surface fibers.

This napping process gives the tough fabric a soft, smooth feel. The felting and napping combination makes the fabric warm and increases its durability. Melton has a distinctive appearance, being subtly napped and nonlustrous.

MELTON IS unique among felted and napped fabric such as kersey, beaver cloth and woolen broadcloth in that it has the shortest raised nap. In addition to all the other processes that melton goes through, it is double-sheared in order to get the close-cropped effect.

There is not a large amount of melton retail yardage or ready-to-wear, but if the wool growers of America have anything to do about it, you'll be seeing a lot more of this fabric and other wool classics. More sheep are being raised in more scientific ways to produce more wool.

It is expected that as petroleum feedstock for the textile industry gets higher priced, fashion designers and clothing manufacturers will turn more and more to wool as a basic fiber.

Meanwhile, when you find a beautiful piece of melton for home sewing, treat it with the care it deserves. You'll find it shapes and stitches like all fine wool. Often, it is in the pressing process that your careful work may be negated.

Though melton is sturdy, its napped surface requires a light hand with the iron. To prevent overpressing, which gives a shiny look, use low iron temperature, light pressure and a barely damp, not wet, press cloth. You can control the amount of moisture by dampening one-third of the cloth, then roll and wring to distribute moisture.

Press all seams as they are sewed. Do not wait until the garment is completely constructed.

Pots, pans kept mirror bright at very little cost

the Formula

By NORMAN H. STARK

Finished metals are, at least in my opinion, beautiful materials. They are made in many degrees of hardness and are therefore very versatile. But to keep them looking bright requires occasional cleaning and polishing.

This formula will keep all metals looking the way they did when they came from the mills. Take one-eighth cup of TRI SODIUM PHOSPHATE (TSP) (available at paint or hardware stores) and dry-mix with one cup of ordinary SODA ASH (also at hardware store) and add one-fourth cup of BAKING SODA, available at your grocers. Dip a damp cloth or sponge in the mixture and rub the metal. Rinse with clear water and dry with soft cloth.

The cost of making your own metal polish and cleaner is approximately five cents per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-brought brand by the number of ounces it contains. The compare the per-ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area. If you wish to make up a larger quantity — and save even more — buy your materials at a chemical supply company.

(Like any product you make at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

There has never been a how-to book so practical and helpful as THE FORMULA BOOK. Hundreds of easy recipes put savings and fun into the making of your own personal and home care items. Over 200 pages of recipes, diagrams and instructions on ingredients and equipment, in a large paperback format, for only $5.95. Send to Formula Book, c/o this newspaper.)

Richardson's

Actual Photograph of the Richardson's New Room!

When Mr. and Mrs. Richardson decided to add a room to their home, they shopped around. They wanted to find a company that could do the job, and do it well. After talking to several companies they decided on Alamo. We asked Mr. Richardson why he chose Alamo. "It was the way they handled themselves, we were impressed with the people at Alamo Center. After the job was started we decided to change the position of the fireplace. This was done without problems or expense. The people at Alamo bent over backwards, to give us the room we wanted."

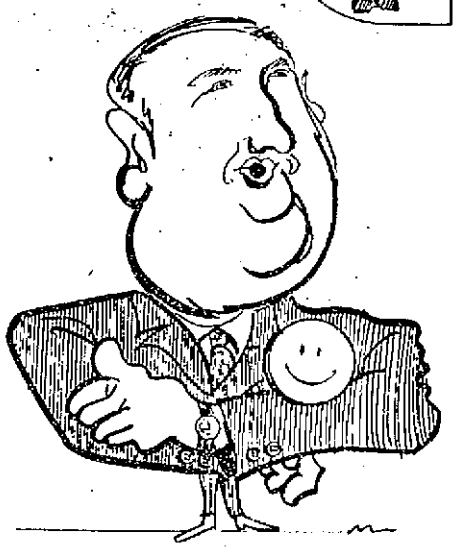

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are satisfied Alamo customers. If you are planning remodeling or adding a room to your home, talk to us. EMMETT PARSONS
Plenty of fresh, firm swordfish

IN THE NEWSPAPER BIZ, we have such categories as "straight news" or "human interest" stories. I have one of each today concerning Cigo's, Pacific Avenue at Ninth Street, San Pedro, one of Southern California's truly superlative seafood houses.

First the news. Cigo's now has a big supply of fresh swordfish, the really good kind that has been extremely hard to obtain in recent years. Many seafood devotees (including me) consider the best swordfish to be superior to the more expensive ocean entrees, such as lobster or crab. Cigo's broiled swordfish steak is the firm but tender kind. The serving is generous — eight to nine ounces — and it's accompanied by all the many delectables of Cigo's fancy dinner, including antipasto of salami, cheese and marinated garbanzoes; splendid creamy Boston clam chowder AND salad; baked potato or mostaccioli pasta or French fries; hot cheesebread, coffee or tea. The price is $4.50, very reasonable for such a quality feast.

Now the human interest story. Cigo's is owned by Emmett Parsons who has lived in the San Pedro-Long Beach area since 1927. He is 5 feet, 6 inches tall. Recently he lost 11 pounds, so he is not nearly as round and fully packed as he used to be. Emmett's weight is a secret, but it is too soon for us to start calling him "Skinny." For a man to lose 11 pounds while surrounded by all those wonderful foods at Cigo's is indeed a miracle. Emmett quite obviously is proof that broiled seafoods aren't fattening.

If you happen to be on a diet, I have a suggestion that will bring you the ultimate in food pleasure. Sacrifice a little today. Eat only one meal. But let it be that feast at Cigo's. Enjoy all those many items including a baked potato, steaming and hot, oozing melted butter. Afterward, you'll wear a smile as bright as Emmett's. And tomorrow you can return to your regular diet.

Cigo's serves Sundays from 4 to 10 p.m.. The daily dinners are 3:30 to 10:30 p.m. and the popular luncheons are Monday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The facilities include a banquet room and cocktail lounge. The kitchen maestros are Tony Madrigal and Ralph Hedge, plus many assistants. They do outstanding work.

Also fresh on the menu are red snapper, $3.95; cabrilla whitefish from Mexico, $3.95, and white sea bass, $3.95. The supplies sometimes vary, according to weather conditions which may limit fishing boat activities. Cigo's has a bonanza of seafoods,as well as prime rib au jus and steaks, featuring abalone, halibut, sand dabs, shrimp, broiled squid, scallops, steamed clams, cracked crab and Dalmation-style cioppino. Unusually popular are the gourmet fish dinners, such as the mermaid, $6.75, or the fisherman, $7.95, including a huge variety of sea delicacies, some of which are quite exotic. (Cigo's will be closed Thanksgiving.)

LIFE SEEMS TO BE more complicated every year. In the past, most restaurants accepted phone reservations for their Thanksgiving Day feasts. But now there are many excellent restaurants throughout Southern California which don't accept reservations, serving on a first-come, first-served basis.

I'm happy to report, however, that the large, spacious Golden Sails Inn still serves its traditional Thanksgiving Day feast as it has done for years, accepting phone reservations. It's not too early to phone today to make certain you get a reservation.

The inn at 6285 E. Pacific Coast Highway at Loynes Drive is part of the multi-million dollar motel, restaurant and banquet center complex directed by John Apostle, one of Long Beach's leading businessmen for several decades. The glamorous, Mediterranean decor Espana dining room will start serving its Thanksgiving dinners at 11 a.m. and continue through 11 p.m. The menu will be prepared by the inn's large staff of culinary artists, working in their huge spic and span kitchen.

The Golden Sails' holiday dinner will include cream of fresh mushroom soup or mixed green salad; entree, appropriate vegetables, hot rolls with butter, coffee and such dessert choices as hot pumpkin or apple pie, ice cream or sherbet. The entrees will include roast young Vermont tom turkey, $5.65, with savory dressing, giblet sauce, cranberry sauce, whipped potatoes and green beans almondine; baked Virginia ham with Cumberland fruit-wine sauce, $5.65, including candied yams; juicy, tender roast prime rib of beef, $8.75, with creamed spinach and Yorkshire pudding; roast duckling with bigarade sauce and a compote of fruit, $8.35; veal Oscar, $8.75, with crableg and rich bearnaise sauce, and eastern prime New York steak, $9.95. Children's dinners will be $3.25.

The Golden Sails' banquet center is one of the largest in this area, with rooms of different sizes, some accommodating up to 750 guests. The Thanksgiving dinner will be served to family groups of 12 to 30 in private rooms or at large tables in the ballroom. Larger parties of 100 or more will be served in the banquet rooms. The prices for the groups will be the same as in the main dining room.

Caroline—JFK the number one man in her life

saddening her. "But she doesn't mind if they do, and she brings him into the conversation herself often," Juan points out. "Sometimes his name comes right off the top of my head, without thinking, but I can see that she doesn't feel bad. She's honored."

There is much other evidence that the memory of her father and his influence upon her have remained unusually strong in the dozen years since his assassination:

She surrounds herself with photographs of him, smiling pictures of the two together. Her room in Haines House at Concord during senior year, which she shared with Cynthia Porter of Brookline, Mass., was filled with them. She has two dozen in her large, bright bedroom in her mother's New York apartment on upper Fifth Avenue, overlooking Central Park. She carries pictures of him when she vacations and travels.

She has almost total recall of the White House years, though they ended when she was only six. Once she amazed the curator of Kennedy memorabilia when she entered a temporary building in Waltham, Mass., in which they were stored. She recognized at once all the objects the President had had in his office — everything from his famous rocking chair to the carved ivory or scrimshaw on his desk.

She asks probing questions of family friends who knew John Kennedy to tell her about him, everything from his pranks in prep school to the great events he helped shape. She has read many of the books written about him by historians and political analysts, and, in preparation for the life of public service she intends — at least for now — to follow, she has taken many courses in history, political science and international relations, and ecology.

Caroline was never very close to her late stepfather, Aristotle Onassis, but as the years passed she became increasingly fond of the rough-hewn billionaire. Onassis knew, according to his friends, that he could never assume the role of a real father to Caroline and John, but he was always unfailingly kind to them. Lemoyne K. Billings, a classmate of President Kennedy at Choate and a close family friend, told me: "Onassis made a big effort to be a good father."

Caroline spent many of her vacations on Skorpios, the private island the shipping tycoon owned off the coast of Greece, and saw him on his trips to New York. When Caroline's friends were visiting, he would come in, chat, make jokes.

In the end, Onassis succeeded in the difficult task of a stepfather: "I didn't see him that much," she confided to a classmate after her return from Onassis' funeral last Spring, "but I really did love him."

CAROLINE has always had a warm relationship with her mother, a tribute to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' determination to remain close to her children despite the incredible pressures of her own life. "I'm a woman above everything else," Mrs. Onassis once said in a rare moment of self-revelation. "I love children and I think that seeing one's children grow up is the most delightful thing any woman can think about." Throughout the years since the assassination, Jackie has fought hard to isolate and insulate her children from an intrusive world, to encourage their independence and at the same time to give them her presence and support. As far as it was possible under the extraordinary circumstances of their position, she wanted to give Caroline and John a normal childhood.

Her efforts have been largely successful. Caroline has weathered the difficult adolescent years with only minor squabbles over allowances and late hours. One family friend points out: "They have never had that love-hate relationship which exists so frequently among mothers and daughters." Declares Lem Billings:

"I've never seen any children so beautifully brought up. That's why I really admire Jacqueline. It's the greatest thing she has ever done — a woman with all her problems, to raise two such normal and attractive children. She's a wonderful mother."

There is, however, a difference in Caroline's attitude toward her parents, a difference one can readily understand and which Jackie doubtless realizes. A perceptive classmate who knows her well sums it up thusly: "She loves her mother, but she reveres her father."

Another measure of Jackie's success in raising her children in the face of fearful handicaps is that Caroline has grown up truly unspoiled. Though aware of her celebrity status, she comes across as unaffected, gacious and unfailingly polite. Because she is Caroline Kennedy, she gets awesome attention. Heads of state will often extend invitations to her when she visits their countries — last March, after Onassis died, she and John were invited to lunch with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing in Paris. (Giscard presented her aunt, Eunice Shriver, with the Legion of Honor medal for her work with handicapped children in France when her husband, Sargent Shriver, was U.S. ambassador.) She is impressed by these courtesies but will never expect or demand blue-ribbon handling from anyone, anywhere. She is more concerned about the opinions of her friends and classmates than any perquisites she may receive as a celebrity.

SHE IS, IN FACT, acutely sensitive to the attitudes of her peers. Thus her recurring bouts of despondence when she senses — or thinks she does — that her friends may consider her "arrogant." Juan Cameron says: "It means a lot to her not to be thought arrogant, and she really isn't. I've never seen any signs that people feel this way. I keep telling her but sometimes she doesn't believe me."

One recent incident underscored her vulnerability. After classes one day, in Brigham's ice cream shop on Main Street, she and several girl friends had finished their snacks and were deep in talk. Two boys from Middlesex came in and waited for a table in the crowded place. Finally one walked over to Caroline's group and said: "Come on girls, you're finished. Why don't you leave?" Caroline, engrossed in the conversation, replied over her shoulder: "We're talking. Please don't hurry us." The second boy whispered to his friend: "Hey, that's Caroline Kennedy." To this, the youth responded, using an obscenity: "I don't give a —— who she is. She doesn't have to be so arrogant."

Everyone in the vicinity heard and turned to look. Caroline flushed and her eyes filled with tears. She put her hands over her face, rose and quickly left the shop. She cried, not because of the four-letter word which she doubtless knew as well as any teenager, but because she had been accused publicly of being arrogant, the very thing she has tried so hard not to be.

But Caroline does not weep much or often. Most of the time she is ebullient, with an off-beat sense of humor that delights her friends and would astonish people who still think of her as a sad and serious little girl. To her Concord classmates interviewed at the school and in the village she is "punchy" ... "impulsive" ... "notorious for her pranks" ... "outrageous in a fun-loving way." Incident upon incident bears out the assessment:

Once she poured bubble bath liquid into a fountain dispensing ice water. At Brigham's one afternoon she lost a dare game and had to pay a "penalty" — perform a Hawaiian hula in the middle of the floor and afterward kiss a strange boy. Uninhibitedly, she wiggled her hips in the aisle, kissed the youth and sat down to applause and laughter.

Early last spring, Caroline and a friend, Sarah Logan of Boothbay Harbor, Maine, managed to lock themselves out of their dormitory at 7 a.m. On a whim, they had gone outside. To their shock, the door clicked shut behind them. They shrugged and, in slippers and robes, began walking the short distance to the town center for breakfast. On the way a policeman in a squad car picked them up and returned them to school, arousing the occupants of the dorm. The law firmly told Caroline and friend not to go wandering around Concord in the future in nightclothes.

She played hide and seek — literally — with the Secret Service agents who guarded her night and day until she was 16. It can now be told: they lost her frequently or, rather, she lost them. Once she slipped away to Boston in a car to hear her uncle, Sen. Ted Kennedy speak. The agents, who thought she was in her dormitory, were amazed and chagrined to learn by radio that she was 17 miles away. Another time, she boarded a bus but left it at once through a rear door without being observed. The agents followed the bus while Caroline went her own way.

HER INTERESTS, ranging over a broad spectrum, peak and ebb as she grows and changes. Her newest artistic hobbies are painting, writing poetry and growing house plants which she would buy herself at the Concord Flower Shop on Walden Street. At 15, she became an eager photographer, reaching such a level of expertise that her mother planned an exhibition of her character studies and nature pictures in New York. It was quickly cancelled when the press heard about it and the show threatened to get out of hand. However, her $1,000 Leicaflex, one of the world's most expensive cameras, is used less these days as her enthusiasm roams elsewhere.

Her passion for horses, begun in childhood and flaming throughout much of her adolescence, has also dimmed. It was supplanted last year by a new excitement, unpublicized until now — flying.

Skiing and tennis have been favorite sports for years, but this year Caroline has taken to jogging in the countryside, field hockey and lacrosse. Last season, she was first-string defense for the Concord girls lacrosse team and performed credibly, though the team lost more games than it won.

What is she like in more personal terms as she nears 18? She is five feet, six inches tall, has a heavy sprinkling of freckles across the top of her nose and under her eyes and, like most teen-agers, is concerned about her weight. ("She always thinks she's too fat," Juan says, "so she eats a lot of yogurt and salads.") She resists temptation for days, then backslides with pizza, rich desserts and, occasionally, beer. When the little rolls of fat would accumulate around her middle, Juan would tease her about her "tires."

She is in perfect health. Except for a bout of acne at 16 and the usual colds and sore throats, she has never been ill, though at times she seems to court disaster. One freezing day, for example, she came in to H.S. Howe's jewelry store in Concord wearing only a sleeveless blouse. "Goodness, aren't you cold?" a clerk asked her. "Nope," Caroline replied. "I have a metabolism like a snake."

She wears her light brown hair in cascades down her back, a pony tail or, when the mood strikes her, one long braid. Her daily costume is teen-age modern — blue jeans and top, a down parka when the mercury really dips.

She is not a big spender. Recently in Concord she bought a pair of above-calf suede boots with crepe soles — "the cheapest ones we had," a clerk says — and paid for them with a crumpled check pulled from a dungaree pocket. Other purchases would usually be small — flowers for sick friends, silver earrings for pierced ears ($7.50), occasionally books and records — and bubble gum at Richardson's drug store! Jackie keeps both children on limited allowances. Once when she and her son John visited Caroline, the boy came down for breakfast early at the Colonial Inn and told manager Benoit: "I can't sit down, I don't have any money. My mother has all the money." They let him have breakfast anyway."

THREE STAGES IN life of Caroline Kennedy are pictured here: At left, she is 3 years old when her father, John F. Kennedy, was in the White House; center photo, she is a freckle-faced 9-year-old at horse show in New Vernon, N.J. in 1966, three years after her father's assassination, and at right, she is 10 on a camping trip. She is now nearing 18 and studying art appreciation at Sotheby's in London.

WITH JACQUELINE Onassis' guidance, she combines vacations with work. In the summer of 1973, she helped film a documentary about coal miners in Tennessee; last summer she worked as an intern in No. 431, Old Senate Office Building — her Uncle Ted's five-room office suite, where, surrounded by photographs of her father and uncles, she sorted mail, filed documents and ran errands.

Her most recent "job" was a non-salaried independent study project with NBC which took her on a 26,000-mile journey around Europe and the Middle East last February and most of March. At Concord, seniors are permitted to work on approved off-campus projects for academic credit. Caroline, who has taken many courses in film-making, with emphasis on documentaries, began work at NBC the first week in February.

HOW DO WE ASSESS Caroline at 18? She is mentally and physically healthy, active, spirited, bright — and the scars do not show.

She could have grown up far differently. Psychiatrists say that intense anxiety feelings can result when a child is violently separated from a person he loves and whose love he needs. Many children hurt psychically in this way, have sought relief from mental pain by escaping as they grew older into drugs, alcohol or even breakdowns.

That Caroline has not done so is a tribute to her inner strength, both inborn and infused in her by Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Mrs. Kennedy doubtless knew that the crises could have a devastating impact upon her children, and there is not much question this is why she has worked so hard to blunt their effects.

younger than spring. The musical does not pretend to be a history of Broadway music. It is, instead, a concert—type entertainment in which various periods of history are shown in the way they influenced the world musically.

From the American Frontier, the entire company rides to the footlights in a covered wagon chanting such endearing tunes as "Lorena" and "Skip to My Lou." The military gets into the act with a section of patriotic songs, the highlights of which include Patrice Munsel doing a rousing "Over Here" with dancing doughboys and valentine-faced Lillian Gish piercing the heart with "I Didn't Raise My Boy to be a Soldier." The waltzes of Lehar and Strauss, the early refrains of Friml and Romberg, and the star-spangled rhythms of George M. Cohan bring the first-act curtain to a rousing finale.

The second half of the evening is devoted to Cole Porter, Noel Coward, Dietz and Schwartz, and other Broadway legends. There's a section on jazz in which Patrice Munsel simply knocked me unconscious with her heartfelt "Why Was I Born," and the whole thing is worth the price of admission just to watch Tammy grimes make mincemeat out of "I'm Just Wild About Harry."

Audiences are flocking to this show, and I don't think it's because they are hungry for musicals. I think the world is ready once more for good taste, real music that sings in the heart and the head long after the final curtain, and a feeling of being uplifted and enriched the way only good music can perform the job. Even the kids are listening to better music than they were 10 years ago.

If nobody is willing to write anything this good today, then I strongly approve of dipping into the old piano bench and bringing back the taste we lost before body odor and the Rolling Stones took over. If it takes music to get people out of their doldrums, then I'm happy to announce that Broadway is doing its part in the war against mediocrity. New York might have its troubles, but we're doing our darnedest to hum them away.

The longest leap

Highest wagon jump ever made, according to Universal Studio, is this one for film "The Blarney Cock" on location at Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. Stunt men going over 85-foot cliff in wagon are Chuck Waters, dressed as woman; Jophrey Brown, arms above head, and Howard Curtis, right. —AP Wirephoto

Banning of director's last film protested

PARIS (AP) — Italian film directors and actors on Saturday attacked film censorship in Italy and specifically the banning of the last film made by the late director Pier Paolo Pasolini, "Salo or the 120 Days of Sodom."

The film is being premiered at the international film festival here and received a mixed reception at a press showing Saturday, drawing some adverse comments about the torture and sex scenes. The film is about Fascist northern Italy in 1944.

Among those attacking the ban were Bernardo Bertolucci, director of "Last Tango in Paris." He said he and the others would make no comment on individual scenes in "Salo" but simply condemn what he said were systematic attacks on Pasolini by the Italian establishment from the start of his career.

Pasolini, 53, was fatally injured when run over by a car Nov. 2 on a road near the beach of Ostia, southwest of Rome. A 17-year-old youth, Giuseppe Pelosi, was charged with the crime. Italian press reports said the two fought when Pelosi refused Pasolini's homosexual advances. Police have declined comment on the reports.

'Jaws' open wide

HOLYWOOD (AP) — More happy news for MCA-Universal stockholders: "Jaws" will be released in more than 700 theaters in 44 countries at Christmas time. Already the No. 1 moneymaking film of all time, the shark saga will be given Universal's biggest release and exploitation campaign.

'Tired of old junk'

Pointers make points

By CARL ARRINGTON
Knight News Service

The Pointer sisters, the gladrag dolls who rode in with the cultural tide of nostalgia, are back in sequins and ready for a smooth ride on the success express.

"Yeah, we got tired of all our old junk and gave it back to the Salvation Army," said Bonnie Pointer, "but we're going to keep our new stuff until it looks like our old stuff."

For several years the Pointers have been recycling old songs with their breathless energies and exact harmonies. The Pointers are now a trio instead of a quartet. Anita, 25, explains, "Baby June had to drop from the group permanetly because she got sick. We miss her but as they say the show must go on."

Even as a trio the Pointers deliver a fast-moving, entertaining show. The group now has an odd symmetry that still efectively delivers their hodgepodge of songs. And with three they are even closer in sound to classic harmonizers such as the Andrews sisters and Lambert, Hendricks and Ross.

"We just play what we know," said Anita. What they know includes a breakneck version of Dizzy Gillespie's "Salt Peanuts," a medley of Duke Ellington favorites, a steaming rendition of "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and a smattering of their own songs.

After working together for years since they began singing in their father's Oakland, Calif., church choir, the sisters harmonize perfectly.

Even though the Pointers are close musically, they are still looking for a new direction to take their music. After riding the crest of nostalgia, their tight, glossy act seems destined for television and Las Vegas where they can enjoy the fruits of their hectic schedule of the past three years.

IF YOU SEE ONLY ONE FILM THIS YEAR, THIS SHOULD BE THE ONE!

O'Brien not riding a lonely trail

NEW YORK — Having dinner with Hugh O'Brian, the Wyatt Earp of our TV heritage, was decidedly different. Settling down, he asked for a double martini, a tartar steak, and the way to the men's room. After five minutes, he returned from the men's room and went to a pay phone. It seemed to be a lengthy call, so the maitre d' picked up the double martini and took it to the phone.

Then the autographees descended. "What's your name? Where you from?" he asked them all.

One young woman said, "Jane." He said, "Jane what?" "Just plain Jane!" she said. "You haven't been plain since you were born," he smiled back. A husband came over to get an autograph for his wife. "My wife's not aggressive," he explained. "Send her over here!" Hugh O'Brian snapped. "She shouldn't send her husband to do the dirty work."

THE WOMAN came over and sat for a spell and Hugh seemed perfectly comfortable.

That's the way he works and continues so successfully in TV, and on the stage and in films. He was happy that not many people called him Wyatt Earp, or so he said. "It's hard to break an image," he added. "Remember, I did 'Hamlet' in Chicago before I ever got on a horse to do Earp. But I'm not complaining. That horse went to the bank with me every Friday."

HUGH O'BRIEN...'Hard to Break Image'

While the maitre d' mixed the tartar steak, Hugh said, "You know, I've got some of that so-called Go-to-Hell money, so I can be a little choosey."

He mentioned the ABC-TV film, "Murder on Flight 502," coming up, Nov. 21, three murders on one 747. "You're the pilot," I said. "No, Robert Stack's the pilot. I'm the New York City detective going to visit Scotland Yard, on an exchange course."

A man came to his table and said, "I saw that picture you made in Africa."

HUGH grinned. "That was the one where the actors made the mistake of standing in front of the scenery," he said.

O'Brian has been picked on by married journalists because he's a bachelor, and asked if he is still fond of Hugh Hefner, a fellow flirt. "He is genuinely one of America's greatest hosts," Hugh said. "We both come from Chicago, we have the same first name and we look something alike. Contrary to public opinion," Hugh said emphatically, "God help the man visiting Hugh Hefner, who touches one of those Bunnies!"

Why hasn't O'Brien married?

He hasn't found the right one. He frankly added, "A couple of people haven't wanted me either. I would hope that one day I would find one to share what I have worked so hard for. Meanwhile, I keep visiting the library."

"You mean looking over the crop of new girls?

"If you say so. I sure as hell spend a lot of time browsing."

Hugh O'Brian coined a classic Hollywood story about actors' fame. He tells the five stages of an actor.

"FIRST stage: A producer who is asked to hire Hugh O'Brian says, 'Who's Hugh O'Brian?' Second stage: Producer says, 'Get me Hugh O'Brian!' Third stage: Producer says, 'Get me a Hugh O'Brian type!' Fourth Stage: Producer says, 'Get me a young Hugh O'Brian!' Fifth stage: Producer says, 'Who's Hugh O'Brian?'"

It'll be a long time before anybody says, "Who's Hugh O'Brian?" — just because of those "Wyatt Earps" — 39 a year for six years for a total of 234. And when he plays theaters, he does a 15-minute afterpiece, bringing members of the audience on stage. "If you did that on Broadway you'd get clobbered, but they love it out of town."

Casino owner under fire

Associated Press

Allen Glick, owner of four major Las Vegas casinos, has been charged with failure to report loans totaling $1.6 million and other violations of Nevada gaming laws, it was reported Saturday.

The report said Glick, who faces a public hearing and recommended fines of $170,000, was served with a complaint in Las Vegas on Friday. Glick owns the Stardust, Fremont and Hacienda hotel-casinos and the Marina Casino.

The complaint indicated the loans were needed by Glick to repay personal debts and construction and other costs for his financial empire. Glick, who has been underwritten with $100 million in loans from the Teamster (Central State) Pension Fund, was a co-owner of the San Diego-based Saratoga Development Corp., now in bankruptcy proceedings.

At its Thursday meeting, the Nevada Gaming Commission said "probable grounds" had been established for disciplinary action against Glick. The commission later ordered the state Gaming Control Board, the investigative arm of the commission, to serve the complaint on Glick.

The Los Angeles Times said Glick has hired Shannon Bybee, a former member of the Control Board now in private law practice, to represent him.

Feliciano at D'land

Vocalist Jose Feliciano will be offering his distinctive style to Disneyland guests during the park's Thanksgiving holiday salute this Friday and Saturday. Hours for the celebration have been extended to 9 a.m. to midnight. Feliciano will appear on Tomorrowland Stage at 6, 8 and 1 p.m. along with special guest singer Carrie McDowell.

EARL'S PEARLS

Today's Best Laugh: "Remember," warns George Gobel, "it takes only one drink to make you drunk. With me it's the fourth one."

Wish I'd Said That: Phil Foster described a friend's unhappy married life: "Nowadays, when he laughs, it's from memory."

Remembered Quote: "Too many speeches are like the horns on a steer — a point here, a point there, and a lot of bull in between."

Earl's Pearls: There's been a survey of all the political polls, reports John Raudonis, and it shows that 90 per cent of those questioned think the country is being run by the "Don't Knows."

President Ford's decided to economize, says Lou Breeker: "For instance, he'll fire his gagwriter and get his jokes from old magazines in his dentist's office." That's earl, brother.

Puerto Vallarta — where livin' is easy

By JACK BALDWIN
Staff Writer

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico — As the 60-foot trimaran pulled away from the dock, bikini-clad cuties were swabbing themselves with lotion. It was only shortly after nine in the morning but already the sun was bearing down through a smog-free, cloudless sky.

About 45 of us "turistas" were off on a day-long cruise down the coast from this picturesque fishing village with its hand-made cobblestone streets to a remote isolated sand-covered cove. Although there was no wind, the captain of our boat, the Bora Bora, hoisted the mainsail as shade for those among us sun shy.

It was somewhat of a surprise to learn that our fare for the trip ($14 per person) included free cocktails — all day!

During the smooth leisurely cruise southward, our skipper stopped near a rugged mini-sized rock of Gibraltar. A young crewman, Phillipe, swam to the rock and slowly made his way up to the top of the 60-foot high rock island. As cameras clicked Phillipe made a graceful arching swan dive into the ocean. His derring-do was warmly lauded by the Bora Bora passengers as he climbed back aboard.

travel

Upon reaching the cove the boat was maneuvered close to shore and anchored. The shout went up, "Everybody in the water!" The water was unbelievably warm and as clear as a bottle of Sparkletts. Wading ashore we explored the cove which boasted a small clear stream cascading down the steep mountain side and into several cool pools at the back of the cove.

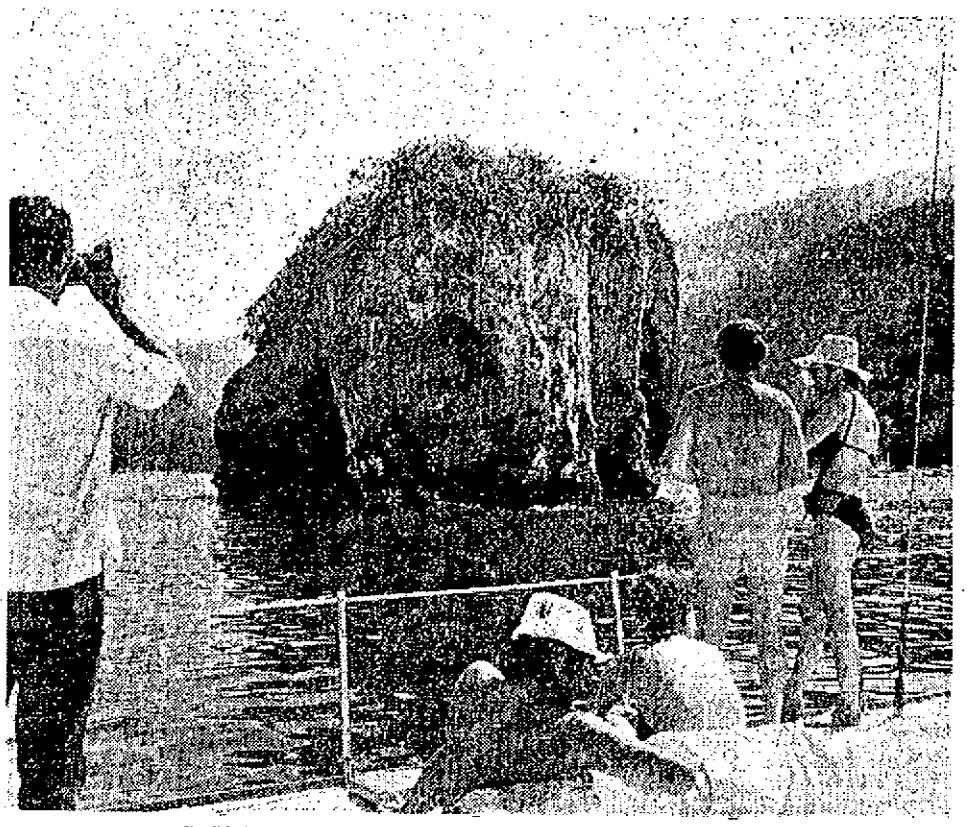

GETTING BACK to the boat was no problem even for those who couldn't swim. The non-swimmers were put onto inflated air mattresses and floated back to the boat.

It was lunchtime. The buffet lunch consisted of fried chicken, cheeses, hard rolls, watermelon, papaya, bananas and cold beer. We ate and drank in the shade of a light canvas tarp rigged by the crew which extended from gunwale-to-gunwale of the boat's 28-foot-wide cockpit area.

Our trip to our own secluded cove near Mismoloya (where Richard Burton and Ava Gardner starred in the movie "Night of the Iguana") about 15 miles south of Puerto Vallarta was on the second day of a four-day trip arranged by Aeromexico, the national airline of Mexico.

The airline has flights leaving Los Angeles Monday, Wednesday and Friday for the 3½ hour flight which includes a brief stopover at Tijuana's new modern airport. Round trip fare is $196 plus a $3 departure fee. The planes are a stretched version of the Long Beach-built McDonnell-Douglas 115-passenger DC-9's. Catering to passenger's needs, and comfort is a team of friendly, bilingual, pretty dark-eyed hostesses.

We spent three nights in the newly-opened (two days before) modern, nine-story, 234-room Holiday Inn located between the downtown section and the new steamer dock north of the city. The nights at the inn seemed short. That's because much of the late evening hours were spent in the hotel's huge meandering pool, so large there is an island complete with palm trees in the center of the fresh water pool.

CRUISE PARTY VISITS MEXICO'S MINI-GIBRALTAR

NEAR THE SHALLOW end where the water is thigh-high deep, bathers can wade up to a cocktail bar and sitting on stools in the water may order such exotic drinks as a Coco-Loco served in a freshly-opened coconut. Money is not needed at the bar. Guests sign their tabs according to their room number.

Room rates at the Holiday Inn vary from $28 for a single to $32 for a double occupancy modern air-conditioned room.

At this time of the year in Puerto Vallarta the rainy season is over. The weather is warm. The attire is informal. There is no need for sport jackets nor evening dresses for the ladies. Only need for taking a jacket or coat is in case the weather is chilly when leaving or arriving at the airport in Los Angeles.

U.S. citizens are required to have a Mexican Tourist Card prior to entering Mexico. These may be obtained from the Mexican Consulate or at the Aeromexico ticket counter before departure. Returning U. S. citizens must have in their possession proof of citizenship, which may be a birth certificate, passport or voter registration receipt.

Finding adventure in Philippines

Many of us in middle age have grown into ruts — lifestyle ruts, place ruts, people ruts. We tell ourselves that we are terrified of primitive environments, or that we can't stand Latin countries when actually, we have never even experienced the thing we can't stand.

Then we complain that life is passing us by; that one day isn't any different from the next.

choral pepper

What we need, when we feel like that, is an adventure in our lives. We need to experience something that we've never known before.

On a Philippines Airlines flight recently, I sat from Chicago who planned to stop over in Manila for a few days where her son would meet her to escort her on to Japan.

We both stayed at the Hilton. On the following beside an attractive widow morning while I was arranging a tour to run the Pagsanjan Rapids, we met in the lobby. She was distraught because her son's arrival was delayed and she was hesitant about wandering around Manila alone.

On impulse, I invited her to join me. Two other people had signed up for the Pagsanjan trip and our limousine would carry one more.

"I'VE ALWAYS hated camping or anything like that," she speculated. However, in lieu of an alternative, she bought a swim suit at a nearby shop and joined us.

To reach the cataracts, we motored through the flat lands of Laguna Province where turbanned Moslem farmers guided water buffalo over long miles of rice paddies. In country villages, sarong-clad women spread golden grain to dry on mats along the road while their naked kids waved to us from open doorways of thatched-roofed, stilted huts. It presented a heady scene for a lady who had never traveled beyond the Middle West.

Gradually the highway began to ascend into coconut and sugar plantations, and then suddenly we no longer could see the hazy rice paddies below. We had arrived in a dense, dark jungle that covered the rim of the canyon from which Pagsanjan River thundered down some 300 feet into a lagoon we later would reach by water.

We had arranged to launch our expedition from the Pagsanjan Rapids Hotel on the river. Awaiting us when we arrived were four crude wooden barcas — long, scooped-out logs — with a pair of sinuous brown oarsmen assigned to each one.

Cartegena boasts rich heritage

travel

PALM trees are reminders of Cartagena's tropical location. This Colombian port city is becoming cruise ship stopover on South American coast.

Cartagena, Colombia

Coming down from Bogota's 8,700 feet to Cartagena on the emerald coast is something like stepping into a steam room. This is a tropical port whose cannon fired on the sails of Sir Henry Morgan and Admiral Vernon.

It took 200 years of slave labor to build the massive forts. The picture postcards you buy in the old walled city mention "El Pirate Draque."

Slaves left their blood lines here. Two of every three people on the narrow streets have skin from milk chocolate to black coffee.

The walled city is pierced by a Moorish gate. Sidewalks are one person wide.

(When I first came here — 20 years ago — they told me it was law that ordinary folk step into the street to clear the sidewalk for approaching Catholic priests and nuns. It may still be. Colombia is the most Spanish country in the Americas.)

CARTAGENA HAS changed, spilling over from the walled city into high rise condominiums. The flashing blue sea is topped by instant diamonds under an Inca gold sun.

The growing cruise ship lines bargain for docking space with coffee freighters. Powder magazines in the old forts are now used for boutiques. And your hotel arranges a "pirate's tour" through the harbor's Boca Grande (big mouth) and the Boca Chica (little mouth).

Condominiums go for $64,000 U.S. Presently there's the old Hotel Caribe on the beach. The new high rise Hotel Velas gets most of the tourists. Hilton, the Hyatts and Holiday Inns are looking into Cartagena.

City has the best seafood I've found in the Caribbean. Try Club de Pesca in an old fort. La Fragata in an old colonial home in the walled city.

In Cartagena, galleons loaded gold and emeralds for the convoys to Spain. Such rich plunder drew rugged types from all the New World.

When Sir Henry Morgan attacked the town, a hundred nuns at the Augustine monastery jumped over the cliff. Sir Henry had found a sure fire way to make war: When he attacked Portobelo, he prodded captive priests and nuns first up the scaling ladders.

England was grateful to him and he died Lieutenant Governor of Jamaica, a bottle of Jamaica rum in his fist.

CALIFORNIA IS being flooded with an offer few people can afford to refuse. For an incredibly low price you go to Las Vegas where you get: $340 worth of gambling chips; $60 in nickels; two nights in a hotel and $71.25 worth of food; a rented Impala free for one day.

How it works: Your motel-hotel is quite a distance from the glittering Strip. You get your nickels and your chips by cashing coupons at the counter. BUT only every hour. Each hour you can get a paper cupful of $5 in nickels for example. After that you wait for the clock to turn over another hour.

The chips can also be played into the house slot machines. Woman told me: "I put $200 at one sitting into those slots and never got ONE hit. Not even a pair of cherries."

You pay your own air fare to Las Vegas. The tour operators work out of Chicago. They're not using a high roller mailing list. Seems to be directed to working women — hence the come on of $60 in nickels. Women are slots players.

White Sands isn't sandy

White Sands, covering 300 square miles in southeastern New Mexico, is one of the strangest deserts in the world, according to Continental Airlines, which serves nearby El Paso, Tex.

The surface is not sand at all, but 95 per cent pure gypsum. Light and shadow play weird roles in the glittering white basin.

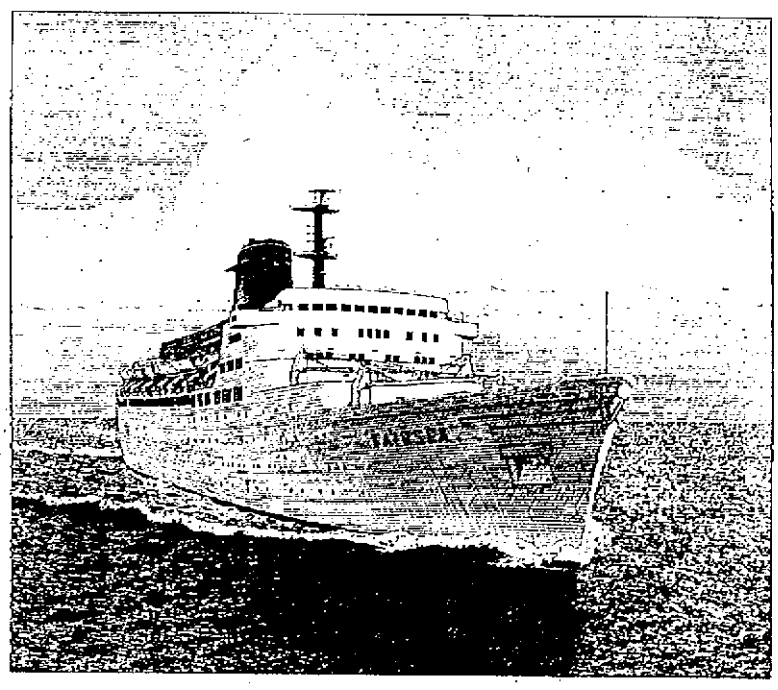

One of the oddest characteristics of White Sands are red lakes which ussually appear in the autumn. Later they turn milky, then clear. Nobody yet has come up with an explanation of this quirk of nature.

Roller-coaster rides over the steep dunes in sand buggies are operated by the National Park Service.

SITMAR GIVES YOU THE MOST FOR YOUR MONEY TO MEXICO.
Sitmar's 10 and 11-day cruises give you the most entertainment, the most time in the best ports, and the largest, most spacious ship sailing the Mexican Riviera.
Sitmar's elegant T.S.S. Fairsea, of Liberian registry, is the largest cruise ship sailing the Mexican Riviera. Twenty-five thousand tons!
That means we can give you more crew to serve you, roomier cabins, more spacious decks, more fun facilities. Like a 330-seat movie theater, five pubs, two lounges, two nightclubs, two dining rooms and much, much more! There's even room for three swimming pools, one especially for children.
The entertainment is the finest on any cruise. There are even three cruises devoted to the Big Band sound of the '40s.
SITMAR 10 AND 11-DAY CRUISES. MORE CRUISE FOR YOUR MONEY.
Compare our 10 and 11-day cruise fares with any other. You'll find they're the biggest cruise bargains going. Another advantage of 10 and 11-day cruises – they're long enough to visit the best ports on the Mexican Riviera, short enough to fit within a two-week vacation and still give you a few extra days to get back to reality after all that unbelievable Sitmar luxury.
SITMAR. THE MOST WANTED PORTS, MOST TIME ASHORE.
And 10 and 11-day cruises allow you more time ashore to explore Mexico's most exotic and exciting ports. On the 10-day you visit Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan and cruise Cabo San Lucas Bay. On the 11-day you visit delightfully old-world Manzanillo, too!
SITMAR. MORE ATTENTIVE SERVICE, MORE LAVISH CUISINE.
Sitmar's 500-man Italian crew is famous for its enthusiastic, attentive, European-style service. And our continental cuisine. Lavish! Extravagant! Incomparable! Our 54 chefs are European-born, European-trained, European-proud.

MORE TRAVEL AGENTS RATE SITMAR NO. 1.
But don't choose a cruise from an ad. See your professional travel agent, who knows which cruise line offers the best value. But don't be surprised if she recommends Sitmar. Recent independent surveys show that more travel agents rate Sitmar a better value than any other cruise line. They rate us best in:
• cuisine • public rooms
• service • entertainment
• luxury • on-board activities
• spaciousness • ports of call
And experienced cruise passengers know it. That's why travel agents say Sitmar is the most frequently asked-for cruise line on the West Coast.
Ask your travel agent to tell you about a Sitmar 10 or 11-day Mexican Riviera cruise. Sitmar. More cruise, more memories for your money!

CHEF OF THE WEEK

He's in tune with chicken

His disposition, his talents, and his knowledge blend in the personality of today's chef of the week, Elwin "Bud" Ekstrand, manager of the Lakewood Branch, Bank of America. Few people know his real first name. Everyone calls him "Bud"!

To explain our opening remarks, we quote a friend who knows him well. "One thing that I think makes Bud so popular is his easygoing, small town friendship attitude, which is contagious, really. This has carried over into the bank where all the employes seem to have copied his attitude. He joins an organization only if he can help the group. I do not believe I have ever heard Bud speak ill of anyone, and have never heard him utter a profanity."

In addition to his banking knowledge, which is why the Bank of America management brought him

mildred flanary

from the Midwest to California in 1941, Ekstrand's talents include both sports and music.

Born on a farm in Burt County, Neb., (in the northeast corner of the state — closest town is Oakland), Ekstrand has five sisters. He attended rural school until the eighth grade, then enrolled at Oakland High School. He lettered in both basketball and football, played trumpet in the school band, the city band, and was a member of a small local dance band.

As a versatile tenor he did vocals, too, and sang as a fourth member with a sister trio group on a local radio station. He planned at one time to pursue the musical field. In fact, he even went so far as to go to a Yankton, S.D., radio station to audition for the Lawrence Welk Orchestra.

Ekstrand's next stop was the School of Commerce in Lincoln where he became the Number One fan of the University of Nebraska football team, the Cornhuskers.

FOLLOWING GRADUATION, Ekstrand decided to make banking his vocation and music his avocation, so he joined a small Midwest family bank. The Bank of America management was in search of a new manager for its branch in Whittier, Calif. The searchers were so impressed by Ekstrand's accomplishments that they brought him West. He has been with them for 34 years, and has been manager of the Lakewood Branch since 1969.

He and his wife, Phyliss, whom he met at a moonlight dance, have been married 38 years. They recently attended the 40th anniversary of their high school graduating class. They have two married daughters, Lynda and Cyndy. There also are two grandsons, Raoul, 11, and Robb, 8.

ELWIN "BUD" EKSTRAND

He is a member of the Christian Business Men Committee, an international organization, and is a former vice president of the Lakewood Pan American Festival Committee. Ekstrand also served as president of the Greater Lakewood Chamber of Commerce, and still serves on the board. A member of the Lakewood Rotary Club, and the Lakewood Center Merchants Association, he's also very active on the Lakewood YMCA board.

Ekstrand is a collector of antiques and is a rock hound. As for sports, he has his eyes glued to the television, an ear plug transmitting the radio game, and a sports magazine in his hands to complete the sports news.

Phyliss says, "Yes, he can cook, but only in an emergency." We guarantee this Chicken Casserole will be mighty good anytime — not just in an emergency.

CHICKEN RICE CASSEROLE

1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can cream of celery soup
1 soup can of milk
1 cup uncooked rice
4 chicken breasts
Salt
Pepper
1 package dried onion soup mix

Mix mushroom and celery soups, milk and rice. Place in greased casserole.

Season chicken to taste with salt and pepper. Place chicken on top of rice mix. Sprinkle with onion soup mix. Cover tightly with aluminum foil, or tight-fitting lid. Bake at 325 degrees for 2 hours. Serves 4.

DEAR ABBY

A not so happy trio

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him "Bud") and I have been married for three years and were thinking about starting a family until this came up. (I'm 26 and Bud is 28).

Five months ago, my sister, who just got divorced, moved in with us until she could get

abigail van buren

herself together. She's 29 and the "beauty" of the family, but she's always after somebody's man.

Bud never paid her any attention in front of me, so I wasn't worried. Then this terrible thing happened. Sis called me at work and told me Bud tried to rape her! I was so stunned I nearly fainted.

I got home as soon as possible, and all Bud could say was, "I thought that's what she wanted the way she always paraded around in a see-through nightgown." Sis said she didn't even own one, but I knew she was lying because I'd seen it when I did the laundry.

Sis said that was the second time he tried it, but she didn't tell me because she didn't want to make trouble.

Abby, explain the difference between "rape" and "molest." Sis told the family it was "rape," but Bud didn't tear her clothes off or even touch her. All he did was proposition her. Also, wasn't it partly her fault for enticing him? I still love my husband, but I don't trust him.

Whose fault was all this? Shouldn't my sis move? Answer Soon. — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: There was no rape involved. Apparently, your sister tantalized your husband and he propositioned her, and that's all there was to it. Yes, your sis should move. Buy her a flannel nightgown as a farewell present and get yourself a see-through nightie.

DEAR ABBY: We have been married for 38 years. My husband has been reading very dirty pocketbooks and magazines that dirty men he works with give him. He's been reading them for many years.

I have always claimed that this excessive arousal would make him impotent. He never believed me.

Now at age 60, he no longer gets aroused from these dirty pictures — or even from me! He has gone completely impotent.

Please tell me, Abby, can a man become impotent from looking at too many dirty pictures over the years?

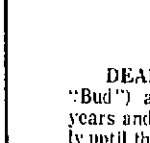

If he can, please write a whole column on it so men won't be so dumb. — CHICAGO TRIB. READER

DEAR READER: It won't require a whole column to advise you that a man cannot become impotent from looking at too many "dirty" pictures. He may become bored with them, but impotent — no way!

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: Thinking about Thanksgiving? If you are planning a holiday dinner, why not make it a true time of giving thanks and share it with someone who might otherwise be forgotten?

Is there an elderly person down the block who lives alone? Why not call the nursing home nearest you and ask them to select a resident who would enjoy Thanksgiving with a family. Then provide transportation.

I promise you, your own Thanksgiving will be enriched. And think of the joy you will be giving a lonely, elderly person!

Q. Is it a fact that a general named Alexander Haig was once acting President of these United States? If so, what sort of President was he?—L. T., Carbondale, Ill.

A. In the final year of the Nixon Presidency, 1973-74, Gen. Alexander Haig, Nixon's chief of staff, pretty much ran the office. As Henry Kissinger revealed, Nixon "barely governed" during that period. Nixon was so unnerved by the Watergate scandal that he found it difficult to function completely on any project except the containment of Watergate. He became distraught, indecisive, neurotic, anxious, worried and, finally, in a desperate effort to save himself, dishonest and deceitful. Haig thereupon administered the Presidency. Haig was an excellent administrator but he was shortsighted, gullible, and in the judgment of many, more obsessively loyal to Nixon than to the country. Haig's role, for example, in executing Nixon's firing of Archibald Cox as Watergate prosecutor in October, 1973, was an example of a political general in action at his very worst. History's assessment of Alexander Haig as Nixon's chief of staff will be tinged with doubt.

Q. In your opinion which Republican U.S. Senator and which Democratic U.S. Senator have the best minds?—Nancy Dunne, El Paso, Tex.

A. Sen. Charles Mathias Jr. (R., Md.) and Sen. Philip Hart (D., Mich.) have first-rate minds.

PETER WOLF AND FAYE DUNAWAY

Q. Is the Faye Dunaway-Peter Wolf marriage finished?—Henrietta Weinberg, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Not at this point. Faye recently gave her husband a $25,000 Maserati, also had New York clothes designer Dimitri style a $750 black Cabretta car coat and matching black leather beret to coordinate with his black goatee and black shades.

MR. AND MRS. BOB HOPE

Q. Bob Hope recently said that he was politically nonpartisan, that he got along well with all U.S. Presidents. My understanding is that Bob Hope is a rock-ribbed Republican who contributed large sums of money to the Nixon, Agnew, and Ronald Reagan campaigns. Am I right?—Sam Handler, Los Angeles.

A. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hope contributed $16,000 to the Nixon-Agnew campaign in 1968. The Hopes contributed $25,000 to Ronald Reagan's 1970 California gubernatorial program. The Hopes contributed $60,000 to Nixon-Agnew in 1972. Although he is an activist Republican, comedian Hope gets on well with politicians of both parties; no entertainer has contributed more time to various charities and benefits than Bob.

Q. What is the origin of the feud between writer Gore Vidal and Jackie Kennedy Onassis, whose mothers in turn married stockbroker Hugh Auchincloss? I understand they have not seen or talked to each other for 12 years.—Mrs. Robert K., Farmingdale, N.Y.

A. Jackie Onassis and Gore Vidal some weeks ago occupied the same elevator in the Ritz Hotel in London. They smiled politely at each other, said nothing. Their feud started in 1963 when Vidal, a fast man with a quip, described the Kennedys as "The Holy Family," predicted that Bobby Kennedy was being groomed for the Presidency, and later said of Teddy Kennedy: "Nature designed Edward Kennedy for a humbler job—he would have made a good bartender." The Kennedys apparently regarded that as the last straw, decided to drum Vidal out of the family corps.

Q. The late Maurice Chevalier—was he really the tightest man in the history of show business?—Danielle Lapin, New York City.

A. Chevalier was one of the tightest. In "Musical Stages, an Autobiography," composer Richard Rodgers writes of Chevalier: "In fact, he was the only man I've ever met who would accept a cigarette and put it in his pocket."

Q. I would appreciate some word on the health of that great actor, Laurence Olivier. Is he dying of cancer?—B. F. D., Cambridge, Mass.

A. Lord Olivier, 68, has recovered from a bout with cancer, has been passed by insurance companies to star in The Marathon Man with Dustin Hoffman. In the film Olivier plays an assassin.

Q. Alexander Andreadis who married Christina Onassis—hasn't he quietly bought his way out of the Greek army?—Ken Andropoulis, Bridgeport, Conn.

A. Some weeks ago the Greek government passed a law permitting draftees to buy their way out of military service. Alexander Andreadis, 30, heir to the Greek banking and shipping family, promptly bought his way out for 7000 drachmas, about $205. He had served for more than six months on the Greek-Turkish border. Four months ago Andreadis married Christina Onassis and now would like to do a little dallying with her.

GLEN CAMPBELL AND WIFE BILLIE JEAN

Q. Singer Glen Campbell and his wife, Billie Jean—have they split?—M. Meany, Little Rock, Ark.

A. Campbell, 38, after 16 years of marriage and three children, has been sued for divorce by wife Billie Jean.

Pick your favorite lemon idea.

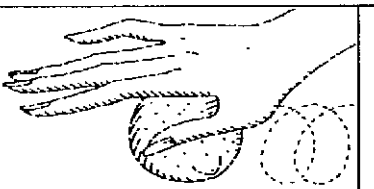

There are lots of wonderful things you can do with a Sunkist Yellow Sweepstakes. Just choose the one you'd like best. And

1. If you want to juice half a lemon, stick a fork in it and twist. It bursts the juice sacs and helps the juice to flow.

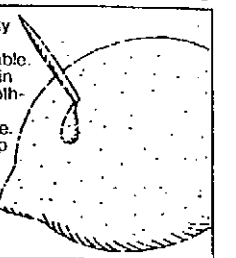

2. Whole lemons have a fantastic scent and look beautiful. Put bowls of them in the kitchen, dining area—even the bathroom.

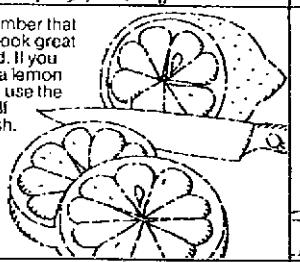

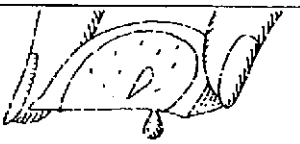

3. You'll get more juice out of a lemon if it's at room temperature. And if you roll it on the counter top before cutting.

4. And here's a nifty lemon trick. Roll a lemon until it's pliable. Then poke a hole in one end with a toothpick. Squeeze and out comes the juice. Replace pick. Keep in fridge.

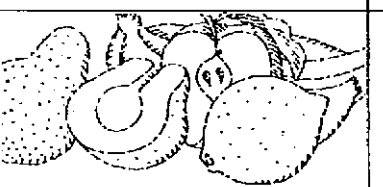

5. Remember that lemons look great with food. If you use half a lemon for juice, use the other half to garnish.

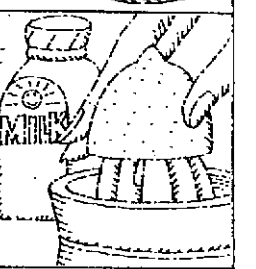

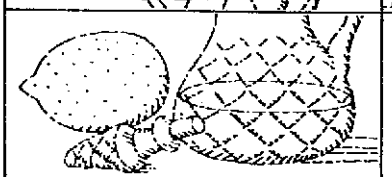

6. Lemon juice is so fresh that a squeeze or two into canned, packaged or frozen foods can make them taste fresh again.

7. Lemon juice keeps fresh fruits like bananas, apples, avocados, etc. from turning dark. Just dip them in. They'll stay pretty for hours.

8. Got a recipe calling for buttermilk? Make your own. Combine 1 tbs. lemon juice with enough milk to make one cup. Let stand for 5 minutes.

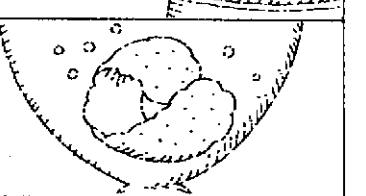

9. Substitute lemon juice for vinegar in many recipes. It's fresher, more flavorful.

10. Lemon peel sprinkled over cakes, puddings, sauces, not only perks up the taste, but improves the looks.

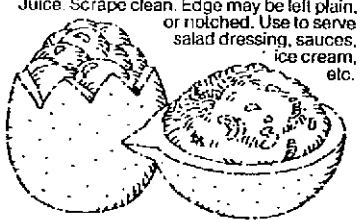

11. A squeeze of lemon into a glass of water makes it more refreshing and is a quick pick-me-up.

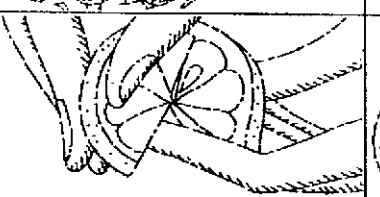

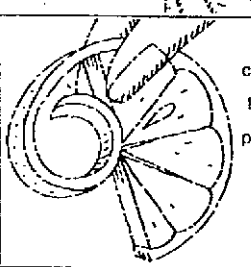

12. When you drop a lemon peel into a drink, be sure to twist the peel. A bit of lemon oil gets into your drink and adds to the flavor.

13. To make lemon shells, cut lemon in half. Juice. Scrape clean. Edge may be left plain, or notched. Use to serve salad dressing, sauces, ice cream, etc.

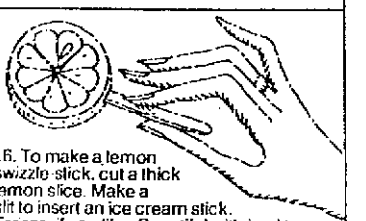

14. To make cartwheel twists, cut lemon slice just to center, and twist.

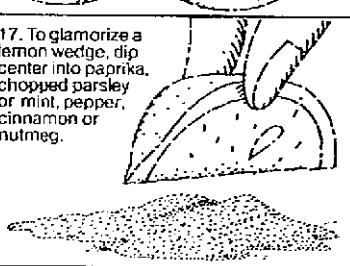

15. To make lemon curls, cut half of fruit from slice leaving entire peel. Curl peel to center.

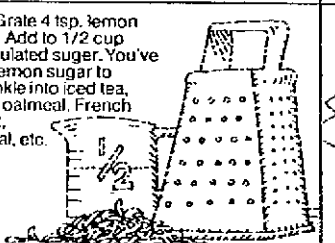

16. To make a lemon swizzle stick, cut a thick lemon slice. Make a slit to insert an ice cream stick. Freeze, if you like. Beautiful with iced tea, lemonade, etc.

17. To glamorize a lemon wedge, dip center into paprika, chopped parsley or mint, pepper, cinnamon or nutmeg.

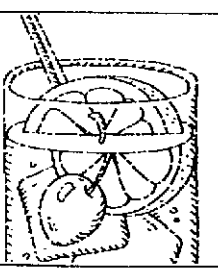

18. Grate 4 tsp. lemon peel. Add to 1/2 cup granulated suger. You've got lemon sugar to sprinkle into iced tea, over oatmeal, French toast, cereal, etc.

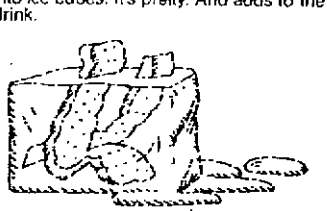

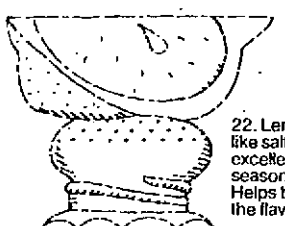

19. Grated lemon peel sprinkled over a salad perks up the flavor, makes it taste even fresher.

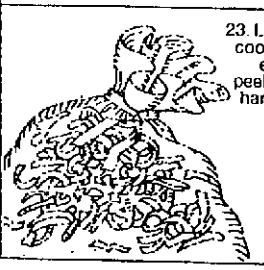

20. And don't forget how lemon improves the taste and looks of most any alcoholic beverage.

21. Try freezing little strips of lemon peel into ice cubes. It's pretty. And adds to the drink.

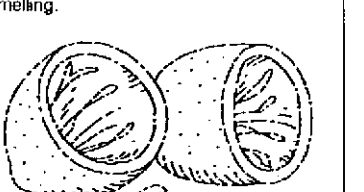

22. Lemon juice, like salt, is an excellent seasoning. Helps bring out the flavor, too.

23. Lots of good cooks grate up extra lemon peel to keep on hand in plastic bags in the freezer.

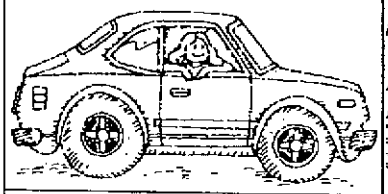

24. Toss used lemons into your garbage disposal to help keep it clean and fresh-smelling.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

INDIRA GANDHI WITH SON SANJAY

INDIA'S NEXT LEADER?

One of the most controversial figures in contemporary India is Sanjay Gandhi, 29-year-old son of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

It is said in many quarters that Sanjay dominates his mother with an iron hand, that he is waiting in the wings to take over as the third Nehru generation of power in India.

Sanjay is indisputably his mother's most important adviser. It was he who prevented her from resigning this past summer when the Supreme Court of India was ruling on Indira Gandhi's conviction for illegal campaign practices. It was he who rallied public support for his mother. It is he who insists that his mother stonewall all charges and steamroll all opposition.

Even before Indira Gandhi proclaimed a state of emergency, son Sanjay was involved in a plethora of scandals related to corruption, blackmail and sex. Yet his official record reveals only minor charges of disorderly conduct and financial finagling.

Sanjay who was educated in India and England was sent to the Rolls-Royce factory in Derby, England, where he took a 15-month course in mechanics, a course which allows him to call himself an engineer. His mother placed him in charge of producing the Maruti, the so-called people's car, and he badly bungled the entire project.

He lives with his mother in New Delhi and according to those Indian journalists who are not afraid to talk, it is he who rules the roost.

DRUG LEADERS

Worldwide pharmaceutical sales will reach $40 billion this year, of which 16% will have been spent in the U.S.

Japan has the second-largest pharmaceutical market, followed by West Germany, France, Italy, Spain, England, Brazil, Mexico, Argentina, Canada, and India.

Only recently has South America emerged as an increasingly important drug market.

PAPER CONTRACEPTIVE

Paper contraceptive pills were first developed in the Peoples Republic of China. Now British scientists are beginning to produce them for their own people and for export to underdeveloped countries. The contraceptive is made of edible paper which has been saturated with the extract contained in the normal pill. Advantages of the paper pill are that it is cheaper to produce, pack, ship, store, and carry.

RAW FISH DANGERS

Raw fish delicacies such as sashimi, herring, ceviche and gravlax have become increasingly popular with Americans. Such popularity could produce a health problem, according to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Many raw fish caught off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts contain anisakian larvae. The parasite, says the weekly "Morbidity and Mortality Report" of the Center for Disease and Control, can survive brief periods of refrigeration and smoking at low temperatures. Only by cooking at normal temperatures is the parasite quickly killed.

The center warns Americans that "eating fresh raw marine fish should be recognized as a potential health hazard."

BLACK TV

The first black-owned television station in the United States began operating last month. Channel 62 in Detroit is owned by the International Free and Accepted Modern Masons, a black fraternal organization. The station is currently operating on a 7 a.m. to 1 a.m. schedule. WGPR-TV expects to expand to a 24-hour schedule within a year.

FOR THE RICH REDS

"Deluxe service" is a concept which has been essentially ignored in the Soviet Union until recently. But now, if you can afford it, you can purchase it from a firm called "Red Morning Light." Originally started in Kiev, it now has 1400 academicians, workers, psychologists, housewives and students in its employ. These people provide every imaginable kind of service from grocery shopping to marriage counseling. They will organize a wedding--provide the wedding gown, flowers, orchestra, getaway car and plan the post-ceremony party. To prevent it from degenerating into a drinking orgy, they will even order the exact amount of alcohol based on age and constitution of all the guests.

This state service agency controls its own finances and even advertises in newspapers and on television and radio. The demands for its services are so great that it now employs retired persons for some of its jobs. According to Soviet law, any pensioner who works in a menial job can get his full pension in addition to his wages.

FAME DRAIN

Over the years Great Britain has produced countless men of fame -- scientists, artists, entertainers of every stripe.

Now it is in danger of losing its current crop of star achievers.

The income tax rates are largely to blame. They range up to 83 per cent on earned income and up to 98 per cent on investment income. After a certain point such rates become confiscatory.

As a result the Bay City Rollers, the No. 1 pop group, will probably leave Britain and join the growing number of tax exiles seeking refuge in the United States, France, Switzerland, and other countries.

Mick Jagger and the Rolling Stones left England in 1971. "If the maximum tax was reduced to 50 per cent," says Jagger, "which is what it is in America, it's more than likely that the Rolling Stones would return to England."

Former Beatle Ringo Starr, living in California, says, "I'd love to live in Britain again. But it seems terribly unfair that so much of what we earn should be taken away from us in taxes."

Another recent tax exile, singer Rod Stewart, also living in California, joins in with, "Let the government reduce that awful tax rate, and I'll be back in London in the morning."

Richard Burton, David Niven, Rex Harrison, Elizabeth Taylor, Charlotte Rampling -- the cream of the British entertainment world -- have all escaped from the oppression of British taxes by living abroad. Nor are tax exiles limited to entertainers. The loss of eminent scientists and highly qualified doctors is now arousing governmental concern. An estimated 1500 physicians are reportedly leaving Great Britain each year, largely because no senior doctor or surgeon on the National Health Service earning $20,000 or more a year is allowed an increase in salary.

DYSENTERY CURE

Dysentery is a common problem among people who like to visit far-off lands and eat the native food. The thought of suffering from a fever, headache, abdominal pain, diarrhea and vomiting keeps many would-be travelers closer to home. But now a chemist with the Sandoz Pharmaceuticals house in Switzerland has isolated entertoxin, the problematical toxin.

Dr. Friedrick Dorner says a substance can be made from it which stimulates the body to produce the necessary antibodies. It is expected that within two years there will be a vaccine to guard against dysentery.

ABIGAIL AND JOHN

Historians of the feminist movement in this country usually start their accounts with mid-19th-century figures like Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony. However, a far-earlier spokesperson for women's rights is now beginning to get her due. She's Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, one of the Founding Fathers and the second President of the United States. Thanks to a WNET public television series, "The Adams Chronicles," which starts next January, and to "The Book of Abigail and John," a selection of family letters just published by Harvard University Press, Abigail is taking her place as a spunky, outspoken feminist far ahead of her times.

Although her husband left her at home with the children in Braintree, Mass., while he was in Philadelphia from 1774 to 1778 with the Continental Congress, Abigail kept reminding him to "Remember the Ladies" as she pressed her demands for laws to protect and educate women.

"Remember all Men would be tyrants if they could," she wrote him, then added half-seriously: "If particular care and attention is not paid to the Ladies we are determined to foment a Rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, or Representation." In another letter she complained: "I can not say I think you very generous to the Ladies, for whilst you are proclaiming peace and good will to Men, Emancipating all Nations, you insist upon retaining an absolute power over Wives."

John Adams replied to his wife in a bantering tone: "As to your extraordinary Code of Laws, I cannot but laugh...Depend on it, we know better than to repeal our Masculine systems." Despite Abigail, the Continental Congress didn't do much to affirm the right of women. But presumably Mrs. Adams would be very pleased at what her descendants are accomplishing nowadays.

QUITTING ISRAEL

Three years ago more than 50,000 immigrants settled in Israel. Last year only 22,000 settled there. This year the estimate is only 15,000.

Worse yet, of the thousands of Jews who were permitted to leave the Soviet Union for Israel last year more than 35% decided when they reached Vienna not to go to Israel.

Not only is the inflow to Israel drying up but the outflow is increasing. Last year 21,000 Israelis left their country. This year a similar number will depart.

The reasons: rising prices, constant devaluation of the currency, heavy taxation, the omnipresent fear of war, long tours of compulsory military duty, and a highly doubtful national future.

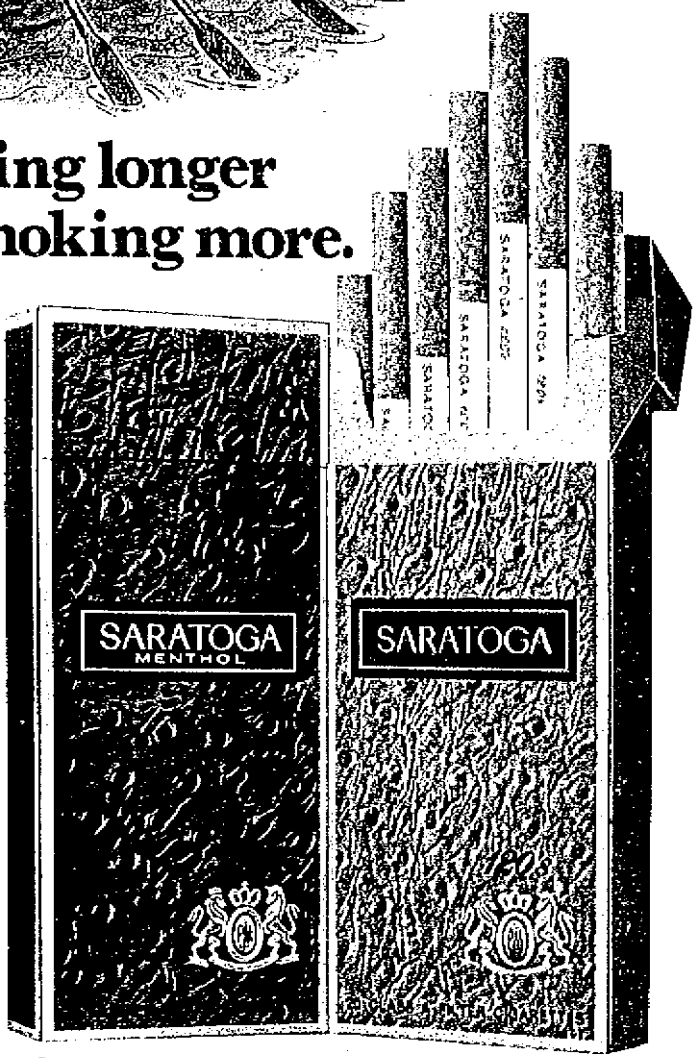

ADULT LEARNERS

Education should not stop after high school or college. Data released recently from federal records show that one in eight adults is currently involved in some adult education program. In 1957, only one in 13 eligible adults were participating in adult education.

AFTER THE FEAST

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

This is the week of the great American feast, and the center of attraction is the plump, glossy golden-brown turkey. And after the feast there is usually some turkey left over.

First remove any stuffing and store it covered in the refrigerator. Leftover meat can be sliced for sandwiches, but be sure to save enough to make this beautiful, colorful molded salad—too delicious to be considered a mere "leftover."

Begin the meal with cream of mushroom soup. Follow with the salad and little hot rolls. Wind up with a luscious layer cake, made quickly with a mix and ready-to-use frosting in your favorite flavor.

TURKEY SALAD IN A MOLD

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup cold water
- 1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed chicken broth
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 2½ cups diced cooked turkey
- ½ cup thinly sliced celery
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup chopped pitted ripe olives
- ¼ cup finely diced pimiento

Former Democratic national chairman James A. Farley stands in his New York City office amid the mementos of a political career starting as town clerk in 1911, reaching its peak in the alliance with President Roosevelt in the 1930's.

Thirty-nine years after his defeat by Roosevelt, Alfred M. Landon can sit on veranda at Topeka and reflect, ride his horse and speak out bluntly; he urged détente in 1955 with China and Russia if "we're not foolish about it."

Two Elder Statesmen With Young Ideas

by L. H. Whittemore

TOPEKA, KAN. & NEW YORK CITY

In the American history books, Alf M. Landon and James A. Farley are already indelible fixtures as characters in the political drama of this century. But Alf Landon and Jim Farley, 88 and 87, are also involved in today's world. They are as active, keen and cheerful as ever.

Both men will regard next summer's national conventions as occasions for nostalgia. The upcoming Presidential campaigns will mark the 40th anniversary of the race between Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, the Republican, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, running for his second term in the White House. Managing FDR's strategy that year, 1936, was Postmaster General Jim Farley.

Landon and his wife still live in Topeka, Kan., the state capital. Their home is a stately white mansion with eight massive columns in front, set back from a country road. Most every morning, he is out early in a turtleneck shirt, riding pants and black knee-high boots. A short, slight figure of a man, he covers several miles on horseback. He rides past cornfields and alongside a river, stopping to chat with farmers along the way.

To them he is a familiar figure, smiling from behind black-rimmed spectacles and puffing on his ever-present pipe. In style and outlook, Alf Landon is "just folks" the way he always was, preferring to dress casually and eat lunch at a place called Tommy's, where both the food and the people are down-to-earth like himself.

Keeping at it

At home and at a small office in downtown Topeka, Landon plunges into a day filled with telephoning, answering mail and studying. He talks with workingmen, scholars and public figures, gaining their views on current problems. And he's always working on some new speech that might take up pressing issues of our age.

If Alf Landon is the country squire, then Jim Farley is the urban gentleman, living in the heart of Manhattan in New York City. In his 12th-floor suite at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, he wakes religiously at 6 a.m. to catch the latest radio news. By 7 he is showering and then watching TV while he dresses in his business suit.

At 8 a.m. the tall, affable Irishman is downstairs in the hotel for breakfast, at his usual table. And after a quick shave in the barbershop, he is off on his walk to a nearby building on Madison Avenue. Up on the 18th floor, he puts in a full day behind his desk at the Coca-Cola Export Corp., where he is honorary chairman of the board.

Farley's office, like Landon's, is filled with photographs of Presidents and other public leaders whom he has known intimately through the years. The former Democratic national chairman is still in frequent contact with a dazzling array of prominent friends who seek his opinions and predictions. At the moment, too, he is completing a book of recollections.

"It will cover all my political activities," he says, "from the beginning in Stony Point, N.Y., when I was elected town clerk in 1911." By any standard, it was an incredible journey through the labyrinth of American politics.

But the high point was probably that 1936 election. The Republicans that year had great hopes for Alf Landon. As leader of the liberal GOP faction in Kansas, he had won election twice as Governor despite national Democratic sweeps. At the convention, delegates answered Roosevelt's "New Deal" with a "sound, sensible, friendly" candidate, a "Kansas Coolidge" who was both thrifty and progressive in outlook.

"Frugal Alf" toured the country from the back of a campaign train. The papers played up his Methodist background, his Midwest twang, his love for home, family and squash pie. They printed stories about his folksy ways, such as betting nickels on baseball games and wearing his clothes until they wore out.

Balanced budgets

A tireless and active speaker, Landon explained how he'd balanced his state budgets by declaring, "Don't spend what you haven't got!" An influential poll even had him winning.

Meanwhile, Jim Farley was managing President Roosevelt's reelection campaign with typical optimism and flair. When the poll showed Landon ahead, Farley pointed solemnly to the fact that it had been taken by telephone. "So it has to be wrong," he said with a grin, "because the Democrats who are going to vote for Roosevelt by the millions don't even have any phones."

Then, five days before the election, Farley outdid his own reputation as a prophet. He forecast not just a Democratic landslide, but that Landon would carry only two states, Maine and Vermont. When the votes were counted, the prediction proved right. "As Maine goes," the old saying went, "so goes the nation." With impish glee, Farley turned the phrase around and quipped "As Maine goes, so goes Vermont."

Landon and Farley provide a study in similarities and contrasts. Both had the "feel" for politics, a common touch, enabling them to get along with people in all walks of life. At the same time, Farley was the practical politician, the eternal Democrat and loyal party man, while Landon was uncomfortable with any restrictions on his independence.

"I always loved politics," Landon says, "but I never liked being tied down to party positions that I didn't agree with. The words 'liberal' and 'conservative' don't mean much to me. I take different stands on different issues."

When he left the Governor's office shortly after his Presidential campaign, Landon remained in Topeka but retired to private life, attending to his business as an independent oil producer. But since then he has continued to speak out, especially on foreign policy, and over the years his views have been singularly his own.

As early as 1955, Landon urged détente with Russia and China "so long as we're not foolish about it." He has been critical of the United Nations for having been "oversold at the start" and for raising false expectations. In the 1960's, he supported inquiries into the commitments that the United States was making on behalf of Vietnam and the rest of Asia.

Opposed Ike

He has also proved an independent when it comes to supporting Republican candidates. "My record for party regularity hasn't been too good," he observes.

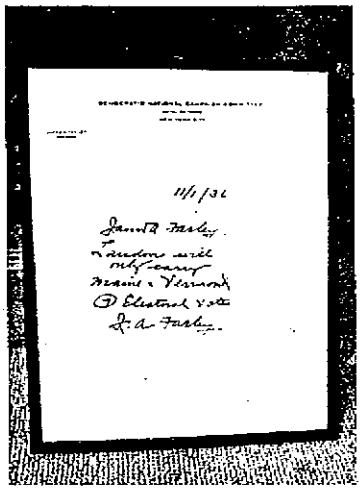

In 1952, for example, he was against Eisenhower's nomination because "I didn't think his military background fitted the demands of a President." A strict moralist, Landon was also wary of Nixon's alleged use of campaign funds for personal expenses. After listening to Nixon's "Checkers" defense speech that year, Landon turned to his wife and said, "Well, it's corny, but maybe he got away with it."

"I wasn't for Nixon in '60 or '68, either," Landon recalls. "I didn't support Goldwater's nomination, for that matter. I felt better about Nixon when he moved toward détente, but then came Watergate. That was a shocking and terrible disaster, not because of Mr. Nixon personally at all, but because we're at such a crucial stage of world affairs in this nuclear age. For the President to resign, it's bound to raise the question of just how stable our government is, from the viewpoint of other nations."

Wary of Nikita

At the moment, Landon's attention is focused on the shaky settlement in the Middle East and our delicate relations with the Soviet Union. Written promises, he says, are not enough.

"When Premier Khrushchev came to the United States," he explains, "I said I was willing to sleep in the same bedroom with him, but not leave my wallet in my pants hanging over the back of a chair."

Farley's note calls the shot in 1936: "As Maine goes, so goes Vermont," he chortled over stunning Landon defeat.

What is needed, Landon says, is a peace agreement based on "good trade relations." "The Soviet Union needs and must have imports of food and grain from us, and we need their influence for stability in the Middle East."

. . . A wheat-for-oil trade with Russia could, Landon believes, not only boost our economy but help in other areas such as limitation of arms. "It could provide a real basis for the strongest kind of agreements," he goes on.

In New York, meanwhile, Jim Farley is certain that what this country needs is a good Democrat in the White House. He considers Lyndon Johnson our last great President, joining the ranks of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Wilson, FDR and Truman.

"A President needs good advisers," he says. "The trouble is that few people like to take an opposite point of view. I remember Cabinet meetings with Roosevelt, where very rarely would members disagree with him. I guess they were afraid of losing his favor. I always spoke up. I wasn't always right, but I'd tell the truth as I saw it."

In 1940, Farley spoke up a bit too loudly. He opposed Roosevelt's running for a third term and, at the Democratic convention that summer, he even permitted his own name to be put up as a Presidential candidate. (His wife Elizabeth, who died in 1955, never forgave FDR for having "misled" her husband into thinking he would not run for another term in the White House.) After Roosevelt's renomination, Farley resigned both as party leader and as Postmaster General, positions he had held concurrently for nearly eight years.

There has never been a national chairman like him, in either party. Farley's influence over patronage was monumental, with literally thousands of government jobs flowing out of his office. "I've always believed in the two-party system," he explains. "And to the victor belongs the spoils. After all, members of a President's own party are inclined to be more loyal and helpful to him." No one, however, accused Jim Farley of possessing anything less than total honesty and integrity.

Find the jobs

Such a reputation has stood him well over the years. He has traveled all over the world, as a kind of American ambassador, and serious Democratic candidates still come to him for advice.

"I tell them we can win on the issue of unemployment," he says. "There are at least eight million out of work, undoubtedly more. It's the paramount problem. We have to get building construction moving again. If that industry is busy, you have the others, too, like carpenters and road builders and electricians and so forth. The automobile business, too, has to improve."

What about the political system itself? Has the state of the art declined? Is government corrupt? Both Farley and Landon look on the bright side.

Farley: "Politics starts down in the election districts, at the grassroots. Even if you take the money out of it, you won't stop people from going to the polls. And the independent vote can always sway elections."

Landon: "There can still be a grassroots movement, and that's the dominant saving grace in America. I always appreciated the men and women who got out and worked in their precincts more than I cared for the fat cats who gave the money."

Few are corrupt

Farley: "Corruption exists as a small percentage. Out of the thousands of men and women I recommended for public office, all politically, none ever betrayed my trust."

Landon: "On the one hand, you have the love of power and control. It's a factor that has to be recognized. But there's also a genuine spirit of public service, a sense of responsibility, at every level. You don't have to be a candidate or hold public office in order to serve. And that spirit is what makes our unique American system work."

Alf Landon says he will not attend the Republican Convention next summer, even though it will be held in nearby Kansas City. "It gets awful hectic," he says, "and I try to take good care of myself." He did, however, send a note to President Ford, saying that in 1977 he would like to celebrate "your first full term in office and my 90th birthday."

Jim Farley does hope to attend the Democratic Convention in New York City as a delegate-at-large. "I've been at every one since 1924 up until the last, in 1972," he says. "The McGovern crowd kept me out and, besides, I had a heart attack that year. I'm glad this one will be here in Manhattan and not Los Angeles, but I would've gone out there anyhow."

A word for 'Scoop'

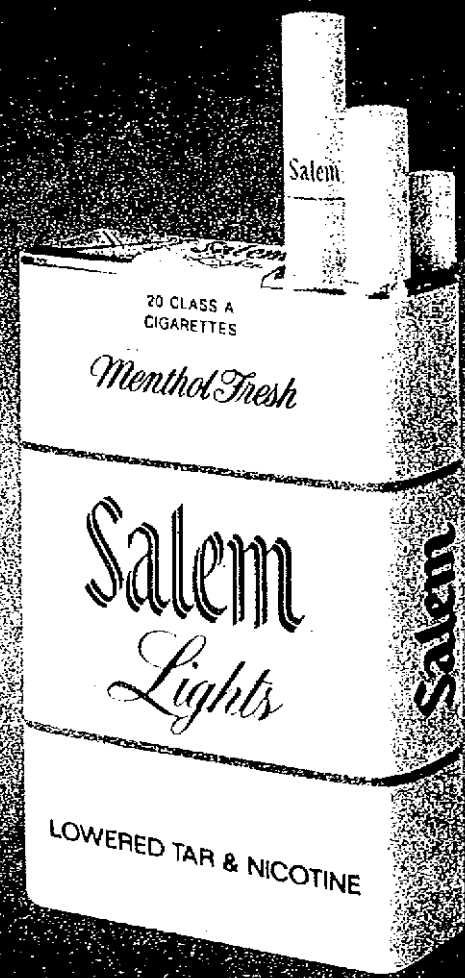

Does Farley know which Democrat will be nominated to run for President? "Certainly not, but I hope it won't be Ted Kennedy. He says he won't run, and he shouldn't. And I've told 'Scoop' Jackson that he just isn't lighting a fire."

In Topeka, Kan., Alf Landon sits down and writes a letter to a friend in the news media, saying that he still believes "that the basic weakness of our foreign policies since our infancy as a republic is trying to reform the world en masse in our own image." In New York City, Jim Farley tells fellow Democrats that they had better avoid the bitterness of recent years and get behind a candidate who can win, "because the Democratic party has always shown the ability to handle the problems of this country well." At 88 and 87, their moments in the limelight have come and gone; but they remain two splendid examples of elder statesmen in our midst.

On his 88th birthday the Governor pays a visit to Topeka's Landon Junior High where students turn out with the Kansas sunflower, his campaign symbol.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

YUL BRYNNER AND YOUTHFUL REPORTERS

The Anchorkids

You've heard of eyewitness news and action news. Now there's "kid news." In an unusual educational project in the San Francisco Bay area, sixth-graders are putting together news broadcasts which are aired weekly over three cable and commercial TV stations: KEMO-TV, General Electric Cablevision and Moraga Cablevision.

Four anchorkids appear on each of the programs, which run from 20 to 30 minutes. Using a format similar to adult news broadcasts, the anchorkids present international, national and state news along with entertainment, sports and school events. Other children appear on the show holding props, such as photos of President Ford or trophies won in athletic meets.

The TV project, known as Newsroom 6, kicked off its season this fall with a celebrity interview with Yul Brynner. Eleven- and 12-year-old reporters fired questions at the actor about his bald head. Brynner, who once sported long brown locks, told the kids he first shaved his head for the leading role in "The King and I" at the suggestion of his costume designer. He revealed that poodle clippers were used to crop his hair.

Newsroom 6 is the brainchild of Elizabeth Frandsen, a former advertising account executive and mother of two boys from Walnut Creek, Cal., who produces the shows for four school districts. Once a week, students go to a cable TV station where in two hours they rehearse and tape the final program. Each sixth-grade class takes a turn preparing a show, and Mrs. Frandsen estimates that by the end of the school year more than 2400 children will have appeared on TV.

Who's footing the bill for Newsroom 6? Mrs. Frandsen drummed up financial support from several local sponsors who are given plugs during commercial breaks. "We want kids to know how TV works," she says.

Shy Men And Dates

Two Indiana University associate psychology professors have found so many undergraduate males intimidated by females that they've offered two free courses to help them: "Getting Along Better With Members of the Opposite Sex," and "Increasing Self-Confidence and Assertion."

Associate professors John Gottman and Robert Levenson have enrolled approximately 75 students in each course.

"It's not a fear of the other person, but a fear of your own inadequacy," explains Gottman to his students, "that contributes to your shyness."

Gottman believes that a male's desire "to score sexual points" on a date harms a relationship with women. "Guys who have problems with women usually have their eyes on the prize."

The communications gap between men and women is stressed heavily in the courses. Gottman points out that at youth parties the music is loud, the lights are dim, drugs are widely used, all of which serve to impede communications between the sexes.

Another Casualty

Add another casualty to the famous father syndrome. Caspar Fleming, 22-year-old son of the late Ian Fleming, creator of James Bond, took his life last month with a massive dose of barbiturates in his mother's flat in London.

Caspar Fleming inherited $800,000 when his father died in 1964. Later he worked as salesman of antiques.

"I think he felt very strongly that he had not got a proper place in life," says Dr. William Knapman, who treated Caspar. "He always had great difficulty sleeping and began taking barbiturates when he was 16. Over the years the dosage increased along with trips to the hospital to cure depression."

Bob Dylan's New Band

Bob Dylan recently completed a new album which won't be released until early next year. His new group features on bass the talented Rob Stoner, who used to accompany Don McLean of "American Pie" fame, Howard Wyeth on drums, and Donna Shea on fiddle.

Some of Dylan's new songs are "Hurricane," an old-style Dylan number that protests the sentencing for murder of boxer Rubin "Hurricane" Carter, and "Oh Sister," which deals with romantic troubles.

The sound of Dylan's new band recalls his "John Wesley Harding" period.

Dylan recently began a 20-city tour of small nightclubs. Like many artists he has an aversion to performing in large indoor halls before large crowds.

Important Help

For the 1975-76 school year it will cost students or their parents an average of $2600 to attend a four-year public college, from $4000 to $6000 to attend a private college.

To help people who are floored by those figures, the Office of Education has developed a program called the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants.

Under that program an eligible student may receive from $200 to $1400 a year to help pay for educational expenses. These include tuition for college, vocational programs, business schools, nursing schools and various other forms of post-high school training.

Eligibility is based on financial need which is determined by a formula reviewed each year by Congress.

The application deadline is March 15, 1976, for the 1975-76 academic year. To learn how to qualify for a grant, students should contact their high school guidance counselors or they should write to Basic Grants, P.O. Box 84, Washington, D.C. 20044.

A gentle revolutionary changing many Americans' views of childbirth, Dr. Frederick Leboyer says he has delivered over 1000 "smiling" babies—including the one pictured here—using the new method outlined in his book "Birth Without Violence."

Born With a Smile Instead of a Slap

The Struggle for Acceptance of a New Birth Technique

by Jonathan Braun

They are known as "Leboyer babies," and perhaps as many as 400 of them have been born in this country in the past six months—400 children who have spent their first moments on earth smiling, instead of being slapped into a scream.

And because of it, they may grow up to be different from the rest of us.

That, at least, is the claim of Dr. Frederick Leboyer, a 57-year-old French obstetrician and author of the international best seller, Birth Without Violence. It is his dramatic—and controversial—new method of child delivery which has captured the imagination of many Americans.

"The Leboyer method is really terrific," says Mrs. Carol Case of Carson City, Nev., one of a growing number of women who have had Leboyer-style deliveries. "It's very natural and peaceful—a very rewarding thing to go through. And it's especially nice for the baby."

"Leboyer," says Dr. DeWitt Baldwin in nearby Reno, "believes that birth should be as gentle a process as possible. I happen to support that."

Essentially, Leboyer's method is designed to ease the baby's transition into the new world.

"Yes, hell exists . . ." he states in characteristic poetic style in Birth Without Violence. "This hell is not at the end of life. It is here. At the beginning."

After delivering more than 9000 babies in the conventional manner, Leboyer says he found himself less and less able to accept either as normal or inevitable the cries and screams and generally pained and even tormented expressions of the newborn infant. Why, he began asking himself, must the new human being, emerging from the darkness and silence of the womb, be brought out in a blaze of blinding lights and loud voices?

Other questions followed: Why must we insist on making the infant's first breath traumatic when nature has supplied the means for a far gentler initiation into life? Why, when the spine is curved in the fetal position, do we hold the newcomer upside down and jerk its back straight? Why is the baby—"after the terrifying ordeal of being separated from the womb"—then immediately separated from the mother? In short, why do we treat the infant not as a human being—but as an object?

We do it, Leboyer says, not out of a sense of cruelty, but because we never really thought about the infant, never recognized that the infant is a person.

"It took me years to see this simple truth," the veteran obstetrician told PARADE during a recent visit to the United States. "The newborn is a sensitive, feeling human being, and in the first few moments after birth, he should be treated that way. We must introduce a baby to the world gradually."

The method

So, about four years ago, Leboyer developed his method—involving the following basic steps:

- The ordinarily intense, bright lighting of the delivery room is considerably dimmed—and no one speaks above a whisper.
- The infant, as soon as it is out, is placed stomach down on its mother's warm abdomen to retain the pre-birth curved position of the spine.
- Waiting up to six minutes before the umbilical cord is cut, doctor and mother gently massage the baby.
- After the cord is cut, the baby is bathed in water similar in temperature

'These babies are so different...'

to its familiar environment inside the mother.

"A lot of tender loving care—and some plain old common sense—that's what Leboyer is all about," says Dr. David Kliot of the Brookdale Hospital Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y.

But not everyone agrees. Reaction from the U.S. medical community to Leboyer—and, in turn, to his "disciples"—has ranged all the way from mild interest to amusement to, in some cases, open hostility. At best, say some critics, Leboyer's techniques are unnecessary; at worst, they are downright dangerous.

Many doctors, for instance, object to the darkened delivery room, arguing that a well-lit environment is essential to check the color of the baby and to make sure that he's not sluggish. They contend too, that babies are held upside down to make sure fluids aren't clogging their breathing tracts. As one physician put it: "Perhaps none of these things are very nice to look at—or even maybe to experience—but safety and precaution must take precedence over both appearance and psychology."

'They ridicule me'

Leboyer's response is pointed. "They ridicule me," he says of his skeptical colleagues, "by misrepresenting my method and pushing it to extremes. But there should be no misunderstanding about what I'm saying. Whenever there is reason to believe that breathing is not all right, or there is difficulty in oxygenation, I say, 'Go ahead! Turn up the lights and do whatever you want—use suction, give oxygen.' I am not denying the progress of obstetrics. I am only saying that birth is a physical and an emotional affair—and you cannot deny this second aspect.

"You know, I get more questions about the business of the slap than anything else. Somehow, people have a feeling that you must initiate breathing in the child. It is because they are so conditioned by their cars, which they turn on with a key. But the baby is not a machine. The moment the head of the child is out the breathing is there. You can see it yourself in a film I've made. So there is no necessity to do anything —at least not with the vast majority of normal, healthy babies. But modern man feels he must help nature—that nature is waiting for him to help it. It is sheer arrogance."

Born to cry

"In modern obstetrics," Dr. Kliot explains, "we've come to feel that a baby born crying is a healthy baby—and, so, we tend to feel that we must stimulate him to cry."

Before retiring nearly two years ago, Leboyer had delivered over 1000 babies with his new method. He still performs a delivery now and then; but, he points out, the important fact to note is that other physicians are picking up where he left off. In New York, Nevada, Illinois, California, Florida and other states, Leboyer-style deliveries have taken place—perhaps as many as 400 in all—a small, but nevertheless, significant number, given the resistance and opposition of many conservative hospital administrators.

Because of this opposition, most of the physicians performing Leboyer-style deliveries have, until now, been reluctant to discuss them openly.

"There's another factor, too," says Dr. Kliot, who has performed over 50 Leboyer-style deliveries. "You must understand that the wrong kind of publicity —sensationalist publicity — could set this concept back 10 years—or even kill it altogether."

Adds his partner in the deliveries, Dr. Max Lilling, who directs a special high-risk newborn unit at Brookdale Hospital: "We were brought a technique by our patients. What Dr. Leboyer had to say appealed to them, and they wanted very much to give it a try. And though we were somewhat skeptical at first, we went along with their desire; and I have to say I've been impressed with what I've seen so far."

"It was fantastic," says Joyce Merendino of Brooklyn. "When Dr. Kliot put my baby on my stomach I stroked her back and she picked up her head and looked around. She's a very alert baby."

"Before," says another mother, whose first child was delivered in the traditional manner, "it seemed I heard my little girl crying all night. This time, my little boy was quiet as can be."

"I've been absolutely amazed by the results," says Dr. Henry Davis, a family practitioner who delivers babies at the Carson Tahoe Hospital in Carson City. "I've delivered at least 35 babies with the Leboyer method in the last five months—and I just can't say enough about it. These babies are so different from the others, so graceful in their movements. They seem to be reaching out instead of protecting themselves.

"My wife and I recently had our 10th child with the Leboyer method—a colleague of mine did the delivery. All I can say is that our son Michael seems to believe that everybody in the world loves him. He's so calm . . . he didn't even cry when he had to have an injection—only four hours after birth! I'm convinced that the Leboyer method results in a better child."

Whether or not that's true is, of course, the critical question. Leboyer believes that the way an infant is treated during roughly the first 10 minutes after birth sets the pattern for the rest of his life.

"As adults," he said in slightly accented but flawless English, "we are constantly re-experiencing what we have experienced as a baby. The infant whose birth is violent, frustrating and difficult will not have an easy life."

The scientific approach

However, his message is not so easily accepted by the scientific community. Says Dr. Lilling: "There is nothing we can really comment on in an accurate, scientific manner; and until we can—until there is some solid research to back up what we think we know and understand the medical establishment will probably not be persuaded."

But what of the 1000-or-so children Leboyer has delivered in his native France—who now range in age from 8 months to 4 years—might not they provide us with the answer? One hundred and four of the children are being studied at the Sorbonne in Paris; and while the child psychologists in charge of the study are unwilling to share their findings with the public before publication of an official report sometime within the next two years, this much has already leaked out: Leboyer children are noticeably different—in their overall attitude and behavior, and, more specifically, their unusually avid interest in the world around them.

Growing interest

Meanwhile, the interest in Leboyer—despite official caution and even opposition—continues to grow: "We've been inundated with phone calls ever since Birth Without Violence first appeared," says publicist Maria Temechko of Alfred A. Knopf Inc., Leboyer's publisher. "Most of the calls have been from pregnant women—some quite frantic—demanding that we put them in touch with an obstetrician who will agree to a Leboyer delivery."

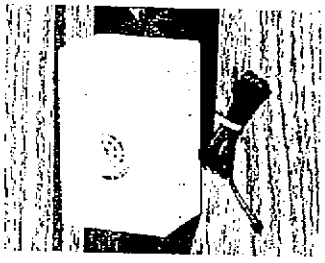

"I've had calls from around the country," says Dr. Davis, "from women willing to fly out here to Nevada so they could have a Leboyer delivery. But I couldn't permit that kind of thing because it would be ethically questionable and obviously hazardous from a medical point of view . . . It's a shame more doctors aren't doing Leboyer deliveries, though, because I know that if they ever tried it—just once—they'd never go back to the old way."

"Our son believes everybody loves him," says Dr. Henry Davis, a Carson City, Nev., family practitioner, of his 10th child, Michael—a Leboyer baby. Dr. Davis has performed about 35 Leboyer deliveries since the spring.

Crockery Cooking

There's a new kind of cooking catching on around the land—or rather, it's an old kind of cooking made new again. Called "Crockery Cooking" or "Slow Pot Cooking," it goes from soup to dessert, adding variety and nourishment to your family menu—and saving you lots of money at the same time.

This method of preparing food is described in succulent detail by Jacqueline Hériteau in a book called Clear and Simple Crockery Cooking, which is being made available to PARADE readers at the bargain price of $1.50 plus 25 cents postage and handling. You'll find in it not only an easy-to-follow description of crockery cooking, but page after page of simple-to-prepare recipes for every course of a meal.

Slow-pot cooking enables you to widen your culinary style tremendously. Because it works without constant supervision or attention, it can cut in half the amount of time you spend in the kitchen.

A modern electric crockery cooker is the closest thing in existence to the old-fashioned Dutch oven—that time-honored device that has never been beaten for sheer excellence of the dishes it produces. Crockery cooking can give you perfect pot roasts, great casseroles, rich and nourishing stews, fine breakfast cereal dishes, a tempting array of desserts, and even some unusual homemade breads.

It can also cut down substantially on the costs of feeding a family, because it makes use of low heat and because it works so well with thrift cuts of meat and even leftovers. The secret is the slow and thorough cooking that goes on even when you're not around. It's the way your grandmother used to cook—but with all the ease and economy of modern methods.

Clear and Simple Crockery Cooking can change your whole approach to the culinary art. At its bargain price, it's an investment that will pay off many times in less work for you and better living for your family.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "Clear and Simple Crockery Cooking" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. GG, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery.

The Rose Bowl Court: Many beauty contests have included scholarships, some donated by universities, among their prizes. Now, federal anti-discrimination rules bar colleges from giving tuition aid to participants in competitions limited to one sex. However, two Republican Congressmen from Alabama have introduced an amendment that would again allow colleges to give such scholarships.

Are Collegiate Beauty Contests Doomed?

by Charles Peterson

Coeds at North Texas State U. where beauty contest winners, including two recent Misses America, abound. With colleges no longer offering scholarships based on such contests, lack of money may shut many young women off from going to college.

Approximately $10 million in scholarships are awarded to beauty contest winners every year. Many of these beauty contests are university-sponsored or related.

According to Title 9 of the Educational Amendments Act of 1972, the specifics of which became law only last summer, any federally funded university, college, or junior college which gives scholarships at functions which limit participation to one sex is in violation of the law. Such is the case with many beauty contests.

Two Republican Congressmen from Alabama, John Buchanan and Jack Edwards, are up in arms over Title 9. They've introduced amendment HR9308, which would permit any college to give scholarships to beauty contest winners.

At present, women who enter university-sponsored beauty contests in which only females participate are legally prevented from cashing in on their scholarships.

What kind of women will enter collegiate-sponsored beauty contests if scholarships or tuition credit is not available?

"If scholarships aren't offered, only those women who want to break into dance or movies will enter these university beauty contests," predicts Jean Stein, America's 1962 Junior Miss winner. "I think these contests will become talent shows. You know, kind of like Ted Mack's Amateur Hour."

To date the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has not prevented any collegiate beauty queen from using her scholarship funds.

However, Title 9 has prevented universities from giving scholarships to participants in beauty contests like the Miss America Pageant. For instance, Janice Walker of the Birmingham News, who runs the Miss Alabama contest, says that about 80 per cent of the $150,000 worth of scholarships that were once available to contestants in that state has now dried up.

Abides by the law

The University of Alabama ended its scholarship support as soon as the law was passed, says university official Cathy Randall, adding that even the winner of the Miss University of Alabama title receives no tuition help.

Similarly, universities may not now offer scholarships to twirlers and majorettes.

And the government appears to be sticking by its guns. "If any federally assisted university sponsors or is associated with the promotion of a beauty contest and we believe there was discrimination against any participant, we'll take action," explains Dale Pullen of HEW's Civil Rights Division. "The question is to what extent the university in question was involved in a beauty contest."

When was the last time you attended a beauty contest for both sexes on your local college campus?

by MAX MORATH

EDITOR'S NOTE: Max Morath has been called "the man who almost single-handedly kept ragtime alive during the dark years," and his new one-man show, The Ragtime Years, has been a hit across the country. Aside from the piano music, Morath's show consists of turn-of-the-century vaudeville humor.

Comparing the ragtime era and ours, Morath says, "People in those days needed a mate for the same reason we do today. We know that sooner or later something will happen we can't blame on the government."

Morath's newest Vanguard album, "Ragtime," has just been released. His current LP's are: "The Best of Scott Joplin," "The World of Scott Joplin," and "Irving Berlin—The Ragtime Years."

From Dec. 18 to Jan. 18 Morath will bring his ragtime and humor to the New Sombrero Playhouse in Phoenix, Ariz.

Here are samples of that humor:

How about the gent who went into a restaurant, ordered extract of beef, and was served a glass of milk.

Did you hear about the hen that ate a box of tacks and the next morning laid a carpet?

First Man: I was out to see your brother at the insane asylum the other day.

Second Man: What'd he say?

First Man: He's crazy to see you.

Joe: Remember my uncle who was kicked by a horse last week?

Moe: Yes.

Joe: Well, he's out of danger.

Moe: That's good.

Joe: He died this morning.

Fortune-teller (reading palm): Your lifeline indicates you're going to die of starvation among strangers.

Man: Shipwreck?

Fortune-teller: No, boarding house.

Pullman Porter: Shall I brush you off, sir?

Traveler: No thanks. I'll wait until the train stops and get off myself.

"Our nest egg just changed into a goose egg."

Man: I just got a job in the tube works up in the Bronx.

Friend: Oh yeah, I've heard of the Bronchial tubes.

Young man: I want to know how long girls should be courted.

Man-of-the-world: The same as short ones.

First Man: How would you classify a telephone girl? Is that a profession or a business?

Second Man: Neither. It's a calling.

Cook: How'd you like the chicken? Wasn't that a good chicken?

Diner: It may have been a good chicken morally, but physically it was a wreck.

I recently went for a visit to New York City. After I got on the train, the conductor came along and said, "You'll have to take that grip off that seat." I said, "I will not," and he said, "If you don't take that grip off that seat, I'll throw it out the window." I wasn't afraid—much. And by gosh if he didn't throw the grip out the window. Then he said to me, "I told you I'd do it." And I said to him, "That's all right. It didn't belong to me."

During the ragtime years most people still got around in the horse and buggy—the automobile was considered a plaything of the rich. History plays funny tricks. Today everybody's got an automobile, and when you get rich you move out in the country and buy a horse.

The turn of the 20th century began a new era, when nothing would any longer be impossible except people.

People think women foisted Prohibition on the men. Not true. Women couldn't vote. Men went to the polls, did away with demon rum, and then to celebrate, they all went out and got drunk.
